THE COBBLER'S MYSTERY.

New York Sun: My shop is down cellar (said the shoemaker) and as I never had time to paint a sign it is hard to tell that a shop is there at all.

One morning in the spring while I was working at my bench I heard something fall on the stairs and when I went out to see what it was I found I went out there was a little paper package. Nobody came for it and at noon I opened it and found two nice sandwiches and a pickle. I gave the package to the policeman, what he thought and did not do, so I knew it was not the Black Hand at work.

The next morning at the same time I heard the same noise and there was another package just like the first except that instead of a pickle there was a banana. I did not visit the dog that noon, for I am a poor man.

The third morning I was waiting and when I heard the package fall on the steps I ran quietly up and nobody was in sight but a girl hurrying as girls do who are going to the subway on their way to work. The next morning I peeked out in time to see her drop the package on the stairs. She did it quickly and almost without moving her hand. I knew she had put it there and I was sure it was a package.

THE BEST ROAD OF ALL.

A road that leads away to prospects white and fair,
I love it better than the road like a man's evening prayer;
But, best of all, I love a road that leads to God knows where.

You come upon it suddenly—you cannot seek it out.
It's like a secret still unheard and never noised about;
But when you see it, at once is every lurking doubt.

It winds beside some rushing stream
It follows many a broken field;
It seems to lead you on and on, forever and forever!

You tramp along its dusty way, beneath its shadowy trees,
And hear beside you chattering birds and all around you golden sounds, the green leaves' litanies.

And here's a hedge, and there's a cot; and then—strange, sudden turns:
A dip, a rise, a little glimpse where the red sunset glimmers;
A bit of sky at evening tide, the scent of hidden ferns.

A winding road, a leitering road, a finger mark of God
Traced when the Maker of the world over ways untrod.
See! Here He smiles His glowing smile, and to the goldenrod!

I like a road that wanders straight; the king's highway is fair;
And lovely are the sheltered lanes that take you here and there;
But, best of all, I love a road that leads to God knows where.
