A. B. Hammond, president of the Hammond Lumber Company, has just arrived in this city from Europe, he and Mrs. Hammond having arrived in New York city on the 5th of October. He visited Missoula and other points where he has fixed interests, and then came on to Astoria to take a look at his fine properties here. Mr. Hammond departs on this morning's train for Portland and San Francisco, at which latter city he hopes to greet Mrs. Hammond on her arrival from the East simultaneously with his own.

Everything In Sight—
C. J. Curtis has everything in sight in his race for the Common Council. He has the Republican nomination, the Democrat nomination, and now the Citizens' convention through their committee have thrust their nomination upon his shoulders. All that seems necessary now is for someone to arise and make the motion that it be made unanimous. He is the candidate for the two-year term for the Second ward.

Pulled Him Out—
Yesterday forenoon Messrs. Murray and Bussing of the city fire service at Chemical No. 1, on Bond street were assisted by Miss Davisch, who lives next door to the engine house, that a man was struggling in the water at the slip west of the fire quarters, and they instantly went to his assistance. They found him floundering heavily in the tide and succeeded in hauling him to safety. It seems he had undertaken to go on board his motorboat and caught his foot in the painter, falling into the river before he could extricate himself. He could not swim, a fact which made the service rendered by the three people, of signal value to him.

STRAIGHT FISH TALK FOR THE GILLNETTERS

H. M. Lorntsen Writes an Open Letter to the Oregon State Conservation Commission on the Fish Question.

The following is the text of the letter sent by H. M. Lorntsen, secretary of the Columbia River Fishermen's Union, to R. W. Montague, chairman of the Fish Committee, of the Oregon Conservation Commission, at Portland, detailing the exact status of the salmon industry at present, the responsibility for it, and the way out:

"Dear Sir:—In compliance with your kind invitation to appear before the Oregon Conservation Commission in the interest of our fisheries, and in addition to remarks I may desire to make orally, to file with the Commission, a written statement of fishermen's views in the matter. I wish to say that the salmon of the Columbia River are steadily decreasing, as a result of inability to reach their spawning grounds.

"Everywhere in salmon streams, fishing has been prohibited where the rivers get so narrow that the salmon cannot pass to the spawning grounds. The Columbia River is the only exception to this wholesome rule.

"The Oregon and Washington legislatures for the past 20 years have been appealed to, to stop fishing in the Columbia River at head of tide, but the fishwheel owners always succeeded in defeating the stoppage of fishing in the narrows of the upper Columbia.

"Last June the voters of Oregon decided by a majority of 26,000 that fishing above the Sandy River, that is, above head of tide, shall stop. At the same time, a trick bill introduced for the purpose of defeating bona fide fishery legislation, likewise passed by majority of 6000. The bill to stop fishing above the Sandy River stopped fishing in the upper Columbia; the trick bill practically stops fishing in the lower Columbia.

"We were prepared to bring these two bills before our state courts when we confidentially expected that the trick bill would have been declared in conflict with the true fish bill, and thus annulled.

"The owners of the fishwheels evidently knew this, so when the Oregon Master Fish Warden arrested Osegon and Washington fishermen, the matter was thrown into the Federal court. Washington asked the Federal Judge at Portland to restrain the Oregon Master Fish Warden from interfering with Washington fishermen fishing north of the middle channel in the Columbia River.

"Judge Gilbert granted a temporary injunction to this effect. When later, argument was had before Judge Wolverton, whether this injunction should be made permanent, Attorney General Crawford asked that this injunction extend from shore to shore. The attorney for Washington objected to such extension, and the Judge in rendering his decision, extending the workings of the injunction from shore to shore and making it permanent, specifically states that the attorney for Washington objected to such extension, and that the attorney for Oregon asked for such extension from shore to shore.

"In this connection, wish to say at present, a case settling the state's jurisdiction over the Columbia River in fishery matters is going to the Supreme Court of the United States in the Chris Nelson case; in which case, the Oregon Supreme Court held that Oregon has jurisdiction from shore to shore, against which decision the State of Washington is appealing.

"I am convinced that until a decision is rendered in this case, no legislation for the preservation of the Columbia River salmon that is of any value can be secured or enforced. Therefore, the first thing to be done to preserve our salmon, is to get a decision from the Supreme Court of the United States in the Chris Nelson case. Any assistance you may be able to render in advancing the hearing of this case will therefore be of the greatest importance to salmon protection.

"The order of Judge Wolverton prohibiting Oregon from enforcing its fishery laws in its own waters; an order issued upon the request of the attorney for Oregon should be sought to be amended. Oregon surely should have a right to enforce its own laws in its own waters. If Oregon can do that, the fishwheels on the Oregon shore and these fishwheels catch about 80 per cent of the fish caught in the fishwheel region would have to stop and the up river hatcheries and spawning grounds would again have their fill of spawning salmon.

"Any assistance your Commission can render to this effect will help the preservation of our salmon. Until the fishing in the narrows of the upper Columbia is stopped we fishermen are fully convinced, because we know, that weekly closing laws and other restrictions proposed, are simply for the purpose of getting more fish to the fishwheel owners in the upper Columbia, but with fishing stopped at head of tide, the fishermen will co-operate at any and all times in protective measures.

"I here desire to file literature bearing upon the bill stopping fishing at head of tide in the Columbia, also upon the bill stopping fishing in the lower Columbia.

"You will note that men like Dr. David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford University and Judge Thomas A. McBride, and others gave their active support at the passage of the bill stopping fishing at head of tide. You will also note that the fishwheel owners secured a majority for the trick bill by misrepresentation, and trickery of the most reprehensible kind.

"I am, very respectfully,
H. M. LORNTSEN,
Secretary Columbia River Salmon Protective Association, also Secretary Columbia Fishermen's Union."

Out of Politics—
Judging by the contented smile he wore all day yesterday Dr. Logan is very well satisfied that he is out of the political game entirely for the campaign. Yet some of the doctor's many friends may think that he has not been dealt within the house of his friends just as he might have. But Dr. Logan isn't caring, according to his words and his attitude. The fact that he did not receive a majority of the votes in the race for the four-year term in the council from the Second ward left him out of that race, and he had already tendered his resignation of the nomination for the two-year term given him by the Citizens' convention.

Married At St. Mary's—
A wedding that will attract more than passing interest was that of Samuel L. Bartlett and Miss Sarah McDonough at the rectory of St. Mary's church last evening. Mr. Bartlett is from Brookfield and Miss McDonough is of the well known family of that name across the river. The wedding was held in the rectory of St. Mary's, and was performed by Rev. Father Waters. It was a quiet ceremony and was attended only by the bride's brother, Mr. Phil McDonough and Mrs. A. M. Ford, Miss McCrea and Adrien Ford. Mr. McDonough and Miss McCrea stood up with the bride and groom. The bride was attired very prettily, her costume being net over silk, with veil and orange blossoms. Miss McCrea wore white. After the ceremony the wedding party sat down to a supper. Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett will live at Brookfield, where they will live in their own cosy home.

Died From Diphtheria—
The body of Fred W. Kauppi, the 4-year-old son of Henry Kauppi, a former resident of Astoria, was brought down from Portland yesterday morning for interment in Greenwood cemetery. There were unusual circumstances in connection with the death of the little boy. It appears that the attending physician in Portland reported the cause of death as diphtheria, yet the health department of that city ascertained it to have been diphtheria. While the body was on the train to be brought here, and the father and mother of the dead child were on the train to come here, an officer of the health department appeared and made the mother get off the car and go to her home. The father, after being fumigated, was permitted to continue on his journey. Naturally he was somewhat exercised over the matter, and yesterday, according to friends, he even felt that perhaps the body of the child had been taken from the coffin by the Portland authorities. Therefore before the sealed coffin was placed in the grave he had it opened to make sure his dead boy was there.

The Astorian was in receipt of a communication yesterday in relation to the Irving avenue slide, but inasmuch as the communication was not signed by the name of the writer it cannot be used. It is not necessary that the name be used, in fact the names are never used when the writers wish them not to be published, yet it is imperative that the name of the writer of every communication be known to the editor of the paper. Otherwise it is not possible to publish them. A little thought will probably show everyone that such a rule is imperative.
