WILL KEEP OUT OF WAR

But for the poise and patience of men in the presidency, the United States would have gone, more than once and on the drop of the hat, into war. Washington had wide-open opportunity to get entangled in the troubles between France and England. He had reason to fear the zeal of many of his countrymen for the new French republic. Genet, first minister of that government to the United States, made Washington a good deal more trouble than, today, a Dr. Dernburg could possibly start.

This impulsive Frenchman was determined to drag us in, and he actually started belligerent operations on his own hook. Washington had issued a neutrality proclamation. Genet, informed Paris that Washington was a weak old man whose course did not reflect American opinion. Finally, on Washington's demand, Genet was recalled. But Genet did not return to France, he settled not far from the city of New York, married a member of the Clinton family and lived many years as an estimable American citizen.

During the administration of John Adams we got into trouble with France and actually had some sea fights, without a declaration of war. The clashes followed insults by the French government—the directory—offered to Minister Pinckney of the United States. The radicals then in control in France rejected him and a good many Americans wanted to fight, but better counsels prevailed. It was during this racket in France that Pinckney used the words, ever since remembered: "Millions for defense but not a cent for tribute."

We tried in those days to maintain neutrality with both countries—France and England. Jefferson, third of the presidents, proclaimed the embargo; it was one cause, finally, of our war of 1812 with Great Britain. Less than half a century later, under Lincoln we narrowly escaped war with England, as the result of the Trent affair; as the Post has recently said, Lincoln prevented that threatened war.

We didn't miss much of getting into war with Great Britain in the second Cleveland term. Troubles with Venezuela were serious at that time. Really President Cleveland himself took an aggressive position, but the diplomacy of the situation was well handled and the threatened storm passed.—Butte Post.

$13,864,451.88. On the corresponding date two years ago there was $131,002,994.61 in Uncle Sam's general fund. For the present fiscal year up to May 22, government expenditures have exceeded the receipts to the amount of $132,326,680.93.

Senator Jim Ham Lewis of Illinois proposes to fill the aching void in the federal treasury by an issue of bonds to the tune of five hundred millions. This is a favorite method of the Democratic when confronted by a deficit; and a deficit is always a natural accompaniment of a Democratic administration. Cleveland had one—and he issued bonds. Wilson has one—and Jim Ham proposes to issue bonds. But Jim Ham's scheme goes much further. He wants to increase the national debt by fifty per cent, and he suggests that the bonds be issued in small denominations, that they be purchased by the people generally and that the proceeds, after paying off the Democratic deficit, shall be used in some undefined manner for putting the people who are now jobless to work. Jim Ham's plan is for the people to lift themselves out of the slough by their bootstraps.

The death of John G. Morony, who has been a conspicuous figure in Montana's industrial and political affairs during the past twenty years, has brought expressions of respect and esteem from newspapers and his fellow citizens in all parts of the state. Some of these tributes come from sources that were not friendly to the distinguished Montanan during his life time, but his removal from the scene of former activities has dispelled any prejudice or ill-feeling that may have prevailed and his former critics obtain a better and more impartial view of his personality and his work.

The industrial and political strife time to time was responsible for misrepresentation and unfair criticism in which Mr. Morony participated from that reflected upon his good citizenship, and caused many to believe that selfish motives controlled his actions at all times. It is now the testimony of former critics and opponents, however, that the good side of his character predominated and various acts of charity and kindness of which there had not been public knowledge heretofore, demonstrated that Mr. Morony's virtues far exceeded his faults and that he had a high appreciation of the duties of American citizenship and the obligations due to his fellow men.

The comparative brief career of Mr. Morony was of the strenuous kind. He was intense in all his activities. His friendship was true and lasting, but his attitude toward his critics and opponents was vigorously belligerent whenever occasion required. His kindly disposition however, was manifested in many incidents that showed his appreciation of the brotherhood of man, but which often failed to receive attention from citizens who were not directly concerned.

In making an estimate of the character of our fellow man it frequently happens that too little attention is given to the good side, while his less admirable traits are permitted to obscure our vision. The individual in whom the good side does not outweigh the other side of character is a rare exception, and we will all have a more just appreciation of the merits of our fellow citizens by conceding to them the possession of qualities that we desire them to recognize in their view of ourselves.—River Press.

One thing we must say in favor of the Democratic tariff is that sulphuric acid, paris green and strichnine are on the free list, so that if you run out of work, money and friends you can commit suicide cheaper than ever.—Chattanooga Reporter.

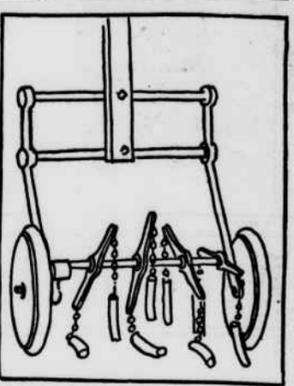

A sad story is told by a Pennsylvania man of a lad in his town who, like many other boys, has been obliged to wear the cast-off clothing of this father.

One afternoon this lad was discovered in tears. "What's the trouble, my boy?" asked the man who tells the story.

"Why," explained the youngster, between sobs, "pop has gone and shaved his face clean and now, I s'pose I'll have to wear them red whiskers."

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Machine That Beats Dust Out of Carpets.

The efficacy of the good old method of a vigorous application of elbow grease to the carpet has never been questioned, but it was gradually discarded for easier methods. Various machines for brushing the dirt out of the carpet or driving it out in a jet of air have almost entirely supplanted the harder method of beating it with sticks, but just as this stage of the development an invention goes right back to first principles and invents a machine by which the carpet is beaten in the good old fashioned way without the usual expenditure of energy. The carpet is taken out in the open air and stretched on the ground and the machine pushed back and forth over it, and a series of beaters are whirled vigorously around, coming in contact with the carpet. At every step of the operator forty blows are delivered.

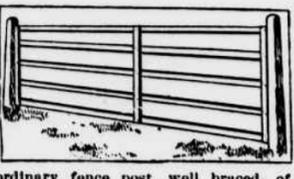

PRETTY LINGERIE FROCK.

Sheer batiste hand embroidery and Irish crochet are used effectively in this girlish frock. It is buttoned straight down the front.

Cheap Gate Made in an Hour.

The cheap gate shown in the illustration is a very good kind for a farm gate. It is made as illustrated, of 2 by 2 inch oak stuff fastened together with spikes. One end is secured to an ordinary fence post, well braced, of course, as it is an end post, with wire at top and bottom. The other end is secured to another post by one wire near the middle. The wire has to be unwrapped and the gate carried back when a wagon has to go through, but this is not a great hardship, as this does not occur often. Such a gate can be made in an hour.

Mrs. A. N. Peters was hostess to the Bridge Club on Tuesday afternoon. At the conclusion of the playing Mrs. Keith was found to have high score and was awarded a pretty bridge set in a leather case and Mrs. Baynham, second was awarded a handsome hand made towel. Mrs. Charles Peterson was invited to substitute for one absent member. The hostess served a fine two course luncheon, assisted by Miss Alma Elvsrude.

The Linger Longer Card Club was entertained Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Hauge. Trump whist was played at four tables, Mrs. Bjorstad winning the ladies head prize and Mr. A. E. Blycker the gentlemen's head prize. A delicious luncheon was served by the hostess after cards. Besides the regular members, the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. Axt, Mr. and Mrs. Yotter, and Mrs. Lee Chouinard. The club will meet in two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Blycker.

Art Club Meets with Mrs. Arnot
 The Sunflower Art Club met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John Willis, Mrs. C. D. Arnot, her daughter being the hostess. Roll call was responded to by the naming of women of the American Revolution.

A short business session was held. Owing to the inclement weather only sixteen club members and two visitors Mrs. Emma Waugh and Mrs. Maurice Reuler were present. After the business meeting Mrs. W. E. Rhodes sang "A Perfect Day" and at the close of the afternoon session Mrs. Reuler favored the guests with piano numbers rendered in her usual faultless style.

Mrs. Arnot, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Willis, and Miss Electra Boehert, served a very delicious two-course luncheon, after which the guests lingered for some time in social converse before departing for their homes.

The Club will meet in two weeks at the home of Mrs. B. A. McFarland.

Notable among the society events of the week was the bridge afternoon Saturday, at which Mrs. J. J. Tattan was the charming hostess entertaining the North and South Side bridge clubs. The rooms of the Tattan home and the daintily arranged tables were decorated with white and purple lilacs, which cast a delightful fragrance.

Five tables of auction bridge were played, Mrs. Reuler having the highest score on the North Side, received a beautiful boudoir cap of lavender and old lace, and Mrs. J. E. Arnot, having the highest score on the south side, received a pair of lilac silk hose. The guest prize, a beautiful cut glass nappy, was won by Mrs. John M. Lewis.

A tempting three course luncheon was served, consisting of lemon ice, chicken salad, olives, hot rolls, nut rolls, nut bread sandwiches, maple parfait, angel food cake and coffee. The hostess was assisted in serving by Mrs. M. D. Hoyt and Miss Katherine Casey.

Those enjoying the hospitality of the gracious and popular hostess were the Mmes. S. C. Moore, P. L. Her-ring, W. A. Baynham, H. A. Yotter, G. R. Jamieson, J. E. Arnot, M. Reuler, G. T. Plant, George Stratton, E. N. Hill, DeLeo, K. H. Keith, O. N. Yerkes, C. C. Storing, J. L. Slattery, B. P. Langen, A. N. Peterson, M. D. Hoyt, C. D. Arnot, Leo Hurly, C. C. Johnson and the Misses Lind, Dougherty and Casey.

One of the prettiest parties of the week was the bridge afternoon given by Mrs. S. L. Rugg in her apartments at the Orpheum Thursday afternoon. Auction bridge was played and at the conclusion of the playing Mrs. E. N. Hill held high score, Mrs. Thomas Dignan was second and Mrs. Leo Coleman won the consolation prize each receiving dainty favors.

After cards the guests were taken to the Coleman Hotel where a delicious three course luncheon was served. The luncheon color scheme was pink and white and was carried out with many beautiful bouquets of flowers, American beauties and Sweet Peas being used.

The guests enjoying Mrs. Rugg's hospitality were: Mmes. M. D. Hoyt, J. J. Tattan, C. C. Johnson, C. C. Storing, J. M. Lewis, G. R. Jamieson, S. C. Moore, Bishell, Reuler, McFarland, Spears, Plant, Hill, Yerkes, Yotter, Langen, C. E. Peterson, Lieben, Dignan, J. E. Arnot, Leo Coleman, Williams, Alvord and Willis, and the Misses Johnston and Lind.

A very pleasant surprise was tendered Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Hocking Saturday evening by a number of their friends, the occasion being their fifth wedding anniversary. While Mr. and Mrs. Hocking were attending the theatre, the guests went to the Hocking residence and upon their return home, found everything in readiness for a pleasant evening.

Auction bridge was played at five tables, Mrs. T. J. Hocking winning the head prize for the ladies, Mrs. Melville A. Walker the second prize, and Miss Angie Ilman the consolation prize. Mr. T. J. Hocking held the high score and won the gentlemen's first prize, K. R. Peterson, the second and G. A. Wright, the consolation prize.

After cards the guests repaired to the home of Mrs. G. A. Axt, where a delicious luncheon was served. Mrs. Axt is noted for being a most charming hostess and she surpassed all previous efforts on this occasion.

The rooms and tables were tastily decorated for the occasion, strings of hearts being suspended from the archways between the doors and beautiful bouquets of roses and carnations adorning each table.

Those present were, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Axt, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Schaffer, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Axt, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Walker, the Misses Rose Lezie, Gladys Memminger, Emily Leonard, Grace Dorr, Angie Ilman and Ethel Lezie, and the Messrs. Fischl, Schroeder, Wright, Erickson, Bladoe and Peterson.

Th Helping Hand Society of the Baptist church met in the basement of the New Baptist church Tuesday. About 125 people were present and a good time was had by all present.
