ATMOSPHERE. Well, the gossip queen began telling her version of a certain neighborhood affair while attending a little thimble party at the home of the new neighbor. The other women listened while two young people's reputation were damaged beyond repair. Then, amid the shocked silence which followed the "revelation," the new neighbor spoke, very quietly but very clearly:

"Would you swear to that?" she asked. "In this house," she continued, no such statements are accepted unless the person is willing to swear to them in court."

"Of course, the queen gossip was terribly insulted, and she wouldn't stay in that house to be insulted further! But it is noticeable that ever since she has put a guard on her tongue, and that more than one woman who has opened her mouth to comment upon someone's shortcomings has suddenly closed it again without uttering a word. The lesson sank in."

"Yes, my cold is better, thank you. These spring colds are horrid things to hang on, though, aren't they?" remarked the gray-haired woman to her caller.

"I thought I never would get rid of mine. I tried everything and nothing seemed to help. Then my neighbor (she's a relic of a doctor) said there was only one thing to cure me and that was quinine and rum."

"There's nothing like it for a spring cold," she said. "That's what my husband always took for himself, no matter what the prescriber for other people. You get some two-grain quinine capsules and a pint of good rum. Take a capsule and a good swallow of rum every hour and in twenty-four hours your cold will be broken up."

"Now, I'm a good church member, but I had to do something for that cold. So I asked our corner druggist for a pint of the same kind of rum. I'd got for the Christmas plum pudding. He was horrid about it—winked, and said: 'Long time between drinks, ain't it?'"

"I started early in the morning to take the quinine and rum as the doctor's wife had said, and that day everybody on earth saw me. You know how rum smells. My breath was like a toper's. I believe every one of the ladies' aid society called on me that afternoon. And the worst thing instead of one, and my head felt queer!"

"Yes, it broke up the cold—and my social standing. I can just hear the gossips chattering!"

BUILDING IDEA GETS APPROVAL

Plan of Increasing Y.M.C.A. Capacity Seen as Only Real Solution.

Judging from present indications, a large number of local residents will attend the "booster's banquet" at the Y. M. C. A. tonight. The banquet will begin at 8:15 o'clock, and the program will be concluded in time for the Virginia Brooks lecture at the auditorium.

The idea of a new building for the boys is meeting with general approval, for those who frequent the association home are well aware of the congested condition and the manifest necessity for more room. Those in charge of the work see the solution in the proposed building for boys. This would provide suitable equipment for at least 200 boys aside from the men. The present building would then be re-arranged and furnished entirely for the men. With such a plan, the needs of the city could be met and membership of double the present possibility maintained.

NEW CYCLE CAUSES DEATH

Owner Dying in Hospital and Companion Killed—Other Will Die. Hammond, Ind., March 27.—John Cooper, a 20-year-old East Chicago boy, got a new motor cycle yesterday and today he lies at the point of death in a hospital here.

Glockski and Garie were returning from East Chicago to Hammond after a fruitless search for work when Cooper started home today from his first trip on the new motor cycle. Cooper did not see the men until he crashed into them. Glockski was instantly killed.

Squelching a Scandal-Monger

(Copyright, 1914, by E. K. Woolley.) CANDIDAL-MONGERING has received a delightful quietus in a certain neighborhood we wot of. No—no body was put in jail. It all came about through a quiet little question asked by a little woman who recently moved into said neighborhood.

You know there's a gossip in every community. Yes, there is usually more than one, but there is always one who starts things and leads them going—a sort of queen of gossips.

Well, the gossip queen began telling her version of a certain neighborhood affair while attending a little thimble party at the home of the new neighbor. The other women listened while two young people's reputation were damaged beyond repair. Then, amid the shocked silence which followed the "revelation," the new neighbor spoke, very quietly but very clearly:

RICHARDSON IS TELEPHONE HEAD

Fargo Man Elected President of the North Dakota Association.

OFFICERS ELECTED. President—L. D. Richardson, Fargo. Vice President—Henry Wilson, New Rockford. Secretary-Treasurer—R. P. Baird, Fargo.

Fargo, N. D., March 27.—Yesterday's sessions of the North Dakota Telephone association opened with an address by Director Cooper of the state telephone station. Mr. Cooper dwelt on the fact that in farmers in the telephone business success depends to a large extent upon management.

He showed the close relations between the business man and the farmer and told of what had been accomplished by farmers of the state under the direction of the Better Farming association of the Nebraska Telephone company, a very carefully prepared and thoughtful address on "Government Ownership of Public Utilities." He said that the proposition in itself has support, and that there was no reason why the government should not own the public utilities, but that it is not practical for it to do so.

Government Ownership. "The government has the right to demand the greatest good to the greatest number and service at reasonable rates. The outcry against government ownership of public utilities is largely a question of private gain. Against private gain under private ownership there is the question of inefficiency under government ownership."

The postoffice is often referred to as an example of successful operation under government ownership. But in reality it is not such. The United States actually owns less equipment than the amount involved in a small telephone exchange. It requires no technical nor engineering skill to operate. In fact the postoffice is dependent on the magnificent equipment of an entirely operated privately owned utility for even the slightest service of efficiency which it possesses.

Postoffice Running Behind. "The postoffice has run behind over a billion dollars; there would have been a deficit of twice that much if the government had been operating the telephone systems of the country. It is the politician's habit of clamoring for government ownership. Our government is not built for government ownership of public utilities."

The best service means a service which is reasonably good, taking into consideration the population, equipment and the fact that the capital will pay dividends to the capitalist, and still keep the charges at a minimum.

Low Cost Here. "The United States has the best service at the lowest cost of any country in the world. There are 29,000 more places reached by the rural phones than by the postoffice. The rural free mail delivery was a direct result of the rural telephone systems, which created the demand for free rural delivery."

Dr. Coultter then went on to point out further deficiencies in the postal service and to compare the superior telephone system of the United States with the inefficient systems of European countries.

State Fire Marshal Ringe closed the morning session with an address on "Prevention of Fires."

President McVey of the university addressed the convention in the afternoon on the subject of taxation with especial relation to the telephone business. His remarks were listened to with attention because of his forcible presentation of the subject.

Hon. W. H. Suitsman of the board of railroad commissioners gave a brief address on the relations existing between the commission and the telephone companies of the state.

COULTER TALKS ABOUT PLANTS

Chicago University Professor Here for Series of Lectures at "U."

Dr. John Merle Coultter, head of the department of botany at the University of Chicago, gave a very interesting lecture at the state university this morning on "New Ideas of Reproduction." The address was a very able one and was particularly instructive to the students of botany at the institution.

Dr. Coultter illustrated his lecture by means of drawing on a blackboard. He took to a large extent the research work which has been carried on of late.

Dr. Coultter declared that there is a sexual reproduction in the plant kingdom. He said further that there are no two plants produced which are exactly alike, but that each one has a separate and absolute individuality.

Dr. Coultter stated that sex itself is not the big element in reproduction, but that it is a preliminary to it. The speaker said that his statements were based on actual experiments and were not mere words. He brought to the attention of his audience a great many things in connection with plant life, which are not generally known.

Dr. Coultter will be the guest of honor at the meeting of the university club at 6:45 o'clock at the commons this evening. He will make an address on "Practical Science." At 11:30 o'clock Saturday morning he will speak at convocation in the university gymnasium on "The New Equipment." While in the city Dr. Coultter is the guest of Dean M. A. Brannon.

SUFFERED TERRIBLY FROM ECZEMA

Covered Baby's Back and Arms. Itching Burning, Kept Spreading, Clothing Irritated It. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

6 Norwood Place, Detroit, Mich.—"My baby suffered terribly from eczema. At the age of four months an eruption of the skin showed which covered his entire back and arms. It broke out with a rash. He scratched which caused a fluid to come out. It caused him to be very restless at night from the itching burning sores. The eruption kept on spreading. His clothing irritated it and I had to keep medicated cotton next to the skin. He was cross and fretful."

"We tried several advertised remedies but could not ease the little sufferer. We happened to see the advertisement offering a sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment which we at once sent for. One application convinced us that we had at last found a remedy, for that night my baby slept all night, which he had not done for weeks. The sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment we bought with the Cuticura Soap entirely cured him in four weeks." (Signed) Mrs. Alfred J. Clyma, June 7, 1913.

For treating poor complexion, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have been the world's favorites for more than a generation. Sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 23-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."
