SCARCITY OF MALES AFTER THE WAR DOES NOT WORRY ELSIE JANIS

New York, Oct. 24.—Much has been said of late about the growing scarcity of men in Europe, and of the millions of women who must so long live unmarried because of the war. Elsie Janis, the popular actress who has just returned from London, where she spent most of her time during the past two years, sees no particular reason why women should worry.

Elsie Janis.

"No, I'm not afraid that there aren't going to be men enough in the world to go around even if I have been in Europe and seen how things were going there," says Miss Janis. "Perhaps that is one of the very reasons why I do not look forward with dismay to the time when men, indeed, the men did not seem scarce in England.

"You know that a lot of men had gone, but there were so many left. You see such a lot of boys, all with their chins out and going to keep them out until they get things settled the way they want them, that you think all the time what a lot of fine fellows there are in the world, and you can't worry very much about there not being as many husbands as may be desired, especially when there is such a lot of marrying going on all about you."

"Women do not seem so particular as in ordinary times. The woman who would ordinarily look for a colonel or a man or will now welcome a 'sub.' And the men who have been in the 'not a marrying man' class have all taken to themselves brides. I know of a man, very rich and with a title in the family, who had thought of matrimony only as a possibility of the far future. Suddenly he had a face going to the front. He met a girl whom he liked on a morning and married her the same day. The next day he joined his regiment.

"The 'Tommy' has married, almost a man, if they were unmarried. The Canadian who went to marrying before leaving home that it was hard for a pretty girl to escape a husband, it is said that there will be a lot of divorces, and that may add to the marriageable possibilities of the future.

"A man have more than one wife? I don't think so. Napoleon lost 500,000 men on the Moscow expedition, which is a lot more, in proportion to the population, than that many would be now, and France survived without abandoning monogamy. Women won't be fighting over the men. They have many other things to do.

"It's foolish for men and women in the United States to bother about it. There's enough trouble without that. And my faith that all over the world men and women are going to go along pretty much as they have for many a day and year and the gaps will be filled up while we are talking about it is very strong."

Women Convicts in Russia Now Treated Like Guests

(By Bassett Digby.)
Petrograd, Oct. 24.—Prison conditions in Russia are getting better. General Krasovskiy, the director of the chief women's penitentiary of Moscow.

Here the "guests," as they like to be called, have running water in every room. Each cell has electric light, too, to enable the inmate to read after the day's work, the books are borrowed from the library. If she cannot read she is taught to.

Teaching Them to Read.
The advisory committee of the prison maintains a school at which illiterate inmates are taught to read and write for two hours a day. The library contains numerous books by foreign authors.

There are 254 women in the penitentiary, seventy-four being political prisoners who presently are to go into exile. Some of them were brought from fish prisons during the evacuation of the prisoners from the Baltic states, "women who sold noxious semi-poisonous intoxicating drinks.

BRITISH TRADE BANK PLANNED

Suggested as Means of Dealing With Post-Bellum Problems.

(Associated Press Correspondence.)

London, Oct. 24.—The most definite attempt to deal with the financial side of the trade problems that will arise after the war is proposed by the departmental committee which suggests the establishment of a British trade bank under royal charter, with a capital of ten millions sterling and a first issue of from two and a half millions to five millions, a further issue being made afterwards, if possible at a premium.

The bank would not accept deposits at call or notice and only open current accounts for parties who propose to make use of the overseas facilities which it would afford.

The bank would enter into banking agency arrangements with existing colonial or British-foreign banks, and the trade banks of the world or agencies where no British-foreign bank of importance exists.

Where desirable the bank would cooperate with the merchant and manufacturer and possibly accept risks upon joint account, and would become a center for syndicate operations, availing itself of the special knowledge which would possess through its information bureau.

In leading up to its conclusions the committee says that from a careful study of the evidence taken and knowledge of banking arrangements and facilities, there exist to a considerable extent at the present time in this country the machinery and facilities for the financing both of home trade and of large overseas contracts and for carrying through much of the business which has been done by foreign banks.

"The British banks afford, we believe, liberal accommodation to the home producer," the report proceeds. "Similarly the colonial banks and British-foreign banks and banking houses render immense assistance to British trade abroad and certainly in the Far East and many parts of South America banking facilities do not fall short of those of any other nation. We find also that in the case of large contracts the operation of British contractors, with the assistance of financial houses, have in the past been ready to provide large amounts of the capital and to do considerable works in connection with the operations which they have undertaken.

"Our arrangements are faulty in our no co-ordinating many of the facilities mentioned. We recognize also that the British manufacturers may be frequently in want of finance of a large nature for the operation of their plants with facilities above described could not adequately provide, whereas the German banks in particular seem to have been able to afford special assistance of the kind mentioned under takings of the most varied description and to have laid themselves out for stimulating their promotion and for carrying them to a successful completion.

"The trade bank would in many ways be beneficial to the development of British industry and commerce.

Kazimira O., a lively girl with a simple face, was sentenced in 1908 to be hanged for attempting to assassinate the Russian governor of Warsaw, Scalon. The sentence was remitted to one of life imprisonment.

In the grassy court yard of the penitentiary play twenty or thirty children, whose mothers are convicts within the walls. Nurses look after them.

The women work from 7 a. m. until 6 p. m. with a break of two hours for dinner and half an hour for a walk. They work mainly at sewing machines and in a laundry.

Their Work Profitable.
Each woman earns about 60 to 60 kopecks (25 to 30 cents) daily, half of which she is allowed to spend on little canteen luxuries and half is retained until her term is up. Many women leave the prison with 100 rubles ($50), ample to set a peasant up in business.

When they leave the advisory committee keeps an eye on them. Those who have relatives or friends go into a home maintained by the committee, while looking for work.

It might in certain cases after careful examination agree to make advances for the extension of existing manufacturing plants or perhaps for the amalgamation or coordination of certain works so as to reduce the cost of production. It would assist these works to obtain orders abroad and give them reasonable financial facilities for executing these orders.

"If financial assistance is given by the government to undertakings in connection with what are known as 'key' industries, the business should, if possible, be done through the medium of the institution, and it should be appointed an agent for carrying through the foreign commercial and financial transactions in which the government is interested."

Among many other suggestions is one for an up-to-date information department which will be independent of the commercial intelligence department of the board of trade but in close touch with it. This bureau should organize and keep up to date the status of firms abroad. It should secure the earliest information from abroad of new business openings, large contracts offering state and other loans and issue proposals.

The scheme has been fairly well received in commercial and banking circles.

Baby's Eyes Worth $25,000 Decides a San Francisco Court

San Francisco, Oct. 23.—The value of a baby's eyes was fixed at $25,000 here yesterday by Judge Frank J. Murasky in superior court, who gave judgment for that amount to the parents of Mary Rubio, 1-year-old, against Mrs. Amalia Razuoli, a graduate midwife. It was alleged the midwife failed to care for the baby's eyes properly at birth and now the eyes are sightless.

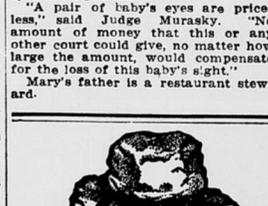

"A pair of baby's eyes are priceless," said Judge Murasky. "No amount of money that this or any other court could give, no matter how large the amount, would compensate for the loss of this baby's sight."

Mary's father is a restaurant steward.
