WARREN LOADS UP FOR GAME

Coming to Grand Forks Sunday With a Great Aggregation.

Warren baseball team is coming to Grand Forks Sunday when it meets the All-Nations, with the best collection of players that it has assembled this year. The Minnesota team does not figure on losing the game here, and when the lineup is announced the fans can judge for themselves which team will take away the $200.

The All-Nations have been having an easy time winning since they hit North Dakota, and Warren is coming over from across the Minnesota line with money to help the sister state stop the invasion.

Probably the biggest crowd since Grand Forks winning team of 1914 will attend the contest. The local fans will turn out in good force and there will be a delegation from Warren that will rival the one that attends from here.

There is a probability that Donaldson will pitch again. The dusky boy has not worked this week and if he does not he will be put in against the Warren aggregation. If he does go in the Minnesotans are going to have a bad time getting away with the money.

are able to travel about and play the tournaments, and he finds that he is obliged to keep hard at work this year. Moreover, he felt keenly the criticism he met last winter when with his doubles partner, Thomas C. Bundy, he ventured to open a sporting goods business in Los Angeles. His amateur standing had been threatened by a few members of the United States Lawn Tennis association. It is very commonly believed that had not this incident occurred McLaughlin would have been east for the tournament play this summer.

The "comet" made his first impression on the tennis world ten years ago when as a boy he showed the first signs of his dashing game on asphalt courts in San Francisco. His original and brilliant style of play was rapidly developed till in 1914 he perhaps reached his greatest height. It was in that season that he defeated both Brooks and Wilding, the Australian wizards, and was acknowledged the greatest tennis player in the world. A week or so later he lost the national singles to Norris Williams, but kept his stables at Savage, a small town near here. THE MAN BEHIND THE BAT.

You've heard about the valiant man—the man behind the gun. You've seen him pictured every where; you've read of deeds he's done. He well deserves a hero's praise, and yet, in spite of that, just now he has a rival in the man behind the bat. A sturdy sort of fellow he, with nothing much to say. A man who has no grandstand work—who's simply there to play! A man who has a steady nerve; the quickness of a cat; a lump of "chewin'" in his check—this man behind the bat!

He sizes every batter up and while he's stooping low, he tells the pitcher with a sign what sort of ball to throw. He bears the brunt of every game and does it with a smile. And yet he gets but little praise—the pitcher gets a pile. He knows the way to swing a stick and often gets a hit. He's there at almost every turn, yet few will think of it. You seldom find that he's a man whose head outgrows his hat. So, while you're cheering don't forget the man behind the bat.

Minnesota, July 13.—Failure to land Pitcher George Dumont for the Millers from the Washington club has sent President Mike Cantillon hiking telegrams in other directions and a S. O. S. greeting on every one he sends out. Dumont is a Minneapolis boy who made a good showing with the Senators early in the season, but of late Manager Griffith has been using him as a bench polisher and President Mike thought he would look very ornamental in a Minneapolis uniform just at present. Griffith was willing to loan him, but double-headers looming up ahead of the Washington club caused him to wobble when it came to sending him here.

The Millers are in urgent need of another pitcher. Bentley does not seem to be able to stop them or turn them back and Cashion is a very uncertain bet when he mounts the mound. This has been throwing the bulk of the work on Burk and Yingling and they are in danger of strain or staleness if they attempt to overwork. Sandy Burk's brother, a left-handed youngster, has been signed for arm and is expected to jump right into the thickest of the fray at once.

Mutt Williams is in Indianapolis and joined the Millers at the Hoosier hangout. He is just about recovered from his indisposition incident to a light attack of blood poisoning in his arm and is expected to jump right into the thickest of the fray at once.

Plant a row of carrots along that ugly wall, and their pretty fern-like tops will completely hide its ugliness. In front of the carrots plant your flower seeds, such as pinks, phlox, poppies, petunias, etc. The carrot tops will make a beautiful, feathery background for your flowers. In the fall the carrots may be utilized in soup, pie, pickles, conserve, croquettes, jam, etc. Indeed, the home-grown carrot may be made to "thasom like the rose."—Farm and Home.
