It Can't Be Done.
The man who misses all the fun
Is he who says "It can't be done!"
In solemn pride he stands aloof
And greets each venture with reproof.

Had he the power, he'd efface
The history of the human race;
We'd have no steam nor trolley cars.

No streets lit by electric stars;
No telegraph nor telephone,
We'd linger in the age of stone.

Where when some keen barbaric brain
Of life's conditions dared complain,
And planned a wheel on which to roll
The load his arms could not control,
Eneers rose from all the mighty crew

That ever scoffs at what is new.
The world would sleep if things were run
By men who say: "It can't be done!"

FIRST MEASURE OF CONSCRIPTION
Wellington, N. Z., July 25.—The first conscription measure in the British overseas dominions was virtually placed on the statute book on June 11, when the military service bill passed its third reading in the house of representatives with only four votes in opposition. Though the bill has to pass the upper house, it is considered as good as passed.

During the debates the government described the bill as one providing for compulsory service when voluntary enlistment fails, that is, the voluntary system will continue but it will be backed up by a scheme of compulsory service, thereby insuring the number of reinforcements the country is required to send away every four weeks.

The minister for defense, Col. J. Allen, pointed out that under the new bill no class of men was exempt, because that had proved to be a mistake in England.

The few laborites in the house opposed the bill. One of them, P. Webb, declared that since New Zealand had provided 60,000 men out of her population of a million, it was an insult to the country to say that the voluntary system had failed. In England
