

RELIGION PART OF PREPAREDNESS

Declares Dr. Arlo Brown in Address at University Convocation.

Dr. Arlo Brown, head of the teachers' training department of the Sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal church, was the speaker at the regular convocation of the University this morning.

President F. L. McVey presided and read the 14th chapter of First Corinthians as the Scripture for the morning. Professor W. W. Norton contributed a harpison solo, "Less Than the Dust," a composition by Woodford-Finden, the oriental composer.

Dr. Brown chose as his subject "National Preparedness in One of Its Phases." His special theme was the relation of religion to national preparedness. He pointed out that at the beginning of the war von Hindenburg stated that the war would be won by the nation whose men had the strongest nerve. All agree that the nation with the most sober, industrious, and intelligent population stands the best show in the conflict of a world.

A government stands or falls with the character of the people who are the citizens, declared Dr. Brown. America is now in the stage where it is putting its dependence on enlightened self-interest. Movements which seem to get a following indicate the tendency of the nation. The old theory that "might makes right" is still to be found in the doctrines of "unselfish labor." To oppose this America has one outstanding force, the public school. In order to do this successfully educators must learn that the student must do more than instruct the intelligence, it must fashion the affections and the will to live in harmony with the laws of nature. There is only one thing that can do this, and that is the doctrine of love.

Dr. Brown said that the three great factors in the forming of the country today are state education, socialism, and religious education. The first has a passion for efficiency, which must be mixed with an interest in things. The power of the second is in its motive, rather than its economic force. And the third will find its strongest force in the new type of Sunday school. The methods used in the Sunday school are now a thing of the past and some more efficient service can now be rendered.

Dr. Brown will be the speaker at the vesper service at Corwin hall Sunday evening at 6:45.

ROUTE OUTLINED FOR NEW ROAD

Red River Valley Railroad Marks Right of Way to Fargo—Extends North.

That Grand Forks will soon have a third railroad line extending between Fargo and Winnipeg, now is assured, as the right of way between this city and Fargo has been outlined and purchased by the Red River Valley Railroad company, marking the first step of the actual operations looking toward construction.

The route, it is stated, will parallel the Great Northern line. Definite details cannot be learned, although it is certain that active preparations are now under way to continue with the work.

Engineers have been working on the line for some time and now have the plans well under way. The Red River Valley Railroad company has been organized for some time and it is expected that the line running northward will be extended to Winnipeg.

That two other railroad companies will extend their lines to Grand Forks in the near future, is the belief of prominent business men. The Soo, which comes within 20 miles of the city probably will be the first to tap the city and a road from the southwest is expected to be planned.

With the Northern Packing company plant nearly a realization, demanding more adequate railroad facilities, lines extending through the northwest are anxious to share in the business that is bound to result from the large shipments. The lines will tap practically every section of the state, making Grand Forks a center unequalled in the middle west.

TAKE TRUSTY TO JAMESTOWN

Man Who Has Stayed at the County Jail for Year to Enter Insanity Hospital.

For nearly one year Jacob Kester has made his home at the Grand Forks county jail, sleeping behind the bars with criminals, yet given his liberty during the day. Late last fall Kester was taken into custody by the county officials, as a complaint had been made, charging him with insanity.

He was taken before the county board for a hearing and was given an examination. He appeared to be bright and intelligent, but told a rambling story of a murder, and intimated that he was waiting to assist with the investigation. All efforts of the officials to obtain a clear account of the matter, pending developments.

Months passed and his mind did not clear. As he was industrious and showed no sign of being mentally unbalanced, he was offered his freedom, but he refused to accept it. Efforts to induce him to take up any occupation that he might choose, were of no avail and as often as he was given his freedom, as often did he return.

He took complete charge of the court house lawns and worked incessantly to beautify the surroundings, cutting the grass, weeding flower beds and sweeping the sidewalks. He asked for no compensation, other than permission to sleep behind the bars and to share the lot of the prisoners. Officials claim that he earned his board and room many times over.

Today he will be taken to Jamestown and will be held at the state insanity hospital where every effort will be made to restore him to a normal state of mind.

Kester did not wish to leave Sheriff Turner and the deputies, whom he regards as his close friends, but he was induced to depart with the aid of a physician, who came here to take A. P. Anderson, who would be kept at Jamestown as a patient. The guard assured county officials that Kester would be given many liberties at the institution.
