SHOT AT WOODBURN

Eugene L. Remington of Woodburn Charged With Crime.

SHOT WM. W. SLAUGHTER

Victim Was Plowing in the Field When He Was Shot in the Shoulder, Inflicting a Serious Wound.

WOODBURN, Or., Nov. 23.—William W. Slaughter is lying at the Portland Hotel in this city, in a dangerous condition, and Eugene L. Remington, a prominent citizen of Woodburn, is under arrest, charged with shooting with intent to kill. Slaughter was plowing on the O. S. Pomeroy farm yesterday afternoon, at about 2 o'clock, when two shots were fired at him by an unseen enemy. One of the bullets from a 25-35 calibre rifle struck him at the tip of the left shoulder and lodged in his back.

Remington ate his dinner yesterday at the Portland Hotel between 12 and 1 o'clock and was seen by other parties in Woodburn between those hours. He got back to his place of business between 2 and 3 o'clock. Remington states that he can prove he was in Woodburn at the time of the shooting. The Pomeroy place is about 2 1/2 miles east of Woodburn.

The missile first went through an inch fence post or it would have cut the man in half. Slaughter thinks

REVISION OF TARIFF

Republican Congressmen Realize Importance of Changes.

STAND-PATTERS TO OPPOSE IT

One Faction Contends No Revision Means Death Knell of the Republican Party at the Next Presidential Election.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—When the rules of the Republican party get together in Washington, it doesn't take long to bring about a crystallization of opinion. It was only a few days ago that the matter of tariff revision was all up in the air. Prominent Senators and Representatives, who had felt the pulse of public sentiment during the campaign, arrived in Washington primed for a tariff fight. They wanted the question opened up right away and assurances were given that when the 59th Congress died its constitutional death on March 4 next an extraordinary session of the 60th Congress would immediately convene and start to work on a tariff bill. They were very sure that failure to do so would spell disaster for the Republican party.

Now step in the pacifiers and adjusters, and that marvelous discipline which makes the Republican party the most remarkable political organization in history manifests itself. From some source, authoritative but indefinite, word has gone forth that the tariff is not to be touched at all until after the presidential election of 1908, but that the national platform of that year shall contain a plank pledging the party to revision of the tariff immediately following the election. This solution of the problem appears to be acceptable to everyone. Senators and Representatives whose constituents are insistent on revision think such a platform declaration would satisfy, and the stand-patters, realizing that tariff revision has got to come sooner or later, are well pleased to have it put off until 1908.

The program is understood to have the approval of President Roosevelt, and if the President makes apparent the fact that he approves of it Republicans are convinced the country will be satisfied and that he shall hear no more of tariff from Republican sources until the appointed time arrives. Democrats, of course, will talk tariff and will charge the Republicans with insincerity, but so strong are the Republican leaders in their confidence of continued power that they will not let Democratic opposition worry them.

If the tariff is thus disposed of to the satisfaction of all Republicans, the coming session of Congress is not likely to be a sensational one. President Roosevelt's inheritance tax proposition probably will cause something of a flurry, but one of the phenomena of present day politics is that Republicans generally seem disposed to accept the view of the President as correct. A few years ago such a proposition would have been rank treason in the Republican camp, but times have changed and one of the chief secrets of continued Republican ascendancy is that the party is ever ready to change with the times. It would not be at all an occasion for surprise if the next national Republican platform should contain planks advocating tariff revision, an inheritance tax and an income tax. A good many prominent Republicans already have expressed themselves as inclined to favor the latter proposition, declaring it to be the twin sister of the President's income tax proposition.

One of the remarkable features of the recent election is what happened to the House Committee on coinage, weights and measures. There are ten Republican members of the committee, and five of them will not be members of the 60th Congress. The chairman, James H. Southard, of Ohio, failed of renomination, and the four ranking Republicans—Dowersock, of Kansas, Hedge, of Iowa, Croner, of Indiana, and Dresser, of Pennsylvania—failed to return. Mr. Hedge was not a candidate for reelection, and the others either failed of nomination or were beaten at the polls. This leaves Ira W. Wood of New Jersey, who ranks sixth, as the man in line for the chairmanship, a rapidly of promotion that does not often fall to the lot of a member of the House.

When the results of the election are summed up, it is seen that Speaker Cannon will have an unusual number of chairmanships to fill when the 60th Congress is organized. Chairmen apparently having been the favorite targets of the opposition. Among those who went down, was Joseph W. Babcock, of the committee of the District of Columbia, which chairmanship will go to Samuel W. Smith of Michigan. This is one of the most important of the House committees and its chairmanship is regarded as prize. The committee next in importance which lost its chairman is that on merchant marine and fisheries, of which the veteran Charles H. Grosvenor of Ohio had long been at the head. Gen. Grosvenor, as is known, failed of renomination. The chairmanship of the committee of foreign affairs is vacant through the death of Robert R. Hitt, of Illinois, and Robert Adams of Pennsylvania, who was ranking Republican member, also is dead, having committed suicide in Washington last winter. This leaves the chairmanship for Robert G. Cousins, of Iowa, and as the place is regarded as one of the most desirable within the gift of the Speaker, Mr. Cousins is looked upon by his colleagues with more or less of envy.

The other chairmanships vacant are mostly of minor committees, but the important place on the rules committee, which will be made vacant by the retirement of Gen. Grosvenor, will be coveted by numerous aspiring statesmen. Chairman "Jim" Tawney, of the committee on appropriations, is regarded as the man most likely to be selected, through Chairman Burton, of the rivers and harbors committee, will have consideration.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

Sailed Yesterday from Ponce for Hampton Roads.

SAN JUAN, Nov. 23.—President Roosevelt who sailed from Ponce for Hampton Roads on the flagship Louisiana this afternoon, has greatly impressed the inhabitants of this island with his personality. The President's trip from San Juan to Ponce was one continued ovation. In every town through which the President passed the buildings were profusely decorated and the streets thronged with people. Roosevelt made a number of addresses on the route. While crossing the river from Arecibo to Utuado, the President's automobile stuck in the mud and had to be pulled out by an ox team. While this work was progressing one of the mounted guards was thrown from his horse into the river, falling near the President's automobile. The President was on the point of jumping to the man's assistance when the latter was pulled from the water.

GRANGE PAPER.

National Grange Will Embark in the Newspaper Business.

DENVER, Nov. 23.—The National Grange adjourned today. It was decided to establish a weekly paper devoted entirely to the interests of the grange. Resolutions were adopted favoring a tariff revision, graduated income tax, the collateral inheritance tax and further national pure food legislation.

MAX ADLER INDICTED.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 23.—The grand jury today returned an indictment against Nathan Max Adler, proprietor of a French restaurant, charging him with perjury in connection with his testimony before that body.
