STOP TRADING IN STUTZ STOCK in Effort to Corner Market

NEW YORK, March 31.—Further dealings in Stutz motor shares, one of the recent features of the stock exchange, were temporarily suspended by special act of governors of the exchange after the close of today's session. This applies not only to trading on the floor of the exchange, but also to private transactions between members outside of the exchange. Officials of the stock exchange declined to explain or in any way amplify the action of the governors. This applies to the bar announcement that further trading would be suspended. It has been the most conspicuous stock of the last few weeks, rising from 12 1/2 to 35 1/2 at the close of today's trading. The advance has been steady at daily gains of 10 to 20 points. Approximately 110,000 shares have changed hands since the entire issue. This is not unusual in itself, as many active stocks are turned over several times in excess of the total issue during an active period, running into several weeks or more. Stutz is said to be controlled by Allan A. Ryan, head of the banking house of A. A. Ryan & Co. Mr. Ryan is president of the company and active in its management. No statement was obtainable from the Ryan interests other than that they knew nothing of any attempt to "corner the stock," which they said had been available for buying or selling purposes throughout its advance. Stock exchange gossip has associated the sensational rise of Stutz with reports that a prominent steel man went to the shores of the stock room 500 points under today's record quotation, and that he was being "squeezed" by those in control of the property. There were other rumors that Stutz and several motor specialties dominated by Ryan and his friends were to be taken into a huge combination of motor interests in process of organization by one of the leading automobile companies of the country.

CLEAN TOWN MEN TO WIN ELECTION

BETTER ELEMENT WILL RID CITY OF CRIME AND VICE AT POLL. WOMEN TO USE POWER See Moral Side of Campaign to Purge City Hall of Hubbard Crowd. "As the date of the election draws near, new and unquestionable indications, which are increasingly evident every day, show the trend of opinion and intent among those who want good, clean city government: the success of the republican ticket is assured," declared E. E. Short, republican campaign manager, last night, after a strenuous day at republican headquarters in room 315, Security State bank building. "Any doubt that might have existed in the minds of republicans has been swept aside by the literal avalanche of sincere promises for both votes and work on election day by the best element of Tulsa's citizen-business men, women, and plain, ordinary citizens. They want the town cleaned up. They want to see it rid of gambling joints, houses of ill fame, and painted women who parade the streets, plying their profession uninvited by the police. They want men in office who are not bossed by any man or set of men; men who will put in some hard work and intelligent thought on the problems that confront Tulsa and which must be met if this city is to be morally clean."
