As the Prairies Change to Gold.
There's a solemn touch of beauty E'en when winter spreads its white On the hill and in the valley.
From its fairy looms and bright, There's a stillness deep and halting Hanging on the biting air, That tones the austere picture And makes it coldly fair.

But there comes a richer splendor When the vernal season dawns, And an emerald carpet covers Range and meadow, vales and lawns.

And the youngsters and their elders Chant Dame Nature's holy mass
As they kneel among the blossoms Bejeweling the grass.

Yet the final glory's lacking Till the sunshine kisses all That the white and green have given Ere it pass beyond recall.
Till, as though a kindly scepter, Brought from magic days of old,
Has been waved about the prairies, Crowning them with priceless gold.

—Will Chamberlain.

Proper care of the "first set" or deciduous teeth of children is very important as an aid to good health.
When decay commences in these teeth children should be taken to the dentist promptly before toothache and suffering occurs. If this is done these teeth may be filled without causing or giving them cause to dread the dentist's operation.—Ad.

SATISFACTION IN WASHINGTON IS FELT

of negotiations since last August 1 as well as a copy of the Adamson bill, was being mailed to all members of the Brotherhood last night. After completing this work Mr. Lee left for his home in Cleveland. The other three Brotherhood heads will leave this today or Tuesday.

The railroad executives called here by the president left Saturday. Virtually all of the thirteen general chairmen who remained here as members of the committee of twenty-four also have gone home.

Among those who departed from Washington early yesterday was a delegation of the Order of Railway Conductors from the northwest who came here Saturday to protest against a strike. They arrived about the time the senate was in the last stages of passing the bill which will give them ten hours pay for eight hours work and called on Mr. Garretson. He declined to discuss the conference which followed.

THE DANDELION CURE.
Some individuals have much more competent ductless gland apparatus than others. If the ductless glands functionate actively, their secretions destroy poisons circulating through the body, and so the individual can stand a considerable degree of autoin-toxication without feeling the usual symptoms. But if the poisoning goes on for a considerable period, the ductless glands will eventually shirk their duty, and then the individual suffers from a heavy burden, and the spring fever comes on with all its melancholy symptoms. It is a pretty well established fact that a highly nitrogenous diet, especially a meat diet, places a heavy strain upon the ductless gland function than a carbohydrate or vegetarian diet; some people can stand it longer than others—that is all. If they last through into summer they escape spring fever.

And now for the remedy. Every old man knows that green garden trunk—lettuce, onions, radishes, green beans, green peas, spinach, dandelion and other greens—is good for the blood. The spring vegetables are good because they fill the bowel with indigestible cellulose and tend to increase motility or relieve blood stagnation there, and also because the carbohydrate contains a poor medium for bacillus and allied parasites which produce the poisons of autoin-toxication and spring fever.

This is the Italian immigrant woman of the peasant class who appears in your doorway with her rooting knife upon the first faint suggestion of spring is answering the call of the blood. All winter she and her family have hungered for something bulky and green, and now, with her apron full of aromatic officinals, commonly called "those pesky dandelions," she will serve her family a dish that will do far more good than any spring tonic they could buy in a bottle.

WHAT THE SEA FIGHT INVOLVED (Springfield Republican.) In one way the very costliness of the great sea fight may help England.
If its allies have been thinking that to keep the mastery of the sea was a "soft snap" they know better now.
Intelligent people, of course, even if they know little of the sea, cannot fail to appreciate that the British fleet is the corner stone of the whole military structure of the allies; if it should fall, everything would fall.
Germany, in addition to its own tremendous advantages, would have all those heretofore enjoyed by its opponents. It could move troops and supplies freely by sea and intercept those of hostile powers; it could clear the seas and send out its superb ships to take over the commerce of its enemies; it could market its manufactures and import food and raw material, releasing many workers now busy with make-shifts, and the credit raised at home could easily be supplemented by foreign loans. Its position would be inexpugnable.
But that is only a small part of what would happen. The British fleet destroyed, England would in a short time be starved into submission on Germany's terms. Without British financial aid the allies could not continue the war, for all sources of credit would dry up. There would be nothing for it but to sue for peace, and the terms would be meant to make sure that German supremacy could never again be challenged.
If Yuan Shi Kai were alive it's a cinch he'd be also kicking.
