

WAITER GIRLS DENY DANGERS

No Trouble With Annoyers Unless They Invite Attention

FEW MEN PRESUME

Girl May Be Agreeable With-out Sacrificing Her Character If She Is Disposed

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Does the waitress walk in the way of temptation?

According to Mrs. Frances Donovan, prominent Chicago social worker, it is the most dangerous occupation a woman can enter.

According to five representative waitresses interviewed by the writer, such sweeping statements cannot be made truthfully, and the "temptation" all depends on the "girl who waits" herself.

"Do not raise your daughter to be a waitress," warns Mrs. Donovan, who has come to her startling conclusion after an investigation of waitresses that covers nine months. In order to inform herself accurately concerning this subject Mrs. Donovan says she has been in restaurants, both cheap and expensive, in hotels and grill rooms, in tea shops and in exclusive clubs. All of these eating places, she says, offer a message to the girl who works in them.

In the cheaper restaurants, she says, the patrons expect little visits with the girl who serves them food and who come in at other times than the rush hour.

Mrs. Donovan's Experience.

Mrs. Donovan tells of her first tip received in an exclusive tea room. "There's twenty cents on your plate, dearie," one of the waitresses said to me. I hastened back to pick it up, because I thought I had earned it. Under the dime was the business card of my late investigator, with his name, address and telephone number. I wondered why, but I soon learned the meaning of this and left for the waitress.

"The result is," concludes Mrs. Donovan, "that almost every waitress during her life, that 48 per cent of them are divorced, that 50 per cent of them are married temporarily and that the remaining 10 per cent are single."

Judging from Mrs. Donovan's conclusions to offer unparalleled opportunities to enter matrimony, but let her be secure in wedlock, and upon honest calling from girls who actually wait on table for their livelihoods, the following opinions were gathered.

What Waitresses Say.

"Everything depends on the girl herself," said one trim waitress in a medium-priced restaurant. "I think it is very wrong to say such things about any one class of working people."

"As far as temptation goes, there certainly is much in a factory; but as many opportunities for men to approach girls and annoy them. Or, in a department store, a man can pretend to be buying something and stop to talk to a girl if she catches his eye. I don't believe what that social worker says about waitresses."

In an uptown tea room a sweet-faced, serious-looking girl said: "That is foolish. No man, even if he wants him, will bother a girl if she shows him by her actions that she is not the sort he is looking for. Men respect a girl who behaves herself and will not annoy her more than once."

Charges and Denials.

An investigator of social conditions, Miss Stella Minor, prominent in the New York Probation and Protective association, then asked to give her opinion on the subject.

Miss Minor's Opinions.

"It is difficult to get data on such a matter," began Miss Minor. "It seems a hard thing to say, but restaurants, as a rule, are not good places for young girls."

"Few of the girls who have come under our notice have been waitresses, though. Yet we have occasional complaints."

"I have placed some girls in nurses' homes, in hospitals and in the better class of tea rooms where they will be in high-class surroundings. I know that girls say that men in the cheaper places 'expect' them to be friendly."

In one case a girl told me that when she asked for the job, the manager said in reply to her complaint that the pay was too little that she would have a fine opportunity to 'make a appointment.' She brought the matter to us. It is on such testimony as that that we do not send girls to restaurants."

"Of course they are not like the dance halls from which we receive complaints a month. But, nevertheless, there is this unpleasant situation constantly staring the waitresses in the face. It is in contact with such a phase of life is not good for a girl, nor is it good for her to hear such advances."

On Fifth avenue, where women shop and have lunch, and on the side streets where there are many small restaurants, it is safe and pleasant for young girls, but not dangerous.

The large chain restaurant systems try to keep up a standing of clean and watchfulness for their employees. But they cannot what the patrons may say to a waitress.

Who is Right? Are young waitresses more subject to the advances of ill-intentioned men than any other class of working women?

Or will the ability of young women to make a respect their dignity and to avoid such dangers as may exist in any work that brings them near the public.

Recall Doctor to Army.

Dr. W. K. Chatle of this city has been recalled into the United States Army service as a medical reserve and has gone to Camp Travis in Texas. He is a major in rank.

Soldiers Three Years on the German Rhine

Following letter received here will be sufficient to explain itself.

Coblenz, Germany, Jan. 21, 1921.

Dear Sir: I suppose you will be more than surprised to receive a letter of this kind, but I have been soldiering over here for the past three years and I have only received one letter in that time.

Could you put this in your paper, so I could receive one or two letters once in a while and also a little news. I am yours truly,

PVT. HARRY WILLIAMS AND GLENN A. BAKER

The following letter received here will be sufficient to explain itself.

Coblenz, Germany, Jan. 21, 1921.

Dear Sir: I suppose you will be more than surprised to receive a letter of this kind, but I have been soldiering over here for the past three years and I have only received one letter in that time.

Could you put this in your paper, so I could receive one or two letters once in a while and also a little news. I am yours truly,

PVT. HARRY WILLIAMS AND GLENN A. BAKER

Co. A First Eng. A. P. O. 927 A. P. in G.

P. S.—My buddy would like for you to see if you could not help him out. Write Pvt. Glenn A. Baker, same address as above.

PICKLED PIGGIES DEAD GIVEAWAY

Porkers Eating Prune Mash Put Officers on Trail.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Feb. 12.—The untidy "gals" and hilarious grunts of numerous pigs led to the discovery of a huge still and the seizure of large quantities of "mash" and moonshine paraphernalia in the Star Valley region of Wyoming.

According to a story related by federal prohibition officers here, the moonshiners of Wyoming, it is safe to say, never again will permit their porkers to exercise their natural talents on a supply of "prune mash."

As a walking advertisement of a "blind pig," the real pigs are altogether too successful.

According to the story told by Federal Prohibition Director Larson, it was due to a rancher's plan stuffing themselves that a bootlegging gang was unearthed.

The prohibition director staged a series of raids in several sections of Wyoming, netting thirty-four arrests, he said, but the hog episode was the big feature of the raids.

Two of Larson's deputies hid themselves in some bushes near a ranch seventy-five miles from the nearest railroad. There had been reports of huge quantities of liquor being stored in the ranch house.

After a wait of several hours the deputies saw a dozen or more hogs coming down a road from the ranch house behaving strangely.

Occasionally one would start an inordinate snorting and others would gather around and squeal in chorus.

As the hogs came closer they seemed to have great difficulty in maintaining their footing. When they reached the bank of a stream, the officer declared, one after the other jumped into the water, seemingly trying to offset the effect of their over-indulgence.

The prohibition officers immediately raided the house from whence the trail of the "pickled pigs" led, and discovered a quantity of bonded whisky, as well as many hundreds of gallons of "white mullet" and quantities of mash. In the hog trough they found the remains of a yeast and prune mash that the swine had apparently indulged in.

Among those arrested in the statewide raids, according to Larson, was a former justice of the peace, in Kemmerer. He maintained according to the officer, that he was doing the public a real favor in selling them liquor from his personal "private stock" of bonded whisky, instead of dealing in "bootlegged" products.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

The oldest of the Hanson children is 34 years of age. Thus there were at one time five living generations with less than 72 years separating the youngest from the eldest.

The Hanson children had besides their six grandmothers, nine uncles, four great-uncles, two great-great-uncles, four great-aunts, two great-great-aunts and 40 second cousins, but no firm cognates.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Feb. 12.—A chain of grandmothers without parallel, in this section, at least, has been broken by the passing of Mrs. Eliza Eliza Riles, 82.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

The oldest of the Hanson children is 34 years of age. Thus there were at one time five living generations with less than 72 years separating the youngest from the eldest.

The Hanson children had besides their six grandmothers, nine uncles, four great-uncles, two great-great-uncles, four great-aunts, two great-great-aunts and 40 second cousins, but no firm cognates.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Feb. 12.—A chain of grandmothers without parallel, in this section, at least, has been broken by the passing of Mrs. Eliza Eliza Riles, 82.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

The oldest of the Hanson children is 34 years of age. Thus there were at one time five living generations with less than 72 years separating the youngest from the eldest.

The Hanson children had besides their six grandmothers, nine uncles, four great-uncles, two great-great-uncles, four great-aunts, two great-great-aunts and 40 second cousins, but no firm cognates.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Feb. 12.—A chain of grandmothers without parallel, in this section, at least, has been broken by the passing of Mrs. Eliza Eliza Riles, 82.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

UTILIZE WASTE OF NATURAL GAS

Chlorine Gas Compounds May Be Profitably Made in Oklahoma

Special to The World.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—That chlorine, carbon tetrachloride, methyl chloride, and other valuable chemical compounds containing chlorine may be manufactured from natural gas that is otherwise going to waste is indicated as the result of experiments recently made by the bureau of mines, and announced today.

A great amount of natural gas is being wasted at present because the wells are so far from industrial centers, or the gas supply so limited, that it is not worth while to build pipe lines for the transportation of gas.

The bureau points out that the enormous gas fields near Amarillo, Texas, are an instance of where the gas is so far from industrial centers that it is not worth while to build pipe lines for the transportation of gas.

The situation is also said to be acute in Louisiana, Wyoming and California.

It has been known for over 50 years, bureau experts said, that chlorine gas would unite with natural gas, but the essential facts on which to base commercial developments had never been determined.

The result of the bureau of mines studies of the processes and reactions involved are given in a report just published, Technical Paper 255, "Chlorination of Natural Gas."

In this report apparatus for laboratory investigation of the problem is described, and the chemical and thermal reactions involved are discussed. A table is given showing the sources from which natural gas particularly adaptable to chlorination can be obtained. The most important feature is the very complete list of catalysts which are described, together with the methods of preparation and the yield of valuable products when used in the laboratory.

Because of the likelihood that Oklahoma interests will be interested in developing these industries the bureau announced today that it has had sufficient copies of the report printed and will distribute them free to Oklahoma business men who are interested.

GRAPE PRICES STAY UP

Loss of Wine Trade Made Up by Demand of "Home-Made."

CLEVELAND, Feb. 12.—That prohibition did not ring the curtain down on the grape industry was the opinion of delegates attending the recent convention of the National Grape Growers congress here.

"Though we lost the sour wine trade," L. G. Young, grower of Erie county, Pennsylvania, declared, "there has been such an insistent demand for grapes for the making of homemade wine by the foreign elements, who are wine drinkers, that the price of grapes is higher than ever before."

Last season grape prices reached top mark about $200 a ton, it was said. In 1919 they were $80 a ton and in 1914 about $35 a ton.

W. C. Johnson of Geneva, Ohio, president of the organization, said the shortage of cars last season caused great loss to the growers, because large quantities of fresh fruit were allowed to spoil due to inability to ship.

Chain of Five Living Generations Broken by Death of Octogenarian

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Feb. 12.—A chain of grandmothers without parallel, in this section, at least, has been broken by the passing of Mrs. Eliza Eliza Riles, 82.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

The oldest of the Hanson children is 34 years of age. Thus there were at one time five living generations with less than 72 years separating the youngest from the eldest.

The Hanson children had besides their six grandmothers, nine uncles, four great-uncles, two great-great-uncles, four great-aunts, two great-great-aunts and 40 second cousins, but no firm cognates.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Feb. 12.—A chain of grandmothers without parallel, in this section, at least, has been broken by the passing of Mrs. Eliza Eliza Riles, 82.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

The oldest of the Hanson children is 34 years of age. Thus there were at one time five living generations with less than 72 years separating the youngest from the eldest.

The Hanson children had besides their six grandmothers, nine uncles, four great-uncles, two great-great-uncles, four great-aunts, two great-great-aunts and 40 second cousins, but no firm cognates.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Feb. 12.—A chain of grandmothers without parallel, in this section, at least, has been broken by the passing of Mrs. Eliza Eliza Riles, 82.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

The oldest of the Hanson children is 34 years of age. Thus there were at one time five living generations with less than 72 years separating the youngest from the eldest.

The Hanson children had besides their six grandmothers, nine uncles, four great-uncles, two great-great-uncles, four great-aunts, two great-great-aunts and 40 second cousins, but no firm cognates.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Feb. 12.—A chain of grandmothers without parallel, in this section, at least, has been broken by the passing of Mrs. Eliza Eliza Riles, 82.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

The oldest of the Hanson children is 34 years of age. Thus there were at one time five living generations with less than 72 years separating the youngest from the eldest.

The Hanson children had besides their six grandmothers, nine uncles, four great-uncles, two great-great-uncles, four great-aunts, two great-great-aunts and 40 second cousins, but no firm cognates.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Feb. 12.—A chain of grandmothers without parallel, in this section, at least, has been broken by the passing of Mrs. Eliza Eliza Riles, 82.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

The oldest of the Hanson children is 34 years of age. Thus there were at one time five living generations with less than 72 years separating the youngest from the eldest.

The Hanson children had besides their six grandmothers, nine uncles, four great-uncles, two great-great-uncles, four great-aunts, two great-great-aunts and 40 second cousins, but no firm cognates.

Harding Blue Promises to Be Fed But Is Not Yet Found in Stores

Have you seen the new Mrs. Harding blue?

Apparently no one in Tulsa has, according to information gathered by a World reporter who visited the department stores and shops of the city the past week, in search of a gown, hat or bit of ribbon in this color.

The visit revealed the fact that there is nothing as yet in any of the local stores which is akin to the new shade.

A number of the stores whose buyers are now in the eastern markets, stated that there will be something for showing with the arrival of the next shipment of spring goods, which is expected any day.

When asked about the new color, local saleswomen confessed that they had not seen nor did they know anything about the shade, which promises to be so popular this season, owing to the fact that it is a favorite with Mrs. Harding.

One milliner informed The World representative that the color is very similar to that of Gobelin tapestry, while another said it is slightly darker than Alice blue, which was named in honor of the daughter of former President Theodore Roosevelt, and which, on account of her youth and attractiveness, was popular throughout the reign of "Princess Alice."

Mrs. Harding blue promises to be worn off and on during the coming administration for the reason that it is a conservative color and on account of its dignity and durability.

Doubtless many of the local shops will be showing gowns and hats in this color at an early date.

VALUE OF FARM WOMAN

Computed at Wage Scale She Should be Worth $4,000 a Year.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 12.—Farm women are worth $4,000 a year, according to Miss Margaret Fedde, chairman of the home economics department of the University of Nebraska.

"She gets the meals three times a day and seven days a week," Miss Fedde told a meeting of the Nebraska farm bureau federation at Beatrice, "for which, if you hire the work done, you must pay $10 a week. Washing and ironing would be $2.50 a day for two or three days a week. There is an average of 19 days a year sickness on each farm, and acting in the capacity of a nurse the farm wife should get $25 a week. As an assistant in farm work she should be paid at least $20 a month; for cleaning two days a week, $5; sewing two days a week $3 a day and other details $6 a week.

Total this and it makes $4,000 a year."

The Joy of Vigorous Womanhood

It's great to sense the thrill of delight which comes of the conscious possession of a strong, robust physique—because it exalts the feeling of physical well-being which leads to and gives an appetite for clean and wholesome sports.

The girl or young woman who cannot enter into the spirit of actual enjoyment of spirited games because of a frail constitution is missing half of what life has to offer her. Indeed, she will find it difficult to find a right place in the sphere of womanhood while her body remains weak and pale.

It is important that every woman know of the value of FORCE TONIC, a medicine of physical weakness and mental fatigue. FORCE TONIC gives strength to tired and exhausted nerves and builds up the system by stimulating the blood with rich, red corpuscles, increasing the vitality and aiding the digestion. Get a bottle of FORCE TONIC today! Full directions have 10 and 20 cent bottles to begin to feel the benefits of the joy of strength and health.

"It Makes for Strength."

Chain of Five Living Generations Broken by Death of Octogenarian

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Feb. 12.—A chain of grandmothers without parallel, in this section, at least, has been broken by the passing of Mrs. Eliza Eliza Riles, 82.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

The oldest of the Hanson children is 34 years of age. Thus there were at one time five living generations with less than 72 years separating the youngest from the eldest.

The Hanson children had besides their six grandmothers, nine uncles, four great-uncles, two great-great-uncles, four great-aunts, two great-great-aunts and 40 second cousins, but no firm cognates.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Feb. 12.—A chain of grandmothers without parallel, in this section, at least, has been broken by the passing of Mrs. Eliza Eliza Riles, 82.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

The oldest of the Hanson children is 34 years of age. Thus there were at one time five living generations with less than 72 years separating the youngest from the eldest.

The Hanson children had besides their six grandmothers, nine uncles, four great-uncles, two great-great-uncles, four great-aunts, two great-great-aunts and 40 second cousins, but no firm cognates.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Feb. 12.—A chain of grandmothers without parallel, in this section, at least, has been broken by the passing of Mrs. Eliza Eliza Riles, 82.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

The oldest of the Hanson children is 34 years of age. Thus there were at one time five living generations with less than 72 years separating the youngest from the eldest.

The Hanson children had besides their six grandmothers, nine uncles, four great-uncles, two great-great-uncles, four great-aunts, two great-great-aunts and 40 second cousins, but no firm cognates.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Feb. 12.—A chain of grandmothers without parallel, in this section, at least, has been broken by the passing of Mrs. Eliza Eliza Riles, 82.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

The oldest of the Hanson children is 34 years of age. Thus there were at one time five living generations with less than 72 years separating the youngest from the eldest.

The Hanson children had besides their six grandmothers, nine uncles, four great-uncles, two great-great-uncles, four great-aunts, two great-great-aunts and 40 second cousins, but no firm cognates.

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., Feb. 12.—A chain of grandmothers without parallel, in this section, at least, has been broken by the passing of Mrs. Eliza Eliza Riles, 82.

Before her death, two small children of Mrs. Eliza Hanson, her great-granddaughter, had six living great-grandmothers of whom two were great-great-grandmothers, two were great-great-grandmothers and two were just plain grandmothers.

The oldest of the Hanson children is 34 years of age. Thus there were at one time five living generations with less than 72 years separating the youngest from the eldest.

LEONARD FUNERAL SET FOR MONDAY

Banks to Close Doors Early; Rev. Abel to Preach Sermon

Funeral services for O. H. Leonard, Tulsa banker, who died suddenly Friday morning while on his way home from Hot Springs, Ark., will be held tomorrow, Monday, afternoon at 2 o'clock from the First Methodist church, with Rev. J. W. Abel in charge. The body will lie in state at the church from 11 a. m. until 1 o'clock of that day.

The Exchange National bank, of which he was vice president, and the Exchange Trust company will close their doors at noon in deference to the memory of one of its most able and faithful officers. All other banks of Tulsa will close at 1 o'clock and will remain closed for the rest of the day.

The body will be placed in a mausoleum.

Uses Her Home to Help Brighten the Lives of Many Other People

CLEVELAND, Feb. 12.—Acting on the philosophy that "to be happy you must make others happy," Mrs. Myrtle Perkins Swingle maintains "open house" in her home to the public every Tuesday night.

"The objects of these gatherings," Mrs. Swingle said, "are primarily constructive and will, in a way, help to overcome prejudice and spread the ideals of friendship and good will. There is nothing to join, no dues to pay. The admission price is one smile and they all pay it cheerfully."

The idea started, Mrs. Swingle explained, when several young men who roomed at her home complained of getting lonesome.

"I went out and invited all my neighbors and friends in to spend the evening," she continued. "We had a fine time. But why, I asked myself, should we hoard our fun selfishly? We ought to let everybody in."

"The next Tuesday night we invited everybody who wanted to come. I consider my home a merely mine to hold in trust for a little while. And while I have it I will use it to help brighten the lives of others."

Mrs. Swingle is assisted in entertaining by her daughters Eva Mae, 20 and Mildred, 17. One hour is set aside for discussion of some topic of her choice, which is followed by singing and dancing is indulged in.

Mrs. Swingle announced that several other Cleveland women, influenced by her example, are preparing to do likewise.

Hotels Cut Rates to Pre-War Schedule— Others May Emulate

A cut in the rates that levels the price of rooms to those of pre-war days was announced yesterday by the Oxford hotel. This action has been met with considerable interest by the fact that virtually all commodities are lower than they have been since the war, since the Oxford rates are actually in line with the cost of living.

The Oxford went into effect last night, Mrs. Chas. speaking for the hotel management, said.

Rooms with bath will be $2 and $3. Single rooms, without bath $1.50 and $2. This is the same charge made for rooms in the hotel five years ago.

OFFICER SHOTS BOY</