J. P. MORGAN IS CALLED

Millionaire Financier Wanted as a Witness in a Strange Ohio Search for Money.

COAL DEALER HID FUNDS

Family Have Found $120,000 Since His Death and Are Trying to Discover Other Deposits of Currency.

New York, Aug. 19.—In an effort to locate large sums of money supposed to have been on deposit with banks, to the credit of the late James Miller, counsel representing his daughter and heir, Mrs. Mary J. Miller of Columbus, O., has secured subpoenas for J. P. Morgan and other well known financiers commanding them to appear in the state supreme court.

The petitioner seeks to examine the books of the bankers, because, upon the death of Miller, who was a wealthy coal dealer, much difficulty was experienced in finding his money and securities.

About $120,000 has thus far been found in various county savings banks and it is supposed large sums are still to be located where they were deposited by the secretive coal merchant. It is stated by the lawyers that they have already learned there is no such account on the books of J. P. Morgan & Company.

MISS HOYT STILL MISSING.

No Trace Yet Found of Tacoma Girl Who Disappeared.

Tacoma, Aug. 19.—The strange disappearance of Miss Norma Hoyt has been placed in the hands of a private detective, and her description has been sent to the police of surrounding cities. The mother firmly believes her daughter is the victim of designing persons. Owing to the prominence of the family in social circles, the case is one of lively interest. While only 16 years old, Miss Norma is well developed for her age. She is a pronounced blonde with blue eyes.

She had been staying with her aunt at a summer camp near Tacoma, and started for home on the regular boat. At first it was thought she was drowned, but the mother has received a letter from her, exploding that theory. The letter has a Tacoma postmark, and was evidently written in a great hurry. It asks the mother not to worry; that the writer has been made a good offer for making money, and that everything would come out all right.

ITALIANS AID POLICE.

Lend Authorities Help in Apprehending Blackmailers and Kidnapers.

New York, Aug. 19.—Italian business men here have taken steps toward putting an end to the era of blackmailing and kidnaping of their countrymen by persons declared to be Sicilians and Neapolitan criminals.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Italian Chamber of Commerce numbering among its membership the wealthiest Italians here, plans were made to end the matter if possible. Resolutions were adopted upholding the police and calling on all Italians to lend the authorities every assistance in apprehending the guilty persons.

The Modest Manxman.

Stories about Hall Caine, the Manx author, always show interesting phases of his personality. The last time I saw Sir Gilbert Parker he said:

"I was hurrying along the boulevard in Paris one day when my progress was arrested by a dense crowd in front of an art shop. Evidently, thought I, there is an extraordinary picture on exhibition. The canvas was a remarkable idealization of the Savior—a thin, strongly Hebraic face, with closely cropped red hair and beard.

"Suddenly the crowd parted to admit a man who approached with bowed head. It was Hall Caine! He stood before the portrait with folded arms, gravely studying the face and pose of the figure on the canvas. The similarity of the portrait to the man standing before it was very striking.

"Caine turned to go, but seeing me came to my side.

"I say, did you notice how the crowd parted to admit me?" asked Caine.

"I certainly did," was my reply.

"And did you see how these people make way for me as I go away?"

"Assuredly,"

"They think it is I," was the calm, matter-of-fact explanation.

When the king and queen recently visited the Isle of Man, Hall Caine was asked to drive with them in order to point out the objects of interest. He appeared to think that the only people of the islands were the characters in his novels and regaled their majesties with something like this:

"There is the exact spot at which Glory Quayle is first introduced to the reader!" Again, "Donald MacSheaf passed through that gateway as he encountered the trusty laird from Douglas." And at another place, "Here the blacksmith shod the landlord's horse in 'The Manxman.'" Thus the clerone continued for two mortal hours.

Their majesties were dreadfully bored. King Edward asked to be driven back to town and abandoned sightseeing. When Caine stepped from the carriage he dropped upon one knee.

"Rise, Mr. Caine!" commanded his majesty according to the story.

The author got on his feet, much chagrined. He had confidently expected, it is said at Douglstown, to hear the words that would create him a knight, "Rise, Sir Hall!"

Knighthoods had been liberally doled out, and Caine couldn't understand why he failed to get one.—Julius Chambers in Harper's Weekly.

Watterson and "Pendennis."

Brooklyn Eagle: Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, is utterly opposed to the yellow journal habit of indulging in slipshod English. Just before his staff started for the St. Louis convention he gave them these pithy directions: "Get the news, boys, and all the news, and write it in the English language. I want you all to improve your style." "And how can we improve it?" asked one of the reporters. "Read, read, study good books." "What books?" was asked. "Well, there's a Thackeray, for instance, Read 'Pendennis' as a starter."

The first night the young men were in St. Louis there was some delay about sending their report, and Colonel Watterson wired them: "What on earth are you boys doing?" This was the reply: "Reading 'Pendennis,'" and the colonel laughed as loud as anybody who saw it.

The Death Penalty.

A little thing sometimes results in death. Thus a mere scratch, insignificant cuts or puny boils have paid the death penalty. It is wise to have Bucklen's Arnica Salve ever handy. It's the best Salve on earth and will prevent fatality, when Burns, Sores, Ulcers and Piles threaten. Only 25c. at Chas. Rogers' drug store.

The beer that made Milwaukee famous—Schlitz—is always on draught at The Grotto. Otto Mikkelsen, proprietor.

He Guessed It.

Captain Eugene H. C. Leutze, U. S. N., commander of the battleship Maine, has German blood in his veins, and vast knowledge of detail about naval ordnance in his head. Before he was given the Maine and last went to sea he was superintendent of the gun factory at the Washington navy yard, and gained the reputation of being a strict taskmaster.

Habitually an "early to bed early to rise" man, Captain Leutze found himself unable to sleep one night. He arose, dressed, left his quarters, and walked down to one of the gun shops. Although three shifts are needed to dispose of the great press of work now on hand, there was little doing.

Captain Leutze's sharp eye detected a mechanic sitting on the carriage of a great lathe, which was slowly running to and fro, taking almost infinitesimal threads of steel from a twelve-inch gun. He was dozing, oblivious to all surroundings, when Captain Leutze reached his side and aroused him with:

"Well, what are you doing and what's your name?"

The craftsman looked up and quailed. Then, with a resigned air, he replied: "Well, I guess it's Dennis."

He was not discharged.—Kansas City Journal.
