The Tribunal That Will Try Parnell.

ONE OF THEM OF BIASED MIND.

The Kick Against Justice Day. Sharp Debate in the Commons. Cable Flashes.

Associated Press Dispatches to the HERALD.

LONDON, July 30.—The Commons went into committee on the bill to investigate the charges against Parnell. Sexton moved to increase the number of judges on the Commission to five. If it was to inquire into the whole history of the National League, extending over nine years, three judges were not sufficient, unless the inquiry was limited.

Matthews said the Government could not accept the amendment. There would be nothing gained by increasing the number of judges. Sexton then reminded Matthews that the Commission dealt with charges for murder and outrage, and that everything might turn upon the examination of witnesses in New York and Australia. He had nothing to say against two of the Commissioners, but he was surprised at the nomination of Justice Day after his conduct during the inquiry of the Belfast riots.

Anderson said he was astonished that the Government dared to propose a tribunal that was to have power to appoint other Commissioners to take evidence abroad.

Parnell urged the House to recollect that they were discussing a proposal to provide a substitute for the jury. While in England a jury of twelve was always provided, it was proposed that the settlement of the important, far-reaching Irish issues which will be involved in the inquiry, was to depend on the verdict of two men. [Hear! Hear!] There was no precedent for such action. He denied that it was any favor to the members; on the contrary it was waiving their ordinary position as citizens in accepting the Commission. The leading London Conservative papers of to-day had declared that the question was no longer as to his innocence or guilt, but as to the best means to prove him guilty. [Hear, hear.] He was to be held responsible for everything Patrick Ford said or did in America, while the Government were not held responsible for what their organs did? [Cheers.]

The amendment was then voted down, Smith having proposed that the Commission consist of Justices Hannan, Day and Smith. Labouchere protested against the selection of Justice Day. Smith said he believed the Judge's name had the complete approval of the English bar and every body of judicial knowledge. Goschen explained that the Government had selected these judges as non-political parties whenever they had been in Parliament. He trusted the House would endorse this view.

John Morley said he quite understood the Government's difficulty in altering the composition of the Commission, but that made no difference. Nothing had been said against Justice Hannan and Smith. Regarding Justice Day he said he had received a letter from an absolutely reliable source, from a gentleman having means of knowing Justice Day's mind upon Irish affairs, and he had told Smith the name of his informant, who wrote that Justice Day was a man of the Seventeenth century in his views concerning the Catholics. Like Torquemada, he was a Tory of the high-flyer, non-juror type. [Hear! Hear!] He nightly rails against Parnell and his friends. He regards them as infidels and rebels and led astray by a Catholic nation. He believes them guilty of any crime. Morley said he would not publicly give the name of his informant, but he proved his good faith by telling Smith. Sure in the face of a feeling of that kind toward Justice Day, the Government would not retain him on a Commission against which there ought to be no whisper raised. He must vote against the nomination. [Cheers.]

Balfour held that Morley had gone too far to maintain any reticence about the writer of the letter. Justice Day had the right to ask the name of his traducer. [Cheers.]

Morley assured the House there was nothing sinister in his withholding the name of his correspondent. The person in question was a colleague of Justice Day upon the Belfast Riot Commission and was a barrister named Adams.

Gladstone said he felt it his duty to support Morley. After the information of the Government regarding Justice Day's bias, and giving them a chance to alter the Commission, it was right when then refused to make a change to communicate the facts to Parliament. Also the Government might readily have another Judge, one to whom there should be no objection.

Goschen said Morley had not shown the letter to any Minister until to-day. Morley declared he only got the letter last Saturday.

Goschen said the Government had no time to communicate with Justice Day to ask about the accuracy of the reported private conversations of Adams. [Cheers.] The Government was entirely ignorant of the politics of Justice Day.

Parnell said he had heard every official accused of jury-packing declare he knew nothing about the politics or religion of the jurors, but somehow it always happened that Orangemen were the jurors put on juries to try Nationalists and Catholics. The Government could no longer plead ignorance in regard to the Commission composed of two Conservatives and one Unionist, and the world would know to-morrow that the Government's idea of fairness was that the Nationals should be tried by a jury of three of their English political opponents. [Cheers.]

Upon division the vote stood, for Justice Day 269, against him 180. The names of Justice Hannan and Justice Smith were agreed to without division.

Anderson moved to omit the word "allegation" in the clause empowering the Commission to inquire into the charges and allegations against certain members of the Commons.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt challenged the Government to explain the meaning of the word "allegation."

Solicitor-General Clarke declined to do so, whereupon Sir William said: "The object of the retention of the word appears to be to admit every kind of calumny restrained by any judicial principles."

After nearly three hours of discussion, the amendment was rejected, 265 to 200. Reid (Liberal) proposed an amendment restricting the inquiry to accusations of complicity in murder or violence.

Matthews reminded the House that the charges were not confined to complicity in crime, but extended to commendation and connivance.

Chamberlain opposed the amendment. The object, he said, was not to inquire into the Plan of Campaign or Boycotting, except so far as necessary to show complicity in crime. Although he was no lawyer he ventured to say if the amendment carried it would be impossible to inquire into the first letter which the Times attributed to Parnell, and it would shut out many of the Times' charges.

Parnell said he had not before had an opportunity to acknowledge the compliments Chamberlain paid him on a recent occasion. His recollection of Chamberlain was, that before he was Minister, he was always anxious to put the Irish party forward to do work which he himself was afraid to do.

After he became Minister he was always most anxious to betray to the Irish party the secrets of the Cabinet, and to undermine their councils and plans in the interest of the Irish party. If inquiry was extended to these matters he would be able to make good his works by documentary and other evidence that had not been forged. At this point the debate was adjourned.

Republican Delegates at San Francisco.

SOUTHERN COUNTIES ORGANIZE.

A Slate Manufactured—Vandever et al To Be Renominated. Golden Gate Gossip.

Associated Press Dispatches to the HERALD.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30.—The assembling of the Republican Convention to-morrow is the cause of much political interest.

Delegates best advised state that the position for Chief Justice, Judge Beatty, of Sacramento will almost certainly be nominated. The nomination of Judge Works of San Diego, for the Associate Judgeship is considered a certainty.

This morning a caucus of the Southern delegation, including Los Angeles, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, Fresno, Tulare, Kern, Indio, Mono, Mariposa and Stanislaus, was called, and owing to the non-arrival of the delegates, postponed until this evening, when a very full attendance from those counties presented themselves.

The question of Judge Work's candidacy was discussed, and upon motion of Judge Fitzgerald, of Los Angeles, seconded by North, of San Bernardino, he was elected as the choice of Southern California, for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

General enthusiasm was manifested and the result of the caucus practically settles the nomination of Judge Works. It is learned that a prominent delegation from Monterey will place Judge Works in nomination, while Col. H. H. Markham, of Los Angeles and C. M. Shortridge, of San Jose, will second it.

It is thought the electoral ticket in the district named will not vary much from the following: General W. H. L. Barnes and Hon. M. E. Este, at large; Col. T. B. Mizner, from the third district; C. M. Shortridge, from the fourth; Geo. A. Knight, fifth and H. M. Stroeter for the sixth Congressional districts.

For Congress, Blanchard, in the second district; Mekonna, third; Morrow, in the fourth; Stone fifth and Vandever, in the sixth, are practically agreed upon.

Blaine had been invited to visit California during the campaign. Governor Waterman, Secretary Boruck, M. M. Este and M. P. DeYoung occupied seats on the platform, and the two latter addressed the meeting briefly.
