IMPROVED MENTALLY GOES TO CROOKSTON

Dave Fitzpatrick, the demented man taken in charge by local police following his strange actions on the street, has gone to Crookston after spending several days at the local jail here. Fitzpatrick left unwillingly, having formed a strange attachment for the police and the warm quarters of the jail.

An examination into his mental condition was followed by the recommendation that he be allowed to go his way. Though he had not entirely recovered, his mind was so far improved that officials saw no reason to commit him for insanity, inasmuch as he has money in the bank at Crookston and a homestead in the Mud Lake region, where he stated he was going to spend the winter. As he was harmless and there was no danger of his becoming a county charge, he was liberated.

Fitzpatrick's was one of the queerest cases which have come to his notice, Chief Albert Hurst said today. When picked up here, he was accusing pedestrians and asking them to kneel on the streets and join him in prayer. At the jail he stated that he was the inventor of a soul-saving machine. He had, he said, been in heaven and in Ireland, and acknowledged that he had, as he expressed it, a soft spot in his brain.

When asked if he had ever been an inmate of an asylum, he stated that the only asylum he had ever been in was a saloon. He was given the liberty of the jail and freedom to come and go as he wished, inasmuch as efforts to locate relatives have failed, Fitzpatrick being unwilling, it appeared, to have them know of his condition. Crookston officials will watch the man.

THOMPSON THEFT STILL A MYSTERY

Investigation of the Tom Thompson horse stealing case by the local authorities so far has revealed no solution of the mystery. The team and outfit has disappeared completely, and no trace of it has been discovered, though police officials of the northern end of the state, on the border and in Minnesota have been on a constant lookout.

Thompson's team and wagon, containing a case of beer and a red greyhound dog was stolen from the First State bank corner several weeks ago, and Thompson afterward swore out a

John Doe warrant for a Swede, whom he claims to have suspected of the crime. Authorities here believe there are several facts in the case which need explaining.

A Marvel banker, shortly after the theft, came here and exhibited a chattel mortgage which he had on the team, and it is understood to entertain the theory that an effort was made to dispose of his property by the simple process of making away with it by night.
