WILL BE HANGED

Supreme Court Upholds Lower Court in Baldwin Case.

NEGRO MURDERER TO DIE

William Baldwin, Who Cut the Throats of White Woman and Her Five-Year-Old Daughter, Will Be Resentenced By District Court Judge.

PHOENIX, Ariz., June 19.-The Supreme Court yesterday affirmed the judgment of the lower court under which William Baldwin, a negro was sentenced to be hanged on May 6. The case was referred back to Judge Naves of the District Court, for sentence.

January 1, of this year, Baldwin assaulted and cut the throats of Mrs. Harvey Morris and her five year old daughter, Ariminta, on their ranch near Roosevelt, Gila County. He was captured and taken to Goldie, where an attempt was made to lynch him. He was removed to Tucson and then to Solomonville, where he was tried for the murder of the child, and was convicted on circumstantial evidence, there being no eye witnesses.

The accused contended that the reason for his presence there was to beat off two Mexicans who attempted to assault the woman, but their tracks were never found, and the story seemed unreasonable, even though the accused bore marks of violence, believed to have been self-inflicted as the basis of his defense.

BACK TO THE FARM.

Irrigated Farming To Produce Better Conditions Among Farmers.

With the evil of city congestion apparent in the lower moral standards and a deterioration in physical and mental poise, it is gratifying that in the West such evil is working out its own remedy, all the more certain of cure as it proceeds along natural lines. There is no other area in the world that offers to rural homes the attractions and possibilities of irrigated districts of the West. The realization of this truth is becoming more widely appreciated, and it is now apparent that there is building up on our western shore an industrial and social condition, essentially different from that in the farming sections of the East, capable of expansion and results never before attained.

Irrigated farming, in controlling and directing natural forces permits, under our climatic conditions, of the greatest variety of products. It increases, not wastes, the fertility of the soil. It leads to inexpensive cultivation, to small farms and to well-settled communities. The problems arising out of irrigated farming are simple and easily compassed but the possibilities call for technical skill and mental equipment second to no other profession. It offers a promising field for the ambitious. It secures an assured competency for one's labor, with environment appealing to the social desire and permitting of such attractiveness and harmony in rural life as satisfies the artistic sense.

The conditions are attracting and should attract the best brain and brawn of the East, as witness the present population of the seven southern countries of California, estimated at 600,000, as compared with a population of 35,000 in 1870, which date marks approximately the era of larger irrigation development. The same ratio of increase is also observed throughout the other irrigated areas, accompanied, too, by returns justifying the rapid growth. The southern countries, with about 250,000 acres irrigated-the basis of principal production-are supporting a population of 600,000 people. They have an assessed valuation of nearly $5,000,000 and are marketing products from the irrigated area of more than $35,000,000 annually, or about $150 per acre per annum.

What has been done in the southern countries is being accomplished in the great valleys of the San Joaquin and the Sacramento.

The great irrigation works in process of construction by the national government and the arrangement of details calculated to build up small farms is the greatest piece of progressive and sound economic legislation of recent years. Its guarantee of profit to the farmer, of improved social conditions and attractive homes, will stimulate the "back to the farm" movement and make for the preservation of the mental, moral and physical excellence of the people.-Willard M. Sheldon, in the June "Sunset Magazine."
