MIDDLE STATES REGATTA

Being Rowed at Philadelphia Today--Eastern Colleges Represented.

Philadelphia, May 26--The fourth annual regatta of the American Rowing association, the so-called "American Henley," is on today with every canal of being the most successful affair of its kind ever pulled off here.

Nearly a hundred entries are on the program, and the races will last until six o'clock this evening, when the grand event, the senior eight-oared shell race, will be rowed.

Chicago, Washington and St. Louis in the American league each has a pitcher named Smith.

The tennis teams of Nebraska and Minnesota universities engage in a dual meet today on Northrop field.

The Wisconsin league is headed by one club one day and by another the next. The Badger state should see a great race this year.

Cornell and Yale meet on the diamond today, the first time the ball teams of the two universities have met in thirteen years.

With Chicago, New York, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia fighting hard, the race in the National league is becoming interesting.

The San Antonio team in the South Texas league lost the first five games played and then won eight out of the next ten games.

Jackson, Gulfport and Baton Rouge have been engaging in a merry saw-for first place in the Cotton States league.

Houston in the South Texas league and Dallas in the North Texas league are certainly hitting it up at a fast clip in the Lone Star state.

The Augusta, Ga., team is playing great ball and the rest of the South Atlantic clubs are having hard work trying to head the Tourists.

The Wisconsin Interscholastic Athletic association holds its annual meet at Madison today. The number of events and the records for eligibility are the same as last year.

Tom Fisher, the Shreveport pitcher, has equalled his last season's record of eight victories in his first eight games. His team is leading the Southern league.

If York and Johnstown can find their winning legs and put them on the Tri-State league will have as great a race for the flag as ever has been seen in any league.

The Central league has had record-breaking crowds during the first month of its season. Saturday and Sunday games in four cities recently showed a total attendance of 23,000 for the two days.

Cleanliness in Milking.

[By Miss Anna F. Sorenson.] The more a cow is deprived of exercise, the greater the need of keeping the pores of the skin open by daily carding and brushing. This is not only a question of health but also of cleanliness. It is a wonder to me that the farmer who will give his time willingly to keep his horse clean, brushes it to his cows. It is a question of health in both cases, but in the latter it is also a question of health to his family and those who may drink the milk, not to speak of the quality of the butter. Both on the farm and in the creamery cleanliness means dollars and cents. The manner in which milking is done has also an influence on the cost of production.

Regular hours and kindness are two important things to be observed. The importance of milking the very last drop is due not only to the fact that the last drop is richer in butterfat than the first, but also to the fact that it helps to keep up the flow of milk and extend the milking period. This is especially important in developing heifers. The money lost in the United States by poor milking can hardly be over-estimated.

Cleanliness in milking means quality in the butter. If the cows are cleaned and brushed and hour or so before milking, so as to let the dust settle, the only precaution needed is to use a clean cloth, and so as to prevent scabs and dust from falling into the pail. Many milkers have the bad habit of wetting their fingers, sometimes dipping them into the milk, so as to make them slide down the teats. The proper way is to milk with perfectly dry hands, by squeezing, not sliding. Only in "stripping" to start the flow and to get the last drop of milk it may be preferable to slide the fingers down the teats.

Hands and finger nails must be clean and all utensils used must first be rinsed with cold water, then washed and scrubbed, using soda or some other washing powder, (never common soap), and finally rinsed with boiling water. These rules for producing clean milk are not new, over a hundred years ago they were observed by good buttermakers, but it remained for the last decade of last century to explain the reason "why." Scouring of milk and indeed most of the taints from which milk may suffer, have been shown by our scientists to be due to various bacteria.

These bacteria thrive in the excrements and dirt, and they float on the dust and drop into the pail while milking. They abound in the little specks of dried milk left in the crevices in badly soldered cans, in poorly cleaned strainers, in rags used for wiping the cans after washing, (which should never be done) under the finger nails of the one who milks, in fact everywhere. Every bacterium which is in the milk as it leaves the udder will multiply twenty-three times in two hours, at 95 degrees, while if the milk is cooled to 55 degrees they will multiply four times only in two hours, and if the milk is chilled in ice, they will hardly increase at all.

It is not so hard to convince the private dairyman of the need of all these precautions, he will at once see their value in a better product and better price. But the farmer should also be willing to acknowledge their need when sending milk or cream to the creamery. He is just as much interested in the final result, whether the creamery be run on a strictly cooperative basis or by an individual.

As the cream or milk has to be transported when sold to a creamery, the bacteria get a better chance to develop than if the butter be made on the farm. So handling the milk for the creamery really requires more care. If farmers understood this and acted accordingly, it would be easy to increase the value of our creamery butter from one to two cents a pound, or for the United States, say from three to six million dollars.

The Cow For Dakota.

[By N. S. French, Berlin, N. D.] The Twin States are prospering and many other parts of this great country are fast finding it out. We are almost entirely a farming community and while all branches of the farming industry are prosperous and entitled to due credit for our well being, let us not forget that the animal that helped us when we most needed help was the cow. Not a registered and pedigreed cow either, but mostly of a class that is pretty universally described as "just cow." The breeders of pure-bred stock sneeringly speak of these cattle as "scrubs" but the record that they have made here for the past fifteen years is certainly not "scrubby" one. Dairy bred cows, trained to this work for centuries, may be more profitable, but taken as a whole, the cows of Dakota have done a grand work.

But the true Dakotan always wants
