As the heaven is high above the earth, so great is his mercy towards them that fear him. Psalms 103:11

High as the heavens are raised, Above the ground we tread, So far the riches of his grace, Our highest thoughts exceed.

Show us thy mercy, O Lord, and grant us thy salvation. Psalms 15:7.

SIGNIFICANT ELECTION RESULTS.

The elections of Tuesday show an unmistakable drift from democracy as exemplified by the Wilson administration.

In the first named state Governor Coolidge, republican, who was standing for re-election, had just come through a very trying situation.

He had challenged the forces of organized labor in the Boston policeman's strike, and without mincing words had exerted the full authority of the state to suppress a reign of radicalism.

His opponent on the democratic ticket seized on the incident and made it an issue in the campaign by championing as far as he dared the cause of organized labor.

Coolidge did not budge one jot or tittle, but took for his slogan "law and order at any cost."

On this issue the campaign was fought. The labor unions made great boasts of what they were going to do to Coolidge, and the whole nation was an anxious spectator of this first open clash in the political arena between an individual who dared to challenge organized labor and the political leaders of that organization.

The result was a veritable landslide for Coolidge. Paced closely by his opponent in Boston, the great city of the state, when he entered the country districts, even those of great industrial populations, Coolidge fairly ran away from the candidate who even casually recognized class in American affairs.

That Coolidge was a republican was a mere accident. Had the issues been reversed we have got the slightest doubt that the democrat would have won even against the manifest prejudice against things democratic, or, to put it a bit more accurately, Wilsonesque.

The point on which party lines can be broken in a general rejoicing is that the radical, law-defying element in even the great industrial states of Massachusetts has been proven to be comparatively insignificant minority.

As usual the noise was out of all proportion to the strength. And that the radicals in the unions are themselves in a hopeless minority is evidenced by the vote in the greatest industrial centers of the state, "100 per cent unbroken" according to the labor leaders, where Coolidge swept things almost clean.

In Kentucky, the second named state, the issue was clearly drawn on national issues. Black, the democrat, enunciated a platform very much the same as that announced by Scott Ferris who is contesting the senate seat with Senator Gore—questioning adherence to everything suggested by Woodrow Wilson and the league as it stands.

Kentucky, with a very few exceptions, has always gone democratic. It has been in a general way lined up with the Solid South. But notwithstanding the fact that the national administration and the democratic national committee rendered all possible assistance in the campaign just closed, the democrat was defeated by approximately 25,000, the largest majority ever registered against the party in the history of the commonwealth.

In New Jersey, the democratic candidate who pledged himself to go as far as the law would permit in making "New Jersey as wet as the Atlantic ocean," won by a greatly reduced plurality. New Jersey folk don't take kindly to the prohibition law. In Maryland, the democratic candidate appears to have won on what the press associations declare were local issues by a very narrow margin.

In New York, Illinois, Ohio and other states where no particular issues were involved touching national affairs, the vote in each case showed a drift away from Wilsonism. But it is Kentucky and Massachusetts that rendered decisions that will visibly affect the campaign of next year.

Coolidge has set an example. He may or may not have ambition. But he will be consulted in the formulation of next year's platform and campaign. And Kentucky has consistently proclaimed itself concerning the great issue of prohibitionism.

If hesitating senators in Washington cannot take their cue from Tuesday's election then they are blind indeed.

Illinois democrats now know how the republicans of Oklahoma felt in the constitutional convention. The voters of Illinois Tuesday elected 31 republicans and 21 democrats to write a new constitution for that state.

MIL MARSHALL PROTESTS.

W. A. Marshall, president of the wholesale coal association, lodges a protest against the proposal that a fixed price be put on coal during the strike. As a general proposition there is little sympathy with the more or less prevalent government disposition to set at naught the law of supply and demand.

There is that word "war" again. The other day an official of the miners' organization used the word "mastery" in following the same line of thought. What Mr. Marshall seems to be asking is the right for the operators to inflict an injustice on the consuming public in order that he and his associates may continue to wage a war with another faction of society.

It is about time that Marshall and associates, as well as the miners, come to understand that neither one or the other is going to be permitted to do any such thing. War is precisely what the operators cannot indulge in. The government is not interfering in the dispute for the advantage of either the operators or the miners.

THE ENDLESS CHAIN.

Already industrial plants are beginning to close down for lack of coal. Thus many laborers are being thrown out of employment at a season of the year when they need their full wage.

There may be some sense in one faction of labor thus pulling down the pillars of the temple about the ears of their fellows, but we are frank to confess our inability to see it.

Generals Crowder and March are disputing as to who asked the death penalty for some soldiers who fell asleep on their post in France.

At any rate, those Mexican bandits were polite enough to accept Consul Jenkins' personal note.

The government has sent out a warning that a band of Mexican rebels are close to the international line.

A Kansas editor thinks he has discovered a possible explanation for the presidential veto of the prohibition law.

The republicans claim they will win in the fifth district next Saturday, and the democrats, while denying such a possibility, are acting as if they were afraid it might be so.

Are the pipe people profiteering?—News headline. If they are not, then they are the only people who are not.

OKLAHOMA OUTBURSTS BY OTIS LORTON

If you have been keeping up with the Washington dispatches, you have probably noticed that it is the democrats in the senate who are delaying the vote on the treaty.

An End couple, who expect to get round and round, anyway, got married the other day on a Ferris wheel.

Most public officials have been resigning to attach themselves to some angle of the oil game.

It was a fine thing for the official county papers that the paper shortage did not become so acute until after they had published the delinquent tax lists.

The Str and Swat club says it has always been opposed to the "work or fight" order, and is consistent none of its members propose to rally to the call of the governor for volunteers to dig coal.

So far as the Red Cross is concerned the league of nations will never end the war.

It is understood that Frank Wikoff will not be included in the new list of delegates selected to convene the federal reserve board that the branch bank should be located in Oklahoma City.

Sign shots from the Dallas News: The reason why every married woman ought to laugh at her husband's ideas is because she doesn't probably nobody will. Especially we may have done some things we do not care to advertise, but no man can truthfully say we ever ran after a prince.

MY HUSBAND AND I

MABEL HORTON'S GIFT. CHAPTER CLXXXIII.

"The idea of her daring to bring him flowers!" I thought indignantly, as I murmured some sort of a reply.

"I know he's a fond of tea roses," she said, so I chose them. "Tell him from me that he must get well, that all his friends are so anxious."

"I will give him your flowers and your message," I heard myself replying in a voice I scarcely recognized as my own.

A few seconds afterward I heard the front door close and knew that she had left herself out.

All the old bitterness welled up in my heart. All the slight and the sharpness of the past years rose before me.

"They are very pretty," Clifford said, scarcely looking at them. "It was kind of her to bring them."

"You cannot pacify hungry men with high-sounding platitudes, or feed under-nourished children with academic philosophy," says Acting President Lewis of the United Mine Workers.

Maybe Senator Williams is right and does not know it. Irishmen (meaning Americans of that blood) have no place in the democratic party.

We have made rapid strides in building up commercial relations with Australia in the past year.

The hinges on a recently patented slip door are so formed as to serve as a range of a ladder to permit a man to climb to open any section of a side.

Such a boy, sed ma. Meaning me, and I quick finished the chapter and went to Sunday school, and when I came back ma sed, "Well, you don't look any the worse for your experience."

And now are you willing to admit that going to Sunday school is good for you? sed ma. Yes mam, I sed. See that, sed ma. See that, sed pop. I found a dime on the way, I sed. If I stayed home I wouldn't of found it.

Yee gods, sed pop. Sutch a boy, sed ma. Meaning me.

Jewish Church Janitor Evidently Changes His Mind About Great Leap

Considering that life even attended with illness and poverty is preferable to death, Charles C. Humble, janitor of the H'nal Emmanah church for whose supposed dead body members of the congregation were searching last night, appeared at the church as usual Wednesday morning to resume his daily duties.

Members of the congregation had notified the police Tuesday night that he was seen staggering from the church and their apprehension was later aroused when they found beside a glass partly filled with formaldehyde a letter addressed to a daughter in H'gals, Mich., notifying her that he was sick and would "end all tonight."

"I didn't ask him, mama. I just told him they were pretty, and he said to take all I wanted. I didn't bother him a bit, but he never talks to me any more, so I came back," and the child's eyes overflowed.

"Mr. Hammond is asking for you," the nurse told me.

"What is it, Clifford?" I asked, gliding by the bed.

"But are you strong enough? Won't it tire you?"

"Very well," I seated myself. "What is it?"

"Are you determined to divorce me, Mildred?" Broke asked me.

"I think so," I finally answered. "Won't you reconsider?" Broke asked me.

"I don't know what you intend to marry him, and that you have been true to me in spite of that fact. But Mildred, he is young; he will get over any disappointment he may feel while I'm gone."

True to his character he scarcely knew how to ask a favor of one of whom he had always demanded obedience.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTEBOOK

I was up to one of the most lovable parts of Frank Peernight in his airplane last Sunday and ma sed, Benny, how about Sunday school?

Aw G, ma, I sed. Meaning I didn't want to go, and pop sed, Benny, didn't you hear your mother tell you to go to Sunday school?

Nor sir, she just asked me how about it, I sed, and ma sed. The reason I put it that way, Benny, was because I want you to realize that when you go to Sunday school it is only for your own good.

Well, can't stay home and finish this book today and try to get twice as much good out of Sunday school next Sunday? I sed.

You can't, sed pop, sed ma. Sutch a boy, sed ma. Meaning me, and I quick finished the chapter and went to Sunday school, and when I came back ma sed, "Well, you don't look any the worse for your experience."

And now are you willing to admit that going to Sunday school is good for you? sed ma. Yes mam, I sed. See that, sed ma. See that, sed pop. I found a dime on the way, I sed. If I stayed home I wouldn't of found it.

Henry Clay

Thought more of a Shave than a Vote

THE unswerving self-respect that made Henry Clay say he would rather be right than be President, was reflected in his insistence on a cleanly shaven face.

In one hard fought campaign when political differences were making life-long enemies, Clay's barber, Jerry Murphy would not withdraw his patronage, rightly deeming a shave under Jerry's well-balanced blade worth something more than a vote.

DURHAM-DUPLEX

A Real Razor—made Safe

All the unobtainable virtues of the old-time razor—the perfect balance that makes it seem part of your own hand, the long blade, the right shaving angle on the cheek—but also a blade that can't cut your face—a two-edged blade that actually doubles your shaving mileage—a detachable blade that gives you the luxury of a fresh edge at a moment's notice—the longest, strongest, keenest, best-tempered blade on earth—a blade that you can strop and hone and so conserve steel.

Seven million shavers every morning use this real razor made safe. See your dealer. Make your change to the Durham-Duplex today.
