MELLIPLIOUS MORRIS.

Several months ago a little sign painter named Charley Morris was arrested by Deputy Constable Cline on a warrant issued by Justice Twichell, of Santa Monica, charging him with obtaining money from A. K. Sessions, of Santa Monica, by means of a forged order. Morris was held to answer, and in default of bail took up his residence at the County Jail. By his smooth ways and by making himself very useful in the jailor's office, he ingratiated himself with Jailor Mannon to such an extent that he finally ruled the jail and everybody connected with it. Numbers of prisoners who stood well with Morris had the freedom of the halls, but those who by the character of their offense or their good behavior deserved such a favor happened to be disliked by Morris, were locked up in unpleasant cells and in unpleasant company. Morris had charge of everything—books, accounts, prisoners' money and prisoners' belongings. A short time ago Mr. Mannon left for St. Louis, with his wife, on leave of absence. Deputy Sheriff Russell was appointed acting jailer by Sheriff Kays. This gentleman discovered that Morris had a key to the back door of the jail. This was taken away from him. But Morris had other keys, both for everything inside of the prison and also one by which he could regain his liberty at a moment's notice. This was the key of the padlock to the window of the coal cellar. No one knew that he had it in his possession until yesterday morning, when it was discovered that during the night Morris had unlocked the grating shaken from his shoes the dust of the County Jail cellar, and some fourth in the world once more. It is presumed that he stole a lot of the money belonging to prisoners which was left in his care. It is positively known, however, that he took away with him a lady's gold watch belonging to Constable Aguirre which had been entrusted to him to paint a miniature on the dial. Morris was seen at 1 o'clock on Saturday morning by a young man named Tom Smith at the New Depot. His trial was set for the 6th instant and his conviction was pretty certain. His escape is a case of ingratiation. But for the kind treatment of Jailor Mannon a fellow wretch never have had an opportunity of making the money he did by painting signs and portraits and making more of it than he could out of jail. In repayment he escaped. An examination of the jail books will be made this morning to see what Morris has carried off with him.

Burglary on Ninth Street. R. D. Herman, a carpenter who is at work on a house in the course of construction on Ninth street near Grand avenue, has been sleeping in the barn back of the house. In his trunk were some new clothes, a $20 piece and a Sharpe's four-shooter. Yesterday noon Herman went down town, the barn being then locked. When he returned at 1 the barn door had been broken open and the top of the trunk pulled off. A drunken man who had been hanging around the building is suspected of having been the burglar, and as the police have a good description of him he may be arrested.

Personal Mention. M. J. Strickland, of Santa Ana is visiting this city. G. W. McPherson, of San Francisco, is at the Nadeau. W. R. Burrows, of San Carlos, Arizona, is at the St. Charles.

REAL ESTATE.

COMBINATION LAND CO. SPECIAL No. 4. "The old oligarchy of Greece now abolished. They were old and genial and fond of the arts. Their manners were refined, their manners were polished. But their manner of living affects their hearts. They neglected their business, they gave themselves to wine, to the chase, to the hunt. They neglected the poets in Greek, headed their wine, took their rest. Never from the beautiful heads with affairs. And as for their morals—the least said is soonest mended. The scandal grew greater and greater; and then an appeal to the people was formally made. The old gods were banished by the majority of men. And a popular government formed in their stead."

But time rolls around, and Athena and Juno and Aphrodite and Hebe and Flora and Crete. And a dozen or more Heathen women whom you know. Each finds work at LEUCADIA, naming a street.

The lyre that in Hades once twanged for Eurydice. Now hangs in LEUCADIA, Queen of our Coast. And the lyre tells the truth when it says "er'fore did I see a place where the truth seems a lie and a boast."

Where else is a spot where the fig and the pumpkin will grow side by side without water or care. And each visitor feel as if he were some kin to a bird when he breathes the electrical air?

If a man has a hundred or two hundred hands. He will buy a lot there, not a day will he be idle. For LEUCADIA the lovely, the darling, the dearest.

For the brightest and neatest young town in the State. For climate, for health, for beauty or business. LEUCADIA we praise in Hexameters slow. Let our readers with eyes be closed to a doubt.

Attend at the auction and bid with a bow. There are hundreds of thousands of acres of land for sale in the San Bernardino and San Diego counties, suitable for orchards and vineyards.

But there is only one seaside, and only one LEUCADIA. There are hundreds of thousands of acres now dry and uncultivated, which can be made into a beautiful and fertile garden. There is only one strip of land which fronts the sea, only one fundamental chord upon which the surges of ocean sound their mighty diapason, only one place where Dame Nature has so graciously bestowed her bounty, and cause air to undulate with verdure.

M. HILTON WILLIAMS, M. D., No. 275 N. Main Street, LOS ANGELES, CAL.

A few doors South of the Postoffice. THE TERM CATARRH IS APPLIED TO A peculiar disorder of the nostrils and adjacent parts, which characterizes the disease in extent, and is productive of very serious consequences.

The most prominent and characteristic feature is a morbid discharge from the head varying in its nature at different times. In some there is an almost constant flow of clear, acid fluid, but often an offensive, purulent or mucous-purulent, greenish-yellow matter is secreted, which accumulates in the nostrils or drops into the throat, necessitating its frequent removal by blowing the nose or expectoration.

Sometimes patients feel as though their head was in a state of rotting, and so great is the amount of matter discharged and so fetid is its odor. The patient is greatly annoyed by the constant dripping into the throat of the morbid matter from the head, and as a recurrent position naturally favors the slow downward flow, his rest is frequently disturbed from this cause. Many sufferers are obliged to lie with the head very much elevated in order to sleep with some degree of comfort.

In others a tough, viscid and offensive phlegm collects behind and above the soft palate, in the passage between the throat and nostrils, adhering to the parts with glutinous tenacity. Its lodgment causes a troublesome noise or expectoration, and creates a sensation of irritation and uneasiness in the nostrils, which gives rise to a constant and almost insupportable desire to relieve that discomfort by drawing the mucus into the mouth, which is effected as "hawking." It is characteristic of catarrh, and proves as common and sufficient a source of relief as it is disagreeable to those around him.

Again, the offensive matter hardens and deposits itself on the membrane in the shape of dry, hard concretions, which are discharged by way of the nostrils, or in lumps or fragments of a deep green tint. In some cases these incrustations accumulate to such an extent as to form a regular plug in the nose, which obstructs breathing and produces serious discomfort. So firmly do these incrustations adhere to the parts, that frequently they have to be torn from the nostrils. Occasionally a solid cast of notable size is expelled, and is so strongly indicative of ulceration, which, in time, may destroy the bony structure of the nose and produce a total fistula of that organ.

Ulcers are occasionally met with in which a thick, viscid, slimy secretion covers the membrane of the nasal cavities and then putrefies, giving rise to a stench which is really offensive, and sufficient to poison the atmosphere of a whole room; and there are others in which all the secretions of the membrane are suspended, creating an unpleasant feeling of dryness, heat and feverishness, and a burning sensation, a condition popularly known as "Dry Catarrh."

The disease speedily extends to the air cavities of the bones of the forehead and face, giving rise to a distressing sensation of heavy weight or compression over the forehead, especially in the region above and between the eyes, and to a feeling of fulness, heat, irritation and pain in the nostrils. There are also cases in which the point of the nose is so affected, that it frequently is mistaken for a character of the disease, and is so strongly indicative of the disease, that it is frequently mistaken for a character of the disease, and is so strongly indicative of the disease, that it is frequently mistaken for a character of the disease.

The stomach generally suffers more or less and becomes weak and irritable; the appetite is capricious, and the patient is unable to perform manual or physical labor with the usual vigor and energy. There is a loss of spirits, at times fearful, timid, agitated, and inclined to drowsiness and sleep, the memory weakened, and permanent impairment seriously threatened.

The mucous membrane soon becomes morbidly sensitive to unfavorable influences, and in spite of the utmost care becomes affected from the slightest causes, so that at least a breath of wind upon the lining of the nose or throat becomes productive of a cold, and gives rise to the necessity of giving it a new impulse and involving a larger extent of surface than its predecessor. In this manner the difficulty proceeds from organ to organ, invading the throat, larynx, trachea and bronchial tubes, until, encroaching further on the pulmonary ramifications of the lungs, Catarrh may, and often does, affect other organs in the body, especially those containing a mucous membrane, such as the stomach, bowels, kidneys, etc.

By the employment of proper inhalations in the form of medicated
