Daily Happenings at Warrenton, Seaside, Hammond and Fort Stevens.

WARRENTON

WARRENTON, Jan. 19.—Fred Munson, of the tug Samson, which was so badly battered at sea while towing the Big Bonanza recently that she was compelled to abandon the ship and seek her own safety, is visiting his mother, pending the completion of repairs to the tug at Portland.

The Salvation Army, led by Captain T. J. Smith, Lieut. Charles Moku's and Ensigns R. Brown and M. Harmon, paraded the streets yesterday.

Much trouble has been experienced the past few days in getting telephone communication with Astoria. The ice pushed a pole over in Young's Bay and the wires were under water. There has been no communication between this city and Fort Stevens, but there has been no interruption of the service between here and Seaside.

If the weather moderates sufficiently the Old Oregon Mill and the D. S. Kelly Lumber Company's mill will resume operations after having been closed during the cold weather. All of the pipes in both mills are frozen, but it is thought that they can be thawed out by Monday if the weather continues warm. Nearly 175 men have been compelled to a week of idleness owing to the shut-down. Taking advantage of the cessation of business, the Kelly Company has installed a new carriage in its mill.

Among the visitors to Astoria yesterday were J. C. Cobb, B. M. Rogers, Dr. Owens-Adair, Mrs. Wm. Ashley, Miss Coffee and G. C. Barlow.

SEASIDE

SEASIDE, Jan. 19.—It is with much rejoicing that residents of this city and especially the employes of the old Seaside Spruce Lumber Company will receive the news that the mill will reopen between Feb. 1 and Feb. 10. The old company has been reorganized and incorporated under the name of the Seaside Lumber and Manufacturing Company. The old company employed about 225 men in the mill and in the woods, and its monthly payroll of from $10,000 to $12,000 materially aided the business interests of the city—in fact it was the main stay of the city in winter. The sudden cessation of the mill on December 1 was a severe blow to mercantile business, and it drove many men to seek employment elsewhere.

The car shortage was the reason assigned for the closing of the mill. There were 42,000 doors on hand, besides a large quantity of sash and unfinished lumber, but it is currently rumored that the affairs of the company were in an unsatisfactory condition and that the car shortage was used as a subterfuge to enable the company to adjust its business satisfactorily.

For several weeks the company has been repairing and remodeling the mill, placing it in the best possible condition. A large amount of machinery has been purchased for the cutting department and the planing mill. The kilns are being remodeled and the lumber will be thoroughly dried before being treated to the planing process.

Manager Brent said today that by the time the mill starts it will have been thoroughly overhauled and will be in condition to run constantly if cars can be procured to move the product. Former employes, who have been working elsewhere since the shut-down, are applying for their old jobs, and it is thought the mill will reopen with practically all of the old force.

FT. STEVENS

FORT STEVENS, Jan. 19.—The efforts of unknown friends to procure the release of Paul Everingham from the charge of passing several spurious checks in Astoria, deeply interest his comrades in the 34th company, coast artillery. It is known that the accused man's parents live in Chicago and the soldiers believe that the money to reimburse the holders of the worthless paper was forwarded from them. Everingham is a man of more than average intelligence, but he has the reputation of being wholly irresponsible when under the influence of liquor, and it is believed that while intoxicated he planned to raise a considerable sum of money and desert, but became so bewildered from drink that he neglected to carry out his purpose until too late.

Captain Percy Willis of the 34th company, upon hearing of the young man's misfortune was preparing to redeem the spurious paper, but upon learning that Everingham had been in trouble before at Kansas City, he abandoned his purpose. Everingham deserted from the 10th army and he left the navy before the expiration of his enlistment, but it is not known whether he deserted or purchased his freedom.

Private Irving J. Townsend of the 34th company was discharged today at the expiration of enlistment. He resides at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, but expects to remain in Oregon.

Edward E. Simmons of the 23rd company will be discharged tomorrow, having served three years. His home is in Leadville, Col.

Private Roger Power of the 34th company, is another of the veterans of the service. He is a native of Ireland and has been in the service 27 years. He has been in no arm of the service except heavy artillery and has served the entire time on the Pacific coast, being stationed at various times at the Presidio Angel Island, Benicia, Cal., and Fort Stevens.

HAMMOND

HAMMOND, Jan. 19.—Luther R. Wright, proprietor of a saloon and restaurant here, departed today for Seaside, where he will be united in marriage tomorrow to Miss Della Spencer, of that city. Mr. and Mrs. Wright will spend a few days in Portland, after which they will make their home in Hammond.

The Knights and Ladies of Security will give a dancing party at Red Men's hall February 2. Refreshments will be served.

Civil War brought forth the real and indissoluble union of today. It was eminently fitting that this great man, this war worn veteran of a mighty struggle who at its close, simply and quietly undertook his duty as a plain, everyday citizen, bent only upon helping his people in the paths of peace and tranquility, should turn his attention toward educational work, toward bringing up in fit fashion the younger generation the sons of those who had proved their faith by their endeavor in the heroic days.

There is no need to dwell on General Lee's record as a soldier. The son of Light Horse Harry Lee of the Revolution, he came naturally by his aptitude for arms and command. His campaign put him in the foremost ranks of the great captains of all time. But his signal valor and address in of peace once the war was over. The spirit in which he turned to the work war are no more remarkable than the circumstances were such that most men, even of his high character, felt bitter and vindictive or oppressive or spiteful, but General Lee's heroic temper was not warped nor his great soul cast down. He stood that hardest of all strains, the strain of bearing himself well through the grey evening of failure and therefore out of what seemed failure he helped to build the wonderful and mighty triumph of our national life, in which all his countrymen share. Immediately after the close of hostilities he announced with a clear sightedness which at that time few of any section possessed that the interests of the Southern states were the same as those of the United States; that the prosperity of the South would rise or fall with the welfare of the whole country, and that the duty of the citizens appeared to plain to admit of doubt.

He urged that all should unite in honest effort to obliterate the effects of war and restore the blessings of peace. To everyone who applied to him this was the advice he gave. Although absolutely without means he refused all offers of pecuniary aid and all positions of emolument although many were offered him. He declined to go abroad, saying that he sought only a "Place to earn honest bread while engaged in some useful work."

This statement brought him the offer of the presidency of the Washington College, a little institution in Lexington, Va., which had grown out of a modest foundation known as "Liberty Hall Academy." Washington had endowed this academy with 120 shares of stock that had been given to him by the State of Virginia which he had accepted only on condition that he might with it endow some educational institution. To the institution which Washington helped to found in such a spirit Lee in the same fine spirit gave his services. He accepted the position of President at the salary of $1,500 a year, in order, as he states, that he might do some good to the youth of the South. He applied himself to his new work with the same singleness of mind which he had shown in leading the army of Northern Virginia.

All the time by word and deed he was striving for the restoration of real peace, of real harmony, never uttering a word of bitterness or allowing a word of bitterness uttered in his presence to go unchecked. From the close of the war to his death all his great powers were devoted to two great objects; The reconciliation of his countrymen with one another, and with fitting the youth of the South for the duty of a lofty and broadminded citizenship.

Such is the career that you gather to honor and I hope that you will take advantage of the one hundredth anniversary of General Lee's birthday, appealing to all our people in every section of this country, to commemorate his life and deeds by the establishment at some great representative educational institution of the South of a permanent memorial that will serve the youth of the coming years as he in the closing years of his life served those who so sorely needed what he freely gave.

Sincerely Yours,
THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

HONORS NENERALLEE

Roosevelt Declares Confederate Was High Minded Patriot.

FIRST FOR RECONCILIATION

President Sends Address to be Read at Celebration of Hundredth Anniversary of Southern General, Containing High Praise.

To the Hon. Hilary A. Herbert, chairman and others, of the committee on arrangement for the celebration of the 100th anniversary of General Robert E. Lee.

Gentlemen: I regret that it is not in my power to be with you at your celebration. I join with you in honoring the life and career of that soldier and high minded citizen whose fame is now a matter of pride to all our countrymen. Terrible though the day of the Civil War, awful though it was that a conflict should occur between brothers, it is yet a matter for gratitude on the part of all Americans that this alone among contests of like magnitude should have left both sides as a priceless heritage the memory of the mighty son and the glorious deeds which those days brought forth. The courage and steadfastness; the lofty fealty to the right as it was given to each man to see the right whether he wore the gray or the blue, now makes the memories of the valiant feats, alike of those who served under Grant and of those who served under Lee precious to all good Americans.

General Lee has left us the memory, not merely as his extraordinary skill as a general, his dauntless courage and his leadership in campaign and battle, but as also of that serene greatness of soul characteristics of those who must really recognize the obligations of civic duty. Once the war was over he instantly undertook the task of healing and binding up the wounds of his countrymen in the true spirit of those who feel malice toward none and charity toward all, in that spirit which from the throes of the
