THE IVORY MARKET.

One of the sights of London is the great ivory floor at the London docks, where previous to and during the periodical sales ivory may be seen literally by the acre, for the tusks are laid out in lots on the floor of one of the great warehouses for inspection by intending purchasers. For weeks previous to the actual sale the special staff of the ivory department has been busy preparing the various consignments and arranging them according to the sizes and quality and classing them into the various grades, each of which has some particular use for which it is especially adapted.

There is practically no waste in the manufacturing of articles from ivory. The smallest chip is not thrown away, but carefully preserved to be utilized for some purpose. Even the shavings from the turning down of a billiard ball have a market value for use in in-laid work. Consequently the lots in an ivory sale by no means consist of tusks and sections of tusks alone, but include the residue from many previous sales. Buyers purchase the particular class that they require for their own individual industry and subsequently return what in most other materials would be waste to be resold to manufacturers of a different class of goods.

Though there is "no waste," oddly enough the most important consideration, from a buyer's point of view, is "how much waste" will a certain lot produce in the course of transforming it into his own particular line. Thus a lot that would be dear to one would be a gift to another, and vice versa. The most valuable class of ivory is that suitable for making billiard balls. To conform to the requirements the tusk must be perfectly sound and solid, without the slightest suspicion of a crack or flaw, and, moreover, they must measure only a trifle more than the regulation size billiard ball or they will cut to waste, from the manufacturers' point of view.

THE CONGREGATIONALISTS.

They started the first foreign mission society in the country. They started the first home mission society in the country. They started the most effective city missionary society in the country. They started the greatest Christian young people's movement of this country or any other country. They started the first college in the country. They started the first theological seminary in the country. They started the first religious newspaper in the country. They published the first hymn book in the country. They started the town meeting—the initiative and referendum. They started the first temperance society in the country. They have given to America the three greatest evangelists it has ever had—Chicago Advance.

An Avaricious Woman. A woman who carried love of money to an incredible extreme was Lady Margaret Jardine, sister of the first Duke of Queensbury. Although her husband was a rich man, Lady Margaret would actually carry foot passengers across the little river Annon for a halfpenny, and whenever there was a fair or market day she would sit on the banks of the stream all day long waiting for customers. She usually wore rags to save her clothes, but on the rare occasions when she visited anywhere she packed up a few decent garments which she slipped on before entering the house, exchanging them for her dirty ones when leaving.—London Queen.

The Point of View. Zangwill, the noted writer, had an experience which convinced him that in deciding what constitutes real greatness a good deal depends upon the point of view. At a political meeting he fell into conversation with a man who knew all the speakers and pointed them out as they sat on the platform. "There," he said, "sits Senator Lodge." "What?" exclaimed Mr. Zangwill. "Do you mean Henry Cabot Lodge, the literary man—the great historian?" "No, sir," replied the other with distinct contempt. "That's Henry Cabot Lodge, United States senator from the great state of Massachusetts."

Unnecessary. "Now, Tommy," said the boy's mother, giving him final instructions, "you must remember how to behave at the party. If you're asked to have something and you want it you must say 'Yes, thank you,' and if you don't want it you must say—" "You needn't bother about that part of it, ma," interrupted Tommy. When you're broke the girls are shy, They turn and fly as you come nigh; Brace up, old man, show some pluck, Take Rocky Mountain Tea; twill change your luck. For sale by Frank Hart.
