An Ex-Soldier Tells of His Strange French Duel

George Ringwalt and I were school fellows, and when the Spanish war broke out both ran away from home to enlist, neither of us being eighteen years of age. During the siege of Santiago George was left wounded in an exposed position. I went back and carried him to a safer place. He set great store by an act which I consider only the most natural in the world and declared that he would never rest content till he had repaid the debt. But he did not recover from his wound and in addition contracted typhoid fever, of which he died at Montauk Point. He expired brooding over the fact that he could not live to repay the service I had done him. When I was mustered out of the service I was offered a commission in the regular army, but I decided to study medicine. While taking a finishing course in Paris I unintentionally won the regard of a girl who, unfortunately for me, had a lover already. Had I known of this man's existence I should have endeavored to keep the girl at a distance. The first intimation I had of him was at a supper I was enjoying with a number of my fellow students. A man in passing behind me brushed against me so forcibly as to knock me off my chair. Looking up at him, I saw that his act was intentional. Quick as a flash I sprang at him and knocked him down. Before he could retaliate I was seized by my companions, and my antagonist, throwing a card at me, left the cafe. The card bore the name of Antoine Dupuy, and one of my party informed me that he was the lover of the girl who had honored me. Well, I was obliged to fight him—that is, I saw no way of avoiding meeting him under the Paris code without subjecting myself to a worse fate, for the friend he sent me with a challenge informed me that his principal was bent on killing me, and I preferred to die in a respectable fashion rather than be stabbed in the back. I had little or no training as a shot or a fencer, so I threw dice to decide whether I should choose (I had the right as the challenged party) foils or pistols. The dice said foils, and foils it was. I knew the fellow could do with me what he liked, and, as his second had told me he would kill me, the prospect was gloomy. Before Santiago there had been no more chance of my getting killed than any one else. It was the certainty in the present case I didn't like. Had I not had soldierly instincts and a fair share of pride I believe I would have left Paris by a midnight train. The night before the meeting I was asleep in bed. Suddenly I awoke. There stood George Ringwalt. My first impression was that I had been mistaken in his death. Before I could
