The Daily Market Report

PORTLAND, Feb. 19.—Front-street dealers in country dressed meats today reported the market slightly overloaded with veal, and prices as a result were off a fraction, the best moving at 10 cents a pound. Fairly liberal offerings of veal are expected for the next month or two and there is a possibility of a further slight decline.

The market was well supplied with pork, but stocks for the time were not heavy enough to cause any weakness, and yesterday's prices were maintained. In mutton, as usual there was little doing on Front street.

The prospect is for a clean-up in the poultry trade tomorrow. Values in all lines held firmly at the last level today and everything that came in moved readily.

Orange Market Still Firm.
The orange market usually weakens about this time of the year, but this season heavy rains in the South have seriously interfered with picking, packing and shipping operations, and the market generally has held up better as a result. Clear weather is now reported in the orange-growing districts, and the chances are for a freer movement of the fruit from this time on. For the present the market prices are likely to yield somewhat within the next few weeks.

Apples continue to move in a steady way at the prices that have ruled for the past two weeks. In other fruits there were no developments today.

Eggs Are Still Going Down.
Eggs were quoted at 19 to 20 cents in the front-street market today, and shipping orders, which have reduced the surplus to some extent, this week, were not sufficient to effect a clean-up, and the prospect is for a further decline. Practically all the retailers of the city are getting eggs direct from the country, which restricts trade on Front street, so the wholesale markets have to depend largely upon the outside demand. As a consequence of the early rush in egg production and the swift decline in prices storage operations this season may begin earlier than usual.
