

The Millinery Show

Took the Town by Storm

Wish we could tell all the pretty compliments paid this Millinery Show, or tell just how many fine hats found new and delighted owners. My, what a success, and the splendid show is continued to-morrow. More beautiful hats will be shown from our own designer, fresh from the workroom, and the styles are perfectly charming as everybody knows. Feel free to come and enjoy the show.

GENTRY'S SCHOOL OF RIDING.

A Peculiar and Charming Feature With This Trained Animal Show.

One of the most charming features of the Gentry Brothers' Famous Shows, United, which are to exhibit in Astoria Tuesday, Oct. 8, is the children's school of riding which is held every day between the matinee and evening performances in the main animal tent.

As nearly everyone knows who has in any way followed the fortunes of the Gentry aggregation, the hundreds of ponies, dogs, elephants, camels and other animals with the favorite of all trained animal shows are kept on exhibition in the first tent entered after passing the main entrance, and to many, the opportunity to get on friendly relations with the Gentry happy family is regarded by many as the most pleasant part of a visit to the Gentry shows.

Immediately after the matinee performance all children in the audience are made the guests of the Gentry shows' management and the ponies and dogs, as well as the bigger animals, hold a sort of reception to the younger generation which constitute the most important part of the Gentry clientele. Then follows a scene which certainly cannot be duplicated anywhere else in the tented world. In charge of experienced attendants, all the boys and girls who care to—and nearly all the boys and girls do—are put astride the ponies or mounted high on the elephants and camels and thus enlisted in the ranks of merry-makers, are ridden up and down and around the tents to their hearts content.

If any of the riders get tired of the ponies they can ride the elephants, or if the don't care for the elephants, they can "go to sea" on the camels. At any rate they make a happy throng in the Gentry animal tent and there is only one scene to be compared with it. This is, on a bright afternoon when school is out and the children are free. For then they fill the main tent of the Gentrys from the ground to the topmost seat and buzz and hum and laugh a the monkeys and applaud the ponies and cheer the dogs and have such a thoroughly enjoyable, innocent time as to give ample explanation of the appellation to which the Gentry shows are accustomed: "The Santa Claus of circuses."

GAME NEAR CITY.

Hunters Plod Many Miles And Find the Birds at Home.

Two youthful nimrods, of uncertain age, like the lady of unknown summers, went hunting over the hills from Astoria on Sunday last to see if the reports of this section as a hunting ground were true. One of them carried a high power rifle and the other carried a long-winded shotgun, with plenty of ammunition so as not to miss anything that happened in sight.

Taking the road to Olney they tramped along under the over-powering rays from old Sol, to the music of the chickadees, who impertinently poked fun at them from the bushes lining the road. The perspiration poured from their manly brows as they gazed keenly down the road in search of a stray "bar," or deer.

Nothing happened, however, except the everlasting chirp of the small birds and the occasional squeak of a chipmunk. To tall trees scraped in the light breeze which was blowing and there was a lot of solitude over it all, the chug, chug of the plodding feet of the hunters breaking the silence steadily.

"Where!" said one of the ramrods, "isn't it warm? How far do you think we have come?"

"I should say about 18 miles at least," was the tired response. "I don't see any game. Everything must have gone to sleep."

"Well, let's plug along a little further and we may scare up something."

The hunters proceeded along the road for several miles without seeing anything but a bluejay, which made noise enough to warrant its death. But the footsore plodders had lost interest in finding anything along the road, so they decided to cut across the woods to the pipe line road, about two miles distant.

Now neither of them had any idea of what the undergrowth in an Oregon forest is like, or they might have hesitated. But they started in with the expectation that the vegetation would fade away after they had proceeded a little distance.

Tripping over the dense underbrush, getting scratched by the berry bushes, falling and stumbling into holes in the thick moss, they tumbled along. They had not gone far before they forgot what they had come after. The main point was to get somewhere, and pretty soon, as the heat was "oppressive." The cobwebs and insects added to the pleasure of the outing, as the newspapers would say, and the slough of despond was an easy matter compared to tramping virgin woods in Clatsop county.

After two hours tramping, the two nimrods managed to fall into the pipe line roadway, where they lay exhausted for several minutes. Even the dog they had along could not stand up without help. A refreshing drink from one of the air holes of the pipe which furnishes water for Astoria, helped all parties considerably, and another search for game was started, but with a despondent tread.

After several hours perambulating and speculating the hunters began to saunter at every tree which was white enough to record the place where it was hit. This had more stimulation to it, and it was kept up all the way back to the hill near the waterworks. All the ammunition for the rifle had vanished, leaving sundry holes in trees along the route. Only one charge for the shotgun was left, and that had a bad cap.

The hunters were digging for home, utterly disgusted with the sport, after walking eight or ten miles, when suddenly a covey of about forty quail started up from the bushes, quite close to town. The one shot left brought down one of the birds, and then the nimrods had the supreme pleasure of seeing plenty of game without anything to hit it with. It was the last straw, and their feelings were too deep for utterance as they struck the road leading to Commercial street.

Suddenly three large pheasants flew across the road and lit in a tree fifty feet away. The birds gazed curiously at the pair with the empty guns. Laying the guns aside the nimrods attacked the birds with stones, and after much strenuousness and strong language they managed to make the game fly away.

The moral of the whole thing is that if you desire to shoot, stay at home, for the game lives near the city, same as the fishing, through a hole in the sidewalk.

Big Sale of Furs

R. H. Baldwin, representing Jos. Ullman, of St. Paul, Minn., J. P. Plageman, representing H. Liebes & Co., of San Francisco and Portland, Or., and J. A. Brown, representing The Meland Fur & Wool Company of Minneapolis, Minn., arrived in Astoria yesterday. These gentlemen represent three of the largest fur houses in this country and their object in coming here was to attend the opening of bids for the purchase of a shipment of furs from Alaska. The furs were sent by fur hunters to B. O. Belland to be sold here and Mr. Belland opened the bids. The firm represented by Mr. Brown was successful in securing the shipment. The amount involved could not be learned but will amount to quite a sum of money.

Morning Astorian, 65 cents per month, delivered by carrier.

TRAIN INJURES TWO

MEN

FRANK ALGER HAS LEG CUT OFF AND MAN NAMED WISE BADLY CRUSHED—TAKEN TO PORTLAND FOR TREATMENT.

Two men were badly injured in an accident which occurred at Skamokawa yesterday at noon on the Alger Logging road. One of them was Frank Alger, who was running a logging engine for his father. He had his left leg cut off and a man named Wise was badly crushed and may not recover.

Both of the men were out in the woods attending to the cutting and moving of some heavy timber. At noon they climbed on the logging train to go back to camp for the noon-day meal. In some manner they were knocked off the train and fell between two cars, a wheel running over young Alger's leg, and Wise being badly crushed before the train could be stopped.

They were taken to Cathlamet in a launch, where they had to wait several hours on the dock for the steamer Telegraph to take them to Portland for treatment. Physicians in Cathlamet did all they could for the sufferers, whose recovery is uncertain until they have been operated upon for their injuries.

SUED FOR MONEY.

The Case of Kenney & Gribler vs. Chas. Wise on Trial.

In the circuit court, yesterday, the case of Kenney & Gribler against Chas. Wise was called. J. and A. M. Smith appeared for the plaintiffs and G. C. Fulton for the defendant. A jury consisting of Frank Frazier, Frank Cunningham, George Flavel, L. Millenback, Andrew Birch, Harry Titus, A. Neistrum, B. J. Sloupe, E. M. Grimes, K. Osborn, Wm. Bell and Jas. Irwin was selected and the trial commenced. Some testimony was taken on the part of the plaintiffs but owing to the absence of an important witness all of the testimony for the plaintiffs was not given. The case will be continued to today, and is expected that it will be finished today. The suit is brought for the recovery of $252, paid for work done on the building formerly known as "The Waldorf," and occupied by Wise. Kinney & Gribler, who are the owners of the building, claim that Wise instructed them to have work done on the building and that he would pay for it. Wise refused to pay the bill for that portion of the work which he claims he did not authorize, and, as the contractor threatened to file a lien on the building, if the bill was not paid, they paid the amount to prevent the filing of the lien, and now sue to recover the amount from Wise.

Fire Chief Home Again

Chief Foster has returned from a trip to the Sound country, and is again in harness. He attended a successful convention of fire chiefs, held at Centralia, Wash., and reports the meeting a very successful one. The next convention will be held at Victoria, B. C., in 1908.

The Place To Dine.

Where shall we dine? There should be no question about that. If you have no appetite, but feel that you should dine, drop into the Palace and, if you meet Arthur Smith, ask him to prescribe for you. He'll do it, by laying something tempting before you, and while he does not wish to interfere with physicians, prescribing for dyspepsia, he is in the business to cater to men's stomachs. Try him once and then you will always dine at the Palace.

The Tyler.

The Tyler is still open, and doing a good business too. It was predicted that this resort would be a success and it has proved that the prediction was correct. Clarence Tyler, and his able night manager, Harry Towler, have held the many friends they had, and have made many more since the opening night. Business is always going on there and for an orderly conducted place The Tyler is par excellence. The location, Sixth and Bond streets, is well known.

Relish Aids Digestion.

To eat one meal at the Palace Restaurant is but to continue dining at this popular place. "It is not what one eats, but what one digests," is an old and trite saying, and digestion is aided greatly by a relish for the food one eats. That is the secret of the success of the Palace; good food, well cooked, and tastefully served, makes one relish even the plainest meal served by Arthur Smith, and his obliging employees. At any hour of the day or night you can get anything in his line that the markets afford.

Free Wall Maps.

A large wall map, very complete and carefully printed, exceedingly useful for reference and general information will be furnished free of charge. Apply to G. W. Roberts, agent O. R. & N., Astoria. 8-23-4.
