IN SCHOOL DAYS.

Still sits the school house by the road. A ragged beggar sunning. Around it still the sumachs grow And blackberry vines still running.

Within the master's desk is seen, Deep scarred with raps official, The warping floor, the battered seats, The jack knife's scarred initial.

The charcoal frescoes on the wall: Its door's worn sill betraying, The feet, that creeping slow to school, Went storming out to playing.

Long years ago a winter sun Shone over it at setting; Lit up its western window panes, And low eaves lay fretting.

It touched the tangled golden curls, And brown eyes full of grieving, Of one who still her steps delayed, When all the school were leaving.

For near her stood the little boy Her childish favor singled; His cap pulled low upon his face Where pride and shame were mingled.

Pushing with restless feet the snow To right and left he lingered; And restlessly her tiny hands The blue checked apron fingered.

He saw her lift her eyes; he felt The soft hand's light caressing, And heard the tremble of her voice, As if a fault confessing.

I'm sorry that I spelt the word; I hate to go above you, Because, the brown eyes lower fell-- Because, you see, I love you.

Still memory to a gray haired man That sweet child face is showing, Dear girl the grasses on her grave Have forty years been growing.

He lives to learn, in life's hard school How few who pass above him; Lament their triumph and his loss, Like her--because they love him. John Greenleaf Whittier.

QUEEN MARY HONORS AMERICAN DUCHESS

Duchess of Roxburgh.

London, Sept. 9.—The Duchess of Roxburgh, formerly Miss May Ogden Golet of New York, has been offered the position of mistress of robes to the British queen, according to reports in court circles, and incidentally the gossips are discussing how the giddy London, anathema in the sober lexicon of the American duchess, has proved a passport to royal favor in the case of the American duchess.

Not that her race of Roxburgh danced the dreaded thing—Oh, no! Quite the contrary. When the "Tango war" which resulted from Queen Mary's denunciation of the dance had run its British society and when most of the leading women of London's most exclusive set were leagued against their sovereign in defense of the new gyration, the American duchess, who followed the queen's example, forbade the tango and even closed her doors to those who danced it.
