How Uncle Sam Spends Your Money in Conducting Your Business

EASY COME, EASY GO

Back in 1912, when Mr. Taft was President, and when the gross expenditures of the government were about one-quarter of what they are now, he became exercised and concerned about the highly-piggledy, unscientific, disorderly, grab-bag methods by which your money was expended for public purposes. He said then what is equally true now, that the activities of the national government "are almost as varied as those of the entire business world. The operations of the government affect the interest of every person living within the jurisdiction of the United States. Its organization embraces stations and centers of work located in every city and in many local subdivisions of the country."

"This vast organization has never been studied in detail as one piece of administrative mechanism. Never have the foundations been laid for a thorough consideration of the relations of all its parts. No comprehensive effort has been made to list its multifarious activities or to group them in such a way as to present a clear picture of what the government is doing. Never has a complete description been given of the agencies through which these activities are performed."

"At no time has the attempt been made to study all of these activities and agencies with a view to the assignment of each activity to the agency best fitted for its performance, to the avoidance of duplication of plant and work, to the integration of all administrative agencies of the government, so far as may be practicable, into a unified organization for the most effective and economical dispatch of public business."

"This extraordinary and indefensible situation, which exists today as fully and completely as it did when Mr. Taft portrayed it seven years ago, came about quite naturally and simply through our tolerance and slackness."

"For years and years the government lived and grew and extended its activities on Santa Claus money. Its income came as easily as money in a letter. For years and years the national income was greater than the expenses. Every year there was a surplus."

"The government was precisely in the position of the Rockefeller and the Carnegies and the Rothschilds. Its problem was not how to get money enough to live on, but how to spend its income. It naturally got in the way of throwing some of it to the birds. It lived like a remittance man."

"You may remember that back in the time of the first Cleveland administration one of the problems of public discussion was: 'What shall be done with the surplus?' Then there was a change of administration and Corporal Tanner was made commissioner of pensions. The whole country was amused and had a hearty laugh when he announced his policy: 'God help the surplus!' That was the halcyon days!"

"Mr. Gilbert, the present undersecretary of the treasury, in an address said: 'The estimates for the year 1920 show that over a billion dollars of expenditures were authorized by the last session of congress in addition to the amount shown in the usual compiled statements of appropriations. In fact, the practice has reached such proportions as to be almost a national scandal, and it was vigorously denounced in the President's last annual message.'

"It has become the first principle of strategy on the part of people interested in appropriations for various special purposes to frame the matter so as to authorize the use of the public funds indirectly, or in indefinite terms, or by authorization for expenditure of unexpended balances, perhaps appropriated originally for other purposes, or by authorizations to divert government receipts before they ever reach the treasury. Efforts are made to find general words which do not speak in terms of appropriations and cannot be readily calculated."

"The last session of the present congress, for example, authorized additional expenditures out of balances of prior appropriations and from receipts to the amount of over $500,000,000, including over $400,000,000 for the shipping board. The present session of congress by similar procedure takes credit for refusing appropriations for the shipping board, but, at the same time, purposes to authorize the expenditure of receipts in amounts that may reach as high as $200,000,000. By the indefinite appropriation for the railroad guaranty about $650,000,000 was in effect appropriated without appearing in any of the statements of appropriations."

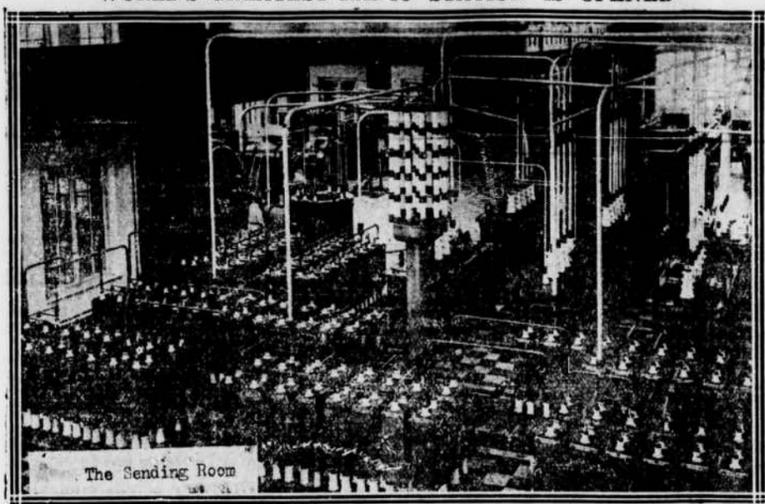

"You see how it goes."

First Weaving Machine 1733. Weaving has been practiced from the earliest times; the aid of machinery dates from 1733, when the fly shuttle was invented.

FEW KNOW FACE OF WATCH Remarkable fact that can be verified by casual inquiry among one's acquaintances.

Something about the queer way in which most of us use—or rather do not use—our powers of observation can be learned in a very simple way. Ask the next person met whether 6 o'clock on his watch is marked by Roman or an Arabic numeral. If he does not admit that he does not know, he can be set down as a really excep-

WORLD'S GREATEST RADIO STATION IS OPENED

The Sending Room

From Nauen, Germany, to Riverhead, Long Island, in 1-29 of a second, is the time required by the sending room from the new wireless station near Berlin, the greatest in the world. This photograph shows the sending room of the station, with the giant accumulators.

tional person—one in about a thousand or so—and after he looks at his watch to see just how that figure is made, he will have the further surprise of finding that it is marked with neither "6" nor "VI."

This test recently was applied at a meeting of high railway officials in St. Louis and one of them passed it, though they, if anybody, might have been expected to know just how their watches were made. The railroaders laughed at each other and seemed to be a little humiliated, but really there was not much need, if, for feeling that emotion.

None of them knew how 6 o'clock was marked, for the excellent reason that knowledge would have been quite worthless in their business and only would have taken up room in their minds better filled with other information. They all could "tell time," and that was enough.

WILD CREATURES HATE SNOW

Means Time of Misery and Hunger to Both Bird and Beast, and Thousands Starve.

Most wild creatures abhor snow. For the rabbits and hares it means that they must scratch down through the dull, frozen suds before they can find their usual food. If the snow is really hard the rabbits are reduced to eating the bark of the fences near the warrens.

All the smaller birds are cut off from their food supplies. Those that live on worms or insects are particularly hard hit, and if the snow lies long the death roll among such birds as robins is really terrible. In that winter of 1917, when there were a hundred days of snow and frost in England it is estimated that the British Isles lost about one-third of their small-bird population.

Water rats, shrews and others all dislike frost and snow because such weather makes food more difficult to obtain. Otters, as a rule, make straight for the coast in a hard frost, and live on dabs and flounders in the unfrozen bays.

Even rats, which can generally look after themselves, dislike snow because it makes their dark bodies too conspicuous to their enemies and prevents them from moving about as freely as they otherwise would.

Mont Valley Times: There never has been a congressman representing Montana who has been in closer touch with the people of his home state than Mr. Haddock.

Lenin and Trotsky continue to say bitter things about America. Somebody ought to tell them it's impolite to talk with your mouth full.—New York Tribune.
