flowers in the garden and said, "How lovely and fragrant."

So he plucked some roses and he looked further and he said, "Ah, a bright-eyed, rosy cheeked child. That baby is prettier than the flower and I will have to take that."

And then he looked and saw a mother sitting beside a cradle.

"Ah, that mother's love is the prettiest thing I have seen on earth, I will talk that, too."

And with these three treasures he went back and he said as he stopped in front of the gate, "Before I go in I must examine my momentoes."

He looked at the flower, and it had withered; at the baby's smile and it had faded. He looked at the mother love and it glistened in all its beauty. He threw away the withered flowers and cast away the faded smile and with the mother's love pressed to his heart, he pressed through the gates into the city, crying to the angels in glory, "The only thing I could find that would keep fragrant from earth to Heaven, is a mother's love."

"Take this child and nurse it for me and I will pay thee thy wages."
