Sense and Non-Sense About the Plays and Players

The Morosco Photoplay Co. have secured a contract from Anna Held to appear in pictures for that well-known company.

"Ham," of "Ham and Bud" fame, is at present suffering from a broken leg, caused from falling over his own feet in the production of those well-known comedies.

Dustin Farnum will be seen again on the Paramount program, as he has signed a contract with the Pallas Picture Corporation to appear in a number of pictures for that company.

The following is an ad. that appeared in a motion picture trade paper a short time ago: "Wanted to purchase, a machine by an exhibitor, with a chilled steel ball bearing crank and cast iron feet."

They sat in the show shop—the night was serene—
A girl and a boy and an old-time machine.

"Two is company," the girl did shout,
Just then the operator's lamp went out.

Theatrical producers have been attacking the Lasky-Paramount citadel the past week in an effort to induce some of the stage stars to return to the speaking stage. If the Paramount companies keep on there will be no stars left on the legitimate stage.

Director Frank Lloyd of the Pallas Picture Company condemned fifty feet of perfectly good film in the making of "The Gentleman from Indiana," because the property man left a calendar hanging in the office they were taking, with the date showing as the 13th. Lloyd says he is not superstitious, but wasn't taking any chances.

Pauline Frederick, after a lapse of several weeks, due to the fire which destroyed the Famous Player studios, has again plunged into the Moorish atmosphere for the enacting of "Bella Donna." Once more this well-known actress is spending the evenings washing the sand out of her hair. "Desert stuff" is not all that it is cracked up to be according to Miss Frederick.

In the picture our hero was leading the last desperate charge which was to turn the tide of battle. Shells burst around him, bullets whistled over his head, his men fell all around him, but he rushed on unscathed. "He must be wearing Paris garters," remarked the "nut." "Why?" innocently inquired the victim. "Because, apparently, 'no metal can touch him,'" was the reply.

During the past week the censors of Ohio have shown no marked disposition to change their attitude towards "Hypocrites." The entire situation has become so red hot that the ministers are preaching sermons on the subject and the politicians are now trying to quiet the ministers. Two of the staunchest defenders of this picture are Rev. J. J. Tisdale and Rabbi Kornfeld, both of Columbus. What the outcome will be is hard to tell.

Censors may come and censors may go, though many of them are going to live forever, but the following ought to "hold" some of the more stringent "judges of photoplays" for some time to come. According to Everybody's Magazine, there was a play shown in a certain Ohio town not long ago, entitled "As God Made It." Immediately following the projection of the title on the screen came the flash: "Approved by the Ohio Board of Censors."

In "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," the next Metro to be seen here, motion picture patrons will have an opportunity of seeing the great dramatic character star, Edmund Breese, in the role of Jim, the man from the creeks. It has been some time since Mr. Breese has been seen here, but he will be remembered for his fine work in "The Master Mind." "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" is taken from the famous poem of the same name, and besides Edmund Breese, it has a cast of exceptional quality.

Miss Ina Claire, one of the youngest and most beautiful of all the Broadway stars, makes her film debut in Jesse L. Lasky's picturization of Wm. C. De Mille's romantic comedy, "The Wild Goose Chase," which will be offered picture fans on the Paramount program in the near future. Miss Claire became famous in New York as the star of "The Quaker Girl" and last year won an equal success in London. In addition to Miss Claire in the cast of "The Wild Goose Chase," is the well-known character artist, Theodore Roberts, who plays the part of the star of a barnstorming company. It is said that Mr. Roberts played in several companies of just about this sort in his younger days, which allows him to throw into the part a wealth of appreciation and understanding. The play has been staged up to the Lasky standard and is sure to please.

In the title part of "The Pretty Sister of Jose," the charming story of old Spain, and Maud Adams' former starring vehicle, the dainty star, Marguerite Clark, attains one of her greatest triumphs. As the tiny Spanish girl of a thousand whims and moods, Miss Clark is well-nigh incomparable. With her fascinating dark beauty Miss Clarke is exceptionally adapted to the role of the little dark-eyed belle of old Madrid. This picturesque photoplay is produced by the Famous Player Company and will be shown here in the near future. Miss Clarke is supported by a well-selected cast, including Jack Pickford, brother of "Little Mary," who plays the part of Jose.
