TWO MEN DROWNED.

Women and Children Rescued From Damaged Launch.

South Bend, Wash.—I. A. Lucas, aged 51, who lives in Lake county, California, and J. W. Rennels, aged 52, 217 East Fourth street, Albany, Ore., were drowned and five others had miraculous escapes from death when a launch in which they were riding Sunday struck a submerged fishtrap piling in Bear river straits. The rescue of two women and two small children by F. A. Lucas, brother of one of the drowned men and one of the owners of the townsite, was as heroic as it was sensational. Rennels and I. A. Lucas were seated in the stern of the boat when it struck and both were precipitated into the water, in the widest part of the straits, two miles south of the town of Chetlo Harbor and away from any available help. The two men began to swim for a mud flat 250 feet away. When about 50 feet from the mud flats Rennels sank. Lucas reached the flats and started for Chetlo, but fell into a slough and was drowned. As soon as the launch struck, and F. A. Lucas, a brother, took in the situation, he swam to the mud flats and waded in mud kneedeep to the shore, then raced over the sharp stones for three miles barefooted and naked, scaling a bluff and climbing through slashings to the mill, where the rowboat was anchored. It was then a pull of two miles back to where the launch was pinned with its human freight. Steadily the tide kept rising and each minute brought the two women, Mrs. F. A. Lucas and her sister, Mrs. H. C. Courter, and her two children, Loretta, 9, and Kermit, 7, of Portland, nearer their doom. As the water rose the women boosted the children a little higher up on the bow of the boat and later upon the nose of the launch. All the time they kept their composure, the little girl and boy praying that their uncle might return in time. In the distance, two miles away, they saw Lucas land safely upon the wharf. The children waded to him, and he was encouraged. Faster and faster he rowed and faster and faster the tide kept rising until it had submerged the women and children to their necks, when, exhausted and bleeding from his terrible race over stones and through slashings, Lucas reached the imperiled women and children. They were safely taken off and returned to Chetlo Harbor. Lucas' feet, legs and body are a mass of cuts and bruises. The water was dragged all night by men who came from Chetlo Harbor and other adjoining towns. Rennels had come north to take charge of some of the work at the new townsite.

Gamblers Under Arrest in New York Determined to Lay Bare Whole System of Graft.

New York.—Hereford Marshall, counsel for "Jack Sullivan" (Jacob Reich), the go-between between Police Lieutenant Charles Becker and Jack Rose, now held in the Tombs in connection with the murder of the gambler, Herman Rosenthal, announced Tuesday morning Sullivan was ready to tell all he knew on the witness stand, and that his story would prove more astounding than any yet told. Sullivan, he said, would not talk to either the police or the district attorney. The indictment and arrest of Becker for the murder of Rosenthal, soon after the confessions of "Bald Jack" Rose, "Bridgie" Webber and Harry Vallon, revealed to District Attorney Whitman the "police system" in all its hideousness. "Bald Jack" Rose confessed that Becker came to him and, fairly desperate over Rosenthal's intention of telling all he knew of his relations with the police lieutenant, said: "Rosenthal has lived too long. He has got to be put out of the way." Rose told the public prosecutor and the grand jury how the murder band was hired at the instigation of Becker, and that after the killing Becker met Webber and himself promised complete police protection. The confessions show that the murderers, members of the notorious "Big Jack" Selig gang, plied themselves with liquor and then went out to shoot Rosenthal for a price said to be $5,000. Terror-stricken, Rose, Webber and Vallon spent Monday night in the public prosecutor's office, fearing that they would be murdered if they were taken to the Tombs prison. District Attorney Whitman believes his case against Lieutenant Becker is without flaw; that the confessions, taken separately, dovetailed, and from the testimony of other witnesses the case against Becker cannot be broken down. "Bald Jack" Rose, gambler, who says he was Becker's gambling house collector, felt the ground slipping from under him day by day. With out money or friends, he realized that he was being made to bear the weight of the crime. His counsel advised him to confess. Rose became completely terrified. To his counsel, James M. Sullivan, he said: "If you see to it that my wife and children are protected, I'll come across and tell the truth about this. I am afraid it will be the end of me. No cell on earth can be strong enough to keep the life in a man who gives up about this killing." Intimations were made to Rose that an indictment might be expected against him, and then he confessed. Counsel for Webber and Vallon, catching the drift of things, also advised their clients to tell the truth and become immune. Rose told District Attorney Whitman that for a long time he had been Becker's gambling house collector; that Becker, as head of the gambling house squad, smelled out profitable places, and that each month collections were made Becker did not get all the money, Rose says, but some of it was distributed to others. Rosenthal was a thorn in Becker's side. Becker had pressed Rosenthal to the wall, according to Rose, and he threatened to "make things public." Six weeks before the killing, Rose says, Becker sent for him and said Rosenthal must be made away with. Rose says he went out and saw "Big Jack" Selig to make a deal for his gunmen. Selig was under indictment for carrying concealed weapons and the possibility of a stay in Sing Sing prison did not appeal to him. Consequently, Rose says, when a promise was made to see that nothing happened when Selig came to trial, there was no trouble getting the gunmen. All the gunmen were informed to be ready to kill Rosenthal, who in the meantime had been shadowed day and night. A few days before the killing, Rose says, he met Webber and Becker, and while the three were talking it over Becker said to Webber: "This job has got to be done and Rose says they won't do it for him. Now, Bridgie, you can get it done. They all know you. You have got the money and I have got the power. I'll protect everybody." "Of the real murderers, Rose says: "These poor devils did not know what they were doing. They had been told to kill and they went out and did what they were told." Webber and Vallon in their confessions supplied many missing links in the confession of Rose. Speaking of Becker and his alleged connection with gambling, Rose said: "Why, of course, I was Becker's collector. Everybody knew it."

STEAMERS COLLIDE.

Accident on Ocean Disables Vessel During Fog.

Boston.—More than 200 returning excursionists from Maine resorts went through an ocean accident off the New Hampshire coast amid fog and darkness early today, when the wheel steamer City of Rockland, from Kennebec river for Boston, had her bow crumpled in a collision with the collier Chisholm. The bulkheads kept the Rockland afloat while the fast Chisholm swung alongside and enabled the passengers to be transferred to the collier without loss of life. At dawn the steamer Belfast came up and, taking the Rockland's passengers, landed them in Boston. The Rockland was towed here later.

THE OREGON ONION.

Corvallis Senior Gives Information on Soil and Fertilization.

Corvallis.—Although onions will grow in a large variety of soils, they thrive best in a rich, mellow soil, with plenty of moisture. Just what fertilizers and soil treatment to use is explained by J. C. Leedy of Sherwood, one of this year's seniors at the Oregon Agricultural College, in an article on "Soils and Fertilizers for Onions" in the Oregon Countryman, published by the students. "For commercial onion growing in Oregon the beaver meadows are practically the only ones given consideration," says Mr. Leedy. "These lands are located mostly in Washington, Clackamas and Marion counties. Theoretically these lands have resulted from beavers damming up streams and outlets to lakes, hence the name; but nature has played a large part in the soil formation, in many cases without the aid of beavers." After a detailed description of the soil and an analysis of certain kinds of onions, Mr. Leedy continues: "Barnyard manure is almost indispensable in the production of onions in any except the beaverdam soils, and is more used than any other fertilizer even on these soils. Indeed, there is no fertilizer so well adapted to the production of onions as a liberal amount of clean, well-composed barnyard manure. It is important that all stable manure used on onion land be well rotted before applied to the soil, in order that the weed seeds may lose their germinating powers, and that the danger of disease attacking the onions may be lessened. A heavy application of fresh manure may produce an overgrowth of tops at the expense of the bulbs, and is sure to bring in a large amount of weed seed, increasing the cost of weeding. It is difficult to make the soil too rich for onions, provided the manures are well incorporated with the soil. The usual amounts, however, are ten or twelve tons to the acre, applied before plowing in the fall, and then harrowed with the disc before planting in the spring. "Where enough manure is not produced on the farm, and where it cannot be secured profitably from a nearby city, commercial fertilizers must be resorted to. They can supplement stable manure profitably, especially on the beaverdam soils, already rich in organic matter. In some instances commercial fertilizers are used exclusively with good results. One great advantage over stable manure is the fact of reducing the weeds to a minimum, thus lessening the expensive production. A higher initial cost than stable manure tends to offset the disadvantages in weeding. As it is an intensive crop, yielding large amounts of bulbs to the acre, growers are justified in manuring heavily."

DARROW ON STAND.

Closing Sessions Find Defendant Witnessing for Himself.

Los Angeles.—Clarence Darrow took the stand on his own behalf Monday during the close of the session of his trial. Darrow told of his connection with organized labor as an attorney, detailing numerous cases in which he has been interested. Regarding the McNamara case he declared he was reluctant in accepting it and related that pressure was brought to bear on him by labor leaders which finally induced him to take it. He spoke of his dealings with Mrs. McManigal and George Behm, uncle of McManigal, and said he asked Behm to find out from McManigal whether the stories printed in the newspapers purporting to come from him were true, and he said to tell McManigal if they were not he would defend him also. Darrow said he never had a conversation with Behm with reference to getting McManigal to change his testimony. Getting down to the present case, Darrow in response to a question declared he never had any conversation with Franklin concerning the bribery of jurors and did not give him a check for that purpose. He paid Franklin a check for $1,000 on October 14 and another on October 15 for expenses of the office.

MEXICO WARNED.

Atrocities Against Americans Must Be Stopped at Once.

Washington.—Secretary Knox officially informed General Pascual Orozco, leader of the Mexican rebels, Tuesday, that the raids and attacks on Americans and American property in northern Mexico must be stopped immediately, or the United States would take preventive measures. President Madero has also been requested to send troops to northern Mexico and he has answered that troops are on the way and expressed the belief that the trouble would soon be quieted. Efforts are being made to have the unexpended balance of the money appropriated for the Mississippi flood sufferers diverted by congress for the use of the relief of American refugees now pouring into El Paso from Mexico. The army there has aided the sufferers by giving them tentage for temporary shelter, and orders have been issued to send tents for one thousand people immediately, from St. Louis. It will be about three days before the consignment reaches El Paso.

The board of inquiry convened for the purpose of ascertaining the cause and fixing the responsibility for the derailment of Southern Pacific locomotive 2912, one and one-half miles west of Morrison, on the Shasta division, on July 19, in which Engineer Dunbar was killed and Fireman A. G. Selby injured, has found that the derailment was due solely to the engineer running at a too high rate of speed around a 14-degree curve. The testimony at the inquiry brought out the facts that the track was laid with 75-pound steel, the ties practically new, fully tie-plated and double spiked, and that the track in no way contributed to the derailment. It was also brought out that speed tests on this branch had been recently made against Engineer Dunbar. The board of inquiry consisted of: J. W. Metcalf, superintendent; F. H. Keefer, division engineer; William Small, master mechanic of the Southern Pacific, and L. E. Hillen, a retired merchant, and W. B. Mason, a dentist. Jack Johnson to Retire.
