never seen any more water at once than the Mississippi at flood, should get excited over the methods and intricacies of the psychology of foreign trade. They are interested in it as far as they are able to comprehend that there is money in it for them, but there is need of much education to bring them up to this point, not for lack of general intelligence, but because there are other issues nearer, more insistent and more comprehensible. Whenever they learn that a large merchant marine means more prosperity for them, they will be ready to endorse the scheme; but until that matter is pressed upon their attention the most of them will regard the question about as most of us did taking a hand in the war—the point of contact with the problem in too remote to take their minds away from the price of wheat at Kansas City or the price of cotton at New Orleans.

As a matter of national pride, every American citizen would like to see the Stars and Stripes evident at every port in the world. He would like to have the trade with distant countries and sell his products to a vastly enlarged clientele. He would like for us to be able to send our goods in sellable shape to the ports of the world where now we are at a disadvantage for lack of adequate transportation. He would like to see it more profitable for the farmer of the Mississippi valley to raise larger crops and for the American workman to have more profitable and steady employment, and that the number of consumers of farm and factory products would be increased at home and abroad, but what he needs is missionary to press upon him the fact that all these results will be helped by the development of a bigger merchant marine. It is not opposition, but indifference, that must be overcome.

Speaking of the possible contamination of Spavinaw water by lead and lead mines, said an old-timer yesterday, I understand that all the lead surrounding the Shell creek basin is leased for oil, and it is not probable that an oil field will be developed in the drainage area of that section. Of course, he says, the people who fear contamination of Spavinaw water will contend that oil will improve the Shell creek water and in a sense it will. A liberal mixture of oil will no doubt make the Shell creek snake-soup more palatable.

On the first of May 700,000 allowance checks to soldiers' dependents, involving about $13,000,000, were held up for want of funds. Since that date 600,000 checks, amounting to $11,500,000, have been withheld for the same reason. Meanwhile about 25,000 civil war pensioners have been denied an overdue $3,000,000 on account of the same neglect. A condition like this is intolerable. It has affected nearly 1,500,000 fighting men and their dependents—the wards of the nation who are a first charge upon the nation's sense of gratitude, justice and fair play. Even after the necessary appropriation bill has passed congress, the funds are not available until this bill can go to France and receive the presidential signature.

A condition of this sort must never occur again. It is an invitation to legitimate resentments which, if perpetuated, would not only rob victory of much of its sweetness, but which might easily turn love to gall in thousands upon thousands of devoted souls who have laid their all upon the altar of their country. It would create a smoldering distrust that would rise up in some future emergency to confound us. It would be an encouragement to the pessimism that breeds bolshevism. We are not yet relieved of the obligation to preserve the national good faith which is founded on American honor and responsibility.

It has been suggested that possibly Mr. McAdoo might find a job for Burleson in the movies. We might warn Mr. Burleson, however, that he need not count on it, for McAdoo, being wise enough to get out and from under of the psychological moment, is not going to put anybody into the movies who will hang on to a job long enough to mix things up as the postmaster general has done.

OKLAHOMA OUTBURSTS

It is understood that the human spider does not intend that he is an educational institution.

One reason why the peace treaty was reconstrued, suggests Bill Dingley, was to stop the leak.

The organization of Owen-for-president clubs is not interfering with the wheat harvest to any great extent in Oklahoma.

The girl on South Main says another reason why she hesitates to marry is that friends have told her that she talks in her sleep.

The street car rebellion in Muskogee has reached the stage where several of the prominent actors are receiving anonymous warnings that sudden death is hanging over them.

This is the way the Coffeyville Journal welcomed the doughboys: "Soldier, soldier, back from France, get your fill and flirt and dance. When the crowds begin to thicken, drop your gun and grab a chicken."

An Okmulgee girl who is thinking about entering the aviation service, wants to know what kind of a costume she will have to wear when she loops the loop. The new style skirt will do nicely.

There are those who are fearful that the Spavinaw may go dry. But don't they know that when it gets dry enough to stop the Spavinaw stream from running, that Shell creek will also be a gutter with no auxiliary source of supply except the Arkansas river, while the Spavinaw project provides for turning Grand river into the conduit?

Take Brady says he is willing to stake his reputation as a prophet and his hope of completing his palatial residence on the north side, that the Spavinaw bond proposition will be drowned in Shell creek water on election day. We are willing to concede that Date is some prognosticator, and history credits him with having guessed right on three or four occasions.

Judge Undecided Over Punishment for Man Who Neglects Family

Bert Brown, found guilty of failing to support his wife and children at the trial before Justice S. C. Maxey Friday, languishes in the county jail because the court is undecided as to what course to take in the matter.

It appeared to the satisfaction of the justice that Brown had contributed little to support of his wife and children, but the court stated that a fine assessed against the prisoner would only deprive the wife and children of what little money Brown might give them. The case was taken under advisement.

DRILLING COMPANY SUES FOR MONEY DUE ON ACCOUNT

Asking judgment for $7,553 suit was filed in district court Friday by the Joe Burns Drilling Company and the National Union Fire Insurance company against the Midco Petroleum company, the plaintiffs declaring the defendant is indebted to the drilling company and the insurance company because of the destruction of a drill rig and other apparatus by fire.

The drill and tools, placed on a lease on the Jones farm in Kay county were destroyed by fire on August 15, 1917, through the alleged negligence of the defendant company in failing to maintain in proper repair a number of wooden oil tanks. The oil seeping from the defective tanks caught fire by some source unknown to the plaintiff, destroying the rig and tools.

A similar suit, asking damages of $2,500 was filed against the Midco company by the Duluth and Oklahoma oil companies and the fire insurance company, the plaintiffs in their petition stating that a drill rig and string of tools on the property, owned by the oil company, was also destroyed by fire which occasioned the other suit.

WILL ATTEMPT TO SETTLE THE BLACKSMITHS' STRIKE

At least 15 blacksmiths and their helpers, employed at the various shops of the city, walked out Friday, according to an announcement of W. J. Squires, local head of the federal-state employment service.

It is said that the blacksmiths are asking for an eight-hour day, recognition of their union and a wage increase. Some of the firms affected, it is said, are attempting to import strike breakers from Kansas City.

Claude Connally, state director of the federal-state service, is to meet with a committee of the men at 9 o'clock Friday at the city hall. The commissioner finds the strikers in the current mood he will attempt to call a meeting of the men and their employers for the purpose of effecting conciliation.

REPUBLICANS WILL MEET TO FORM CLUB IN TULSA

The committee appointed to investigate the feasibility of organizing a permanent republican club in Tulsa has had several meetings with many persons interested in the project.

The next meeting, a public one, will be held in rooms 210 and 211 of the Drew building on Wednesday night, June 25, at 8:30. Bird S. McGuire, former member of congress, will give an address and Mrs. C. E. Lahman will deliver a short talk on "Women's Rights."

ODEY PERRY MUST SERVE HIS TERM AT M'ALESTER

A commitment was issued by the court clerk Friday, ordering the return of Odey Perry, found guilty of the larceny of an automobile and sentenced to serve five years in the state penitentiary for the remainder of his term.

Perry was released on bond of $1,000 pending an appeal of his case in the Oklahoma criminal court of appeals, but it appearing to Judge Edmund S. Cole of district court that the time allowed in which to perfect the appeal has elapsed, Perry, who is now in custody of the local sheriff's office, was ordered returned to McAlester.

BOY SAYS HE STOLE PIE BECAUSE HE WAS HUNGRY

The admissions of J. E. Gates made before a jury in district court Friday during his trial on a charge of larceny, gained sympathy of that body sufficiently for the return of a verdict of guilty, with the penalty of 30 days in the county jail without a fine.

Gates, a young negro, when placed on the witness stand, denied breaking into the store of J. F. Hill, 118 West Second street on the night of February 5, stating that he found an open window and being hungry and knowing the room was used as storage space for food by J. F. Hill, proprietor of a restaurant, he entered the room and ate half a pie and some other edibles.

There was testimony to show that the window in the room had been closed after the jury after hearing the admission of the defendant that he had had nothing to eat for two days before the theft, fixed the punishment at 30 days in jail.

COURT REFUSES TO GRANT HABEAS CORPUS TO LYONS

Horoscope

The stars incline, but do not compel. Saturday, June 21, 1919.

This is read as an important day for the natives of Oklahoma to astrologers, the Sun is strongly adverse, while Neptune rules kindly.

The stars seem to foreshadow a pronounced period of stress for men and women in positions of authority. They will be subjected to harsh criticism and oftentimes to unjust judgment.

The Sun is in an aspect detrimental to the interests of all persons who rule whether in government or in business.

There is a sign-making for an access of curiosity concerning public affairs. A tendency to uncover whatever is hidden will cause many investigations.

Congress continues under a rule of the planets that will encourage bitter discussions, party dissensions and sensational events.

Friday should be fortunate for all whose present occupations demand forwardness, for Neptune is in place that is said to increase intuition and impart unusual vision.

Immortality will appear to increase during the summer months and reformations of authority, or serious import to the life of the nation.

Strange vices may be introduced into the United States, owing to the sinister power of a malign planet, the seers declare.

Women are now approaching a crisis in social and domestic relations, owing to changes brought about by the war, astrologers assert. They should unite to establish high standards of conduct for the future.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have anxiety in business matters during the coming year. They should take care of the health.

Children born on this day are likely to be proud and self-centered. These subjects of Cancer should be carefully guided.

NEGRO WHO DISOBEYED COURT ORDER IS FINED

Upon the finding of the jury holding the defendant guilty of contempt of court, W. H. Smith, a negro, was fined $100 by Judge I. J. Martin in superior court Friday afternoon.

Smith was charged with violating a restraining order preventing the defendant from erecting a building on North Greenwood avenue. The order was granted at the request of William Martin, who showed to the court that the light and ventilation of Martin's two-story building, on an adjoining lot, would be materially affected by the contemplated construction.

Testimony was introduced to show that Smith, in violation of the order, continued to construct the building along the original lines, and the jury, after considering the case for a short time, returned a verdict of guilty.

BUILDING ORGANIZATION FOR ARMENIAN CAMPAIGN

Final plans are under way for the organization of the Armenian and Greek relief committee, which was organized by Grabian Renfro, well known insurance man of the city, has been appointed local manager by County Chairman J. W. Able, and team captain to assist in the drive for the $2,000,000 quota will be announced here.

Boy scouts, under the direction of scoutmaster John Lindy, posted their names for the Armenian relief fund. A meeting of all workers is planned for Wednesday noon in the basement of the First Methodist church at 23rd and Boulevard, where headquarters will be established and the first report on progress made will be heard at the luncheon hour Thursday.

Industries That Would Locate Here Inquire "How Is Your Water?"

"As a matter of Tulsa, I receive an average of 20 letters every day from heads of big business concerns in every state in the Union, who have heard of Tulsa and are contemplating putting in factories and commercial plants here. In every one of them is the question: 'How is your water supply?' Have you rehabilitated your water supply? We have to tell them the truth, for Tulsa is not a city of water, but those letters give out an idea of Tulsa's possibilities when we do get an adequate supply of good soft water."

With Apologies to Mr. Daniel

In publishing the statement of the assessed valuation of the Daniel building at $7,000 the reporter of The World was in error in saying this was the ten-story Daniel building. It was the Daniel building at the corner of Third and Main streets, instead of Third and Boston.

The reporter did not know there were two buildings known as "Daniel building." But so far as taxes are concerned and revenues are calculated even at an assessed valuation of $7,000 for the Daniel building at the corner of Main and Third streets his annual rental each year on this property is probably in excess of its assessed valuation, which makes his assessment look like a mere bagatelle, compared with what other property owners have been paying. And yet with all this big income property, made so by the growth of the city of Tulsa, Mr. Daniel is leading the fight against getting good water for the men, women and children who have helped to make this property valuable, and indirectly have paid his taxes, in addition to a handsome income, which he can spend at Palm Beach, Los Angeles and other seaside resorts while they stay here and sweeter in the heat and pay tribute to Tulsa's case in order to quench their burning thirst. Are the real town builders and boosters going to be led off by tax dodgers and revenue grabbers like that?

There Will Be a Wedding at the City Jail Today or Man Will Face a Mann Act Charge

Eda Waters, with tears in her eyes, sobbing choking back her words told her story in the police-court yesterday, a story that will either put it A. Edgerley, 34, on trial under the Mann white slave act or release him from jail today as Eda's husband.

Edgerley and Eda Waters were arrested at a local hotel early this morning on a charge of lewd conduct. When Edgerley, a discharged soldier with two overseas service stripes on his sleeve, took the stand it developed that he had taken the girl from Wichita, Kan., where he met her last January in Kansas City, back to Wichita, then to Oklahoma City and finally to Tulsa, living with her for nearly six months.

He stated, with his face twitching nervously and with numerous protestations of his love for the girl, that he had always intended to marry her but that his money gave out when the time came to procure a license. He testified that the girl was nearly 15 years of age. They had been traveling together each paying his or her own expenses by making head jewelry which they sold on the streets of the cities they visited. The girl's relatives were led to believe that the couple had married before they left Wichita the first time.

Edna, in appearance hardly more than a child, took the stand with her face red and swollen from a day spent in crying. She corroborated all of Edgerley's statements but said that he had paid her expenses, the two living on a partnership basis from the proceeds of their sales.

She loved him, she said, and he had led her astray by promises of marriage. She wanted to marry him and bring her child into the world with a father.

Judge Koppin took the case under advisement and will render his decision today in accordance with the behavior of Edgerley. Either there will be a quiet wedding at the police station this morning, or Edgerley will go free together, or Edgerley will be bound over to the grand jury on trial for violating the Mann white slave act.
