DR. COLES ON TIMELY TOPICS

Speaking on City Problems Discussed Strike Sunday Evening.

Dr. C. E. Coles on Sunday began a series of sermons on local conditions which is arousing a great deal of interest among residents of the city. It is Dr. Coles' purpose to consider scenes in the life of Christ and to apply them to practical modern problems. The theme yesterday noon was "The Healing of the Leper." He mentioned some forms of moral leprosy which appear to be growing all over the country and which are particularly virile in frontier cities.

Dr. Coles stated that since his return to the city he has received complaints from both sides of the river and from the adjacent territory, relative to conditions in East Grand Forks. He mentioned no names but described certain citizens of the town which were engaged, he said, in nefarious traffic. Dr. Coles intimated that he intended to take up other phases of the problem in following sermons in this series.

Last evening, Dr. Coles spoke on the strike situation, having for his topic, "A Railroad Strike Justifiable?" He made the point that the laborer must not lose his soul in labor, but must protect his physical life, must find time for the development of his home and family and must develop his mind and spirit. The sermon was decidedly sympathetic to the demands of the workman, and striking was justified on the grounds that this was the only organized method for effecting desired results after peaceful means had been exhausted.

HANDCAR HIT BY TRAIN—BOYS LEAP

Grand Forks Boys Have Narrow Escape Near City Saturday.

Two Grand Forks boys spent Sunday in the city in escape as the result of an escapade in which they figured on Saturday.

Saturday morning the boys, it is said, stole a ride on a freight train as far as Crookston, where they got off and spent the day about the city. Toward evening they decided to return to Grand Forks, but since there were no trains going that time, it is alleged they went to the Great Northern yards, where they took a hand car and started off.

When about a mile or so out of East Grand Forks the boys suddenly met the Duluth train which had just pulled out of the city. They both jumped from the car and escaped injury. The next moment the engine hit the hand car and demolished it.

East Grand Forks police were notified of the act of the youngsters and an officer was sent out after them. They were put in the jail Saturday evening, and will be tried some time today, it is expected.

SCHOOLS TO OPEN TOMORROW MORNING

East Grand Forks city schools will open tomorrow morning for the 1916-17 term, with a greatly increased enrollment over past year. A complete renovation of the school buildings has been completed, together with repairs and added equipment for the industrial department.

Many improvements which will greatly increase the efficiency of the schools are under way, among them the new building for the high school, the plan in the seventh and eighth grades. The industrial classes will be extended. All told, present plans promise a most successful program throughout the school year.

Due to the threatened railroad strike, practically all of the out-of-town teachers arrived in the city by Sunday morning.

Slight changes in the curriculum of the high school have been made, with a view to giving the student more time to literary work and industrial subjects. A large number of students, greatly increased over past years, are enrolled in the normal training department.

One Vag Today. Only one occupant of the city jail will appear today, Robert Blair today. His name is A. Stevens and he is charged with vagrancy.

Editorial

As the horse and steam engine have yielded to electricity, so has "old fogey" in store keeping given way to the sane and more sensible store service, which here admits of:

But one standard of quality—the best of its kind for the selling price. But one method of displaying goods—plain, honest, full daylight. But one way of dealing with the customer—giving straight and courteous attention. Maybe these truths are the levers that have lifted this store out of the hard bound limitations of the age-old "Dry Goods Store" customs and placed it where it seems to us it ought to be, namely in step with progress. "Old fogeyism" was all right in its day—so were the horse and steam engine, but this is an age of advancement in store keeping as well as in Science and the Arts.

IRISH HOME RULE DELAY IS CHARGED TO TORY LANDLORD

Marquis of Lansdowne.

London, Sept. 4.—Both sides in the Irish home rule controversy, once more in an acute stage, recognize that the Marquis of Lansdowne, powerful noble, great landlord, veteran member of the coalition government, himself an Irishman and whose 148,000 acres include property in seven Irish counties, is responsible for the unexpected crisis which threatens the settlement that the whole world supposed had at last been reached between the followers of John Redmond and those of Sir Edward Carson.

"Lord Lansdowne's carriage blocks the way," bluntly declares the Daily Mail, one of the leading organs of the Irish conservative party's own party, while another of them, the Daily Express, admits that "certain Tory ministers have gone out of their way to create unnecessary difficulties."

The other Tory ministers concerned include Lord Middleton, the former Sir John Broderick, who succeeded Lord Lansdowne at the war office, and Lord Hugh Cecil, son of the great Lord Salisbury and brother of the present minister of blockade; but the man who matters in the crisis is Lord Lansdowne, whose lifelong opposition to home rule for Ireland appears to be less strong than his concern over a possible party advantage in the future.

The wrecking clause he and his supporters in the cabinet insisted in having introduced into the home rule bill negates the original agreement that the Irish members of the house of commons were to remain in undiminished strength there until a permanent settlement of the home rule question had, after the war, been arrived at.

This is everywhere recognized as a purely party move. The Irish members, as everybody knows, now hold the balance of power in the house. Previous to the declaration of the political truce, owing to the war, they kept the liberal government in office. Were their numbers to be again appreciably reduced by the time the truce ends, the conservatives would be the beneficiaries. That is generally admitted to be the motive for Lord Lansdowne's flat, which has undone the work of Lloyd-George as mediator and fanned the factional differences in Ireland into flame again.

The Marquis of Lansdowne, who thus holds the balance between unity and disruption in the land of his ancestors, is now 71. All his life he has opposed home rule. Like Joseph Chamberlain and the late Duke of Devonshire, the uncle of the new governor general of Canada, he was originally a liberal, but quitted the party of Gladstone and of Asquith rather than acquiesce in its home rule policy. For the last quarter of a century he has been, perhaps the most powerful opponent of self-government in Ireland, since for that time he has been, and still is, the supreme power in the cabinet of the unionist party, but of the powerful unionist majority in the house of lords.
