The U. G. Embroidery Club met Friday at the hospitable home of Mrs. E. E. Phipps on Pine street. Fancy work was the order of the afternoon, interspersed with several piano selections. At 4 o'clock a cafeteria luncheon was served, at the conclusion of which the guests again marched into the dining room and each, in passing, threw her paper plate and napkin into the open fire and gathered round to watch the cheerful flames. Those present were Mesdames Smith, Leonard, Blodgett, Routledge, Whittle, Guiley, Storey, Baker, Barber, Crouch, Freinban, Holley, Hevener, Jordan, Mattingly and Conwell, and Miss Watson and Miss Guiley.

The seniors of '14 have had a great time today at the high school, as all the boys have been working on the lawn, thereby skipping school. At noon the girls served a great "feed"—reward for a morning's hard toil. Blisters and lame backs were the subject of conversation. These were tenderly bandaged by the girls. "Ding" was much the worse for wear, as on account of his towering proportions he was given a wider row to hoe, which he took in a very good-natured manner, having a fair senior to depend upon in time of need or hunger. The lawn was practically finished in front and this summer will see a beautiful green lawn setting off the high school building.

Last Friday was the natal day of Miss Alta Heer, and it was fittingly celebrated by her and a number of friends at the Heer home at the corner of Bush and High streets. Games and other amusements made the hours pass quickly, and toward the close of the evening ice cream and cake were served. For reasons best known to those present the guests reluctantly departed for their homes at the early hour of 10 o'clock. Those present were Misses Gertrude Barber, Maria Caldwell, Marion Summers, Stella Stahlman and Ruth Ogg, and Messrs. Elmer Bagley, Edmund Barrett, Lyle Sams, Olin Conwell, William Allen and Donald Dickerson. Miss Bertha Borrall chaperoned the party.

A number of flower lovers and home beautifiers of Ashland have complained about the school children picking their flowers on their way to and from school. It is doubtless the love of the beautiful in these children that prompts them to take these flowers, but it is often at such expense and painstaking that flowers are made possible, and if the children could be brought to realize this and also to appreciate the beauty and value of them as they bloom in the gardens along the way, they would ask for the flowers or leave them by the wayside for others to enjoy. In this, a real lesson of usefulness and honor might be taught. When plucked they soon fade and deprive many others from enjoying their beauty.

The Utopian class of the Methodist church had one of the most enjoyable parties of the year on Friday at the home of Miss Frances Barney on Bush street. The evening passed quickly in all sorts of games. A mock marriage took place with Levey Ashcraft and Miss Hazel Bruner as the principals. Refreshments were served of ice cream, cake and candy. Miss Barney showed herself a royal entertainer. Those present were the Misses Frances Barney, Hazel Bruner, Onelta Barnard, Margaret Hodgson, Mary Welsenburger, Ethel Frazier, Vena Bailey, Ruth Porter, Violet Hersey and the Messrs. Kenneth Lilly, John Anderson, Glen and Harold Simpson, Leroy Ashcraft, Richard Ware, Milton Fraley and Samuel Koehler, with Mr. and Mrs. McCracken as chaperones.

M. B. and Jolly Forty-two Clubs Entertained.

Friday afternoon of last week the ladies of the M. B. Club and a few non-member guests on invitation gathered at the beautiful home of Mrs. L. J. Orres on Palm avenue, where several hours were pleasantly spent in needlework and conversation. The cheerful, cozy rooms were tastefully decorated with white and lavender lilies, the color scheme being carried out in the dainty luncheon served by the hostess. Those present were Mesdames C. W. Chattin, G. C. Murphy, Cassie Miller, J. W. Bergstrom, F. W. Moore, Earl Rasor, H. L. Norwood and Miss Marian Huntley, the last three being invited guests.

On the evening of the same day the Jolly Forty-two Club enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Orres, progressive dominoes and conversation while sitting in the pleasant warmth from the blazing logs in the ample fireplace being the pastimes. Decorations and menu were the same as for the afternoon occasion. Mrs. C. W. Chattin assisted in serving. Present, in addition to the host and hostess, were Messrs. and Mesdames J. B. Ware, W. W. Caldwell, A. H. Davis and C. W. Chattin, members of the club, and Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Norwood, guests.

Prize Offered By Civic Improvement Club.

Several business men have offered desirable premiums to encourage promoting fine lawns and flowers, that load in his car. The rigs beat Jim by about two hours, as he had the exceedingly good luck to enjoy two blowouts by the way, taking them with his usual good nature. While there was a scarcity of stickum and goo, and other articles needed to fix auto tires, the holes were pinned up and finally, after two hours of invention and thoughtfulness, and elbow grease on the pump, the car moved off toward the ranch, when, as if by magic, the lights made their last glimmer and flicker and died down. Jim laughed a sort of dry little laugh this time, but pulled the brake and turned on the juice and kept manfully on toward the goal and Ray's birthday, amid the cheers of the feminine members of the car, and the congratulations of the overworked masculine member. When at last they did reach the attainment of their desires at about 10 o'clock, they found the rest of the party waiting in the lot of the barn, so that they could all go in together. Then they all tramped into the house, where they beheld the wonderful product of Mrs. Murphy's culinary, a table piled high with all the delicacies and good things one could imagine. Ray was found to have gone to bed early, being a little rolled at having had no attention paid to him when it was his birthday and he could vote. His blissful dreams of a celebrated birthday were awakened to reality when some of the boys, on following up a sort of buzzsaw noise in the upper regions, pulled him out of bed and counted twenty-one on his anatomy.

The musical department, both instrumental and vocal, has made commendable progress this year and the young people will give a splendid concert. They deserve the patronage and encouragement of a good audience. The instrumental music has been in charge of Horace Reno, while the vocal work has been directed by Miss Nissley.

Admission, adults 25 cents, school children 15 cents. No reserved seats. Tickets on sale at Butler's Confectionery and by nearly all school children.

We may "hold our own" and justly merit the title of "Ashland the Beautiful" in 1915. NOW is the time to begin work to assure results, and to create an incentive for so doing. A. T. Warner offers as first premium one of his best lawnmowers to the one maintaining the finest and best-cared-for lawn for 1914.

Provost Brothers offer fifty feet of garden hose as second premium. S. Penniston will give a choice collection of twelve dahlia bulbs and twelve bedding geraniums for first prize for the finest display of flowers, bulbs and plants to be started growing and ready to plant next spring.

Emil Pell will give a set of three pieces of garden tools as second prize for flowers during the summer.

A committee of three men, very capable along this line, will inspect the city, acting as judges, and all may rest assured a fair and just decision will be given. This is being done under the auspices of the Women's Civic Improvement Club. Let every one get busy at once, first to beautify Ashland and incidentally to try and win one of these fine premiums.

This list of prizes will doubtless be greatly increased through the efforts of this worthy society.

Ray Murphy Surprised.

Fifteen of Ray Murphy's friends joined in a rollicking good time at the Murphy ranch Thursday evening, when they arranged a surprise party for his twenty-first birthday. The visitors went to the ranch in rigs, except Jimmy Bowers, who took a

He soon dressed, however, and came down stairs, very much awake. He was more so on beholding the richly laden table with its great birthday cake looming in the middle with twenty-one candles ablaze. The surprised and surprised then sat down to the table and kept extremely busy for the next hour. After supper the things were moved out of the way and they enjoyed the rest of the evening in dancing, singing and talking around the fireplace. The following were guests: Misses Blanche Davenport, Emma Jenkins, Marion Huntley, Francis Hamlin, Jeanette Creekbaum, Claire Johnson and Pearl Johnson, Messrs. Henry Enders, Herbert Carlton, James Bowers, Murray Murphy, Ray Murphy, and Mr. and Mrs. C. Jenkins and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Murphy.

Seniors Have Great Time.

Friday evening the senior class of the high school had one of the greatest times of the year. The occasion was a progressive dinner given by some of the girls of the class, namely, Misses Ruth Turner, Margaret Siemantel, Marion Hodgson, Thelma Throne, Liela Mitchell, Kathryn Miller and Margaret Patterson. The class first assembled at Charlie Loomis' and thence went to their first course at Ruth Turner's, where they were served with delicious fruit cocktail and given napkins. The senior quartet rendered a selection in honor of the hostess and her connections. The party then proceeded to the home of Margaret Siemantel, where the soup course was served. The guests here were seated around tables tastefully decorated with flowers and napkins carrying out the color scheme of old rose and green—the class colors, and were served with hot tomato soup and cheese straws. From here the crowd wended their way to the Hodgson home on Scenic Drive, where a bountiful table full of good things was waiting for them. Here they were served meat loaf, escaloped potatoes, jelly and hot Parker House rolls. A good time was spent in singing and listening to the piano, and Marion Hodgson gave a solo on the violin. With the melodious tune of "Rah! Rah! Nineteen Fourteen!" they walked, tumbled and rolled down the Church street incline to Main and thence to the domicile of Miss Liela Mitchell, where they enjoyed salad, pickles and aromatic hot coffee. A short time was spent here in geniality and songs. Margaret Patterson's home was the next that the grand old class of 1914 invaded. Here the climax was reached when the "bunch" was given fruit jello with a mountain of whipped cream, with all the cake they could eat. However, on account of previous experiences in eating they had gone through all must needs refrain from more than two pieces of cake and two dishes of jello. Sleepy and Bud, however, could not bear to see such delightful and dreamy articles of brain food going to waste and had to outdo their conservative classmates in their inborn desire for economy. After the last mouthful had been taken all gathered together and sang. The repertoire consisted of everything from "Ta-rara Boom de Ay" to "Red Wing," and Professor Kium ranked high among the professionals in singing famous college songs, while the senior quartet joined in the chorus. The party broke up at a late hour, and all wended their way home, feeling that they had had one of the landmarks, in the way of social affairs, in the career of the class of 1914.

Morris Bailey will leave in a few days to bill northern California for the Ferguson Bargain Store, going as far as Weed. He will spend several weeks in the mountains after he completes his work.
