POLITICS IN OHIO
Senator Burton Differs With Senators Foraker and Dick.
OVER THEIR ENDORSEMENT
Burton Believes Endorsement of State Convention Should Be Less Enthusiastic Over His Colleagues Than Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, D. C., September 6.—Out in Ohio a serio-comic piece is on the boards under the caption, "The Troubles of the Senators; or the Wicked Mr. Burton." Mr. Burton who is known as a scholar in politics, and who has managed to keep his hands clean and his name untarnished even in Congress, has conceived the idea that the endorsement of the state convention should be less enthusiastic in the case of Senators Foraker and Dick than it should be in the case of President Roosevelt. The senators are modest gentlemen and don't ask a single hurrah or a solitary hand-heap more than the President gets, but they want every adjective that goes to any other man, Roosevelt or otherwise, and they mean to have it or fight.

Of course, there is more back of this thing than the mere question of how enthusiastically somebody shall be endorsed. Endorsement was merely selected as a peg to hang a scrap on. There is involved the leadership of the Ohio Republican party and possibly Ohio's attitude toward the next presidential nomination. The prospects of Secretary Taft undoubtedly will be affected, although both sides deny there is any fight either for or against him. The main issue would seem to be whether Senator Dick is to be deposed as boss of the state machine. Burton gave publicity to the opinion that Republican chances of success at the polls would be enhanced if some man other than Dick were at the head of the organization. Then the Republican revolutionists in Ohio rallied around Burton and he now has a fighting organization that promises to make things exceedingly lively at the state convention on Sept. 11 and 12. This is Burton's first real fight in the field of state politics, but he enters the arena under peculiarly auspicious circumstances, inasmuch as he need take no thought of his own immediate political fortunes. The Democrats up in Cleveland think so well of him that they are not going to oppose his re-election to Congress, so he can slay dragons to his heart's content without bothering about things at home.

Fight is Serious Thing.
However entertaining and diverting the Ohio fight may be to outsiders, it is a mighty serious thing for the two Ohio senators. Should Burton and his forces triumph at the Dayton convention, there will be a new deal all around. It probably would mean the retirement of both Foraker and Dick when their present senatorial terms expire, though an exception might be made in the case of the former. The late Senator Vest of Missouri described the protective tariff as an interdependent mutuality of greed. That's what the anti-Dick Republicans call the Dick machine in Ohio, and they declare they are going to smash it. If they do, Burton will be the big man in the new regime. Probably he would come to the Senate as Dick's successor, or he might well be Ohio's favorite son in some Republican national convention of the future.

Hearst's Chances Reviewed.
The almost daily changes in the New York situation are watched as closely in Washington as they are in the Empire State. A week or ten days ago Hearst's chance of securing the Democratic nomination for governor was regarded as at least a 3 to 1 shot. The odds have been dropping since, and there is talk now of Jerome as an even money proposition.

It is not, however, the personal fortune of either Jerome or of Hearst that interests Democrats in Washington; it is the involved issue of the things for which Hearst stands. Democratic senators and representatives in town, and a good many of them are here just now for consultation at campaign headquarters, are agreed that there is in the New York contest the possibility of far-reaching influence on the Democratic party. If Hearst captures the New York Democracy, they point out, he will be a figure in the party's national councils that cannot be ignored, and the doctrines for which he stands will have to be recognized in greater or lesser degree.

BOSTON YET AFLOAT.
PORT TOWNSEND, Sept. 6.—The cruiser Boston conveyed by the tug Pawtucket and the gunboat Princeton, arrived here from Bellingham tonight en route to Bremerton. She appears to be resting easy.

SURRENDER OF STENSLAND.
CHICAGO, Sept. 6.—A telegram from Binns, in Washington tonight, states that President Roosevelt has cabled a warrant to the American minister at Tangier, requesting the surrender of Banker Stensland. Word was also received that the department had arranged for an American bound liner to carry the prisoner and his captors.

AMERICA WINS AGAIN.
MARBLEHEAD, Sept. 6.—Vim, the winner of yesterday's race for the Roosevelt cup, crossed the finish first again today. Till Van (German) was second, Caramba (American) third, and Wannsee (German) fourth. The Auk (American) voluntarily retired from the race after fouling the Vim, and the Tilly was protested by the Wannsee.

He claims to be innocent.

The King has acceded to Captain Amundsen's wish that the stretch of coast charted by the expedition be named after King Haakon and Queen Maud.

Tackle the average farmer on the subject of national, state or local politics, and you will find him much better posted than the average city man. You will find that he is always ready to give a reason for his political beliefs. He is not the sort of a man that waits for some politician to tell him the way he should vote. He reads, ponders and does "a heaping of thinking."

The bones of 117 men, 123 women, 83 boys and 85 girls were taken from the graves in the municipal cemetery at Guadalajara, Mexico, during the past week. The leases on the graves had expired. The bones have been stacked in the corner of a cemetery and will be sold to a purchaser from the United States. Many car loads of human bones are shipped out of Mexico yearly. The bones are used in preparing fertilizers.

MAY DIFFER IN SPELLING

sume that the foregoing was written in a spirit of levity. Without affirmation or denial as to that, here is something that is presented in all seriousness: When Congress convenes next fall there is likely to be the very dence of a time over Mr. Roosevelt's spelling reform. The executive departments, of course, will spell phonetically, as the president directs. But the President cannot direct as to how Congress shall do its spelling. At least Congress is not obliged to obey his direction.

A situation will be presented of communications from the president and executive departments going to Congress spelled phonetically, and when they are printed by order of Congress, in the Record or otherwise, they will reappear in old-fashioned English. The public printer cannot do the printing of Congress in the Carnegie-Roosevelt style unless Congress by resolution so directs. It is not to be doubted that some zealous friend of the administration will introduce in Senate or House such a resolution. Then Pandora's box will be open, and there will be a debate fit for the gods and the laughter of nations. Imagine the smooth, oily, stinging, biting sarcasm of John Sharp Williams; think of the javelin thrusts and hammer blows of Ben Tillman; look forward to the ponderous arguments of Joe Bailey as to the constitutionality of through or thru. And when you think of these things, does the suggestion that phonetism may become an issue between the parties sound so shockingly out of place?

And if Williams and Tillman and Bailey attack the president's spelling reform, will not Lodge and Knox and Spooner rush to its defense? And what else, pray you, is required to create a political issue than the giants of one party arguing for and the giants of the other party arguing against such a thing?

So far as human eye can discern, on that horizon of the future which the energy of a Roosevelt has made so full of promise of spectacular things, there is just one chance that the Republican party may escape standing for, and the Democratic party against reforming the English language. It lies in the possibility that there may effected that alignment of the parties of which we have heard so much. If a considerable faction of Republicans refuse to endorse Carnegieism and a considerable faction of the Democrats refuse to oppose it, then may come the break-up which other issues have threatened, but never achieved.

Shall the parties of the future be known as the Phonetics and Anti-Phonetics, or would Carnegieists and Websterites be the better designations? And how the times promise to try men's souls! We have been taught to believe that out of the questions of slavery and states' rights there were conjured up all the passions capable of being aroused in the human breast. But what was slavery or states' rights alongside though or tho? Did the government of the people, for the people and by the people pass through the ordeal of civil war and the bitterness of reconstruction only to be smashed to smithereens on the rock of kissed or kist?

So busy has Washington, official, non-official and servitor been, discussing the spelling reform order that not much attention has been paid to the actors on the stage of politics. Yet in several of the states there are contests well worth the watching.

It's a significant fact that the strongest animal of its size, the gorilla, also has the largest lungs. Powerful lungs means powerful creatures. How to keep the breathing organs right should be man's chiefest study. Like thousands of others, Mrs. Ora A. Stephens of Port Williams, O., has learned how to do this. She writes: "Three bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery stopped my cough of two years and cured me of what my friends thought consumption. O. It's grand for throat and lung troubles." APPEARANCES

Often a person is sized up by his appearance; by the tone that surrounds him. And more often a business house is sized up by the stationary it uses. A cheap letter head or a poor bill head gives a mighty poor first impression and makes business harder to transact. Good printing costs no more than poor printing. The first impression is half the battle in business. You wouldn't employ a "sloppy" salesman; why put up with "sloppy" stationery, that gives a wrong impression of the importance of your business. Let us do your printing and help you to make that ten strike.
