

THE NEW RULES.

They are to Regulate the Police Force.

A CATECHISM FOR OFFICERS.

What is Demanded of Applicants Some Startling Requirements. A General Synopsis.

The Police Commissioners, at their last meeting, adopted a code of rules to be observed by the department. These are to be printed in a small leather covered manual, together with a quantity of miscellaneous information of a sort which is likely to be useful to the men when they are on their beats. The rules are taken, in a great measure, from those in use in the city of Cleveland. They are about two hundred in number, and cover every branch of the service, from the patrolman to the Chief. They are to be carefully read and studied, and strictly observed, so the introductory mandate sets forth, by every member of the force. Any man who shall violate any of the provisions is liable to be called before the Commission.

In the very beginning, the rules detail a number of offenses, the commission of which shall make an officer liable to reprimand, suspension, deduction of pay or dismissal from the force, according to the nature and aggravation of the offense. These are: Intoxication, disobedience, profane or harsh language, disrespect to superior officers, unnecessary violence to a prisoner, neglect in paying debts, lack of energy, incapacity, mental or physical, violation of any criminal law, making known any proposed movement of the force, receiving money or articles of value, disrespectful language to or against a brother officer. For intoxication while on duty the penalty is dismissal.

There are a variety of the drawbacks about the business of being a policeman as appears from these rules. The police officer may not follow any other calling in his leisure time, he cannot smoke when wearing his uniform on the streets or in public places, and the wearing of the rogues gallery to that he may exhibit the tough characters when he sees them. He cannot play billiards or cards in a saloon or take a drink there when he is wearing his uniform. He can carry no weapon except that authorized by the Chief, that is to say no knife or slung shot.

Some of the rules are interesting as suggesting the offenses which must have been committed to call them into existence. Card-playing is not allowed about the station house; no presents may be made to superiors—that is to say, there can be no taking up of subscriptions for any scheme of presentation. One rule declares that no man shall be appointed by reason of his religious belief, and that the men shall not engage in religious discussions. At elections the officer may vote as he pleases, but he must not make use of his influence to help one side or the other. It is a part of his duty on his beat to observe the conduct of all merchant patrolmen, and if he notices any of them neglecting their duty, to report that fact.

When the officer is ill he will be allowed half pay for twenty days. If he has met with any kind of an accident when on duty that causes him to be disabled, he will enjoy full pay and free medical treatment for thirty days. Beyond that time he will receive such pay as the Commissioners may see fit to give, but it can never be more than half pay.

The rules which will throw a number of men off the force are those with regard to eligibility of candidates for positions. Of course, if the rules were subjected to a legal test, they could not be made retroactive; but as the Commission is sole judge of its own acts in this particular, and chooses to make the rules not only for its subsequent guidance, but also, so to speak, for its previous correction, it can indulge in all the ex post facto legislation it sees fit. One of the rules of this sort has already been made public, that requiring that every applicant should have voted at an election preceding the date of his application. There is one other, which has not been made public nor commented upon, which requires that every applicant should be over 25 years and under 50, at least 5 feet 7 inches in height, and must weigh 150 pounds without an overcoat. This is rule 180, and if the present force is kept up to that standard, a number of men who have magnified themselves all right are liable to be struck by the lightning which Hervey Lindley and D. Gilbert Dexter are supposed to carry around in their coat-tail pockets.

There are a number of rules which relate to the management of affairs about the station. No one will be allowed to speak to prisoners after 5 p. m. This will be awkward for the police reporters, unless the Commission sees fit to make an exception of them. Loafers are not to be allowed in the station. Prisoners are not to be treated to shower baths, or handled any more roughly than necessity requires.

The duties of clerks, janitors, bailiffs, Captain, Deputy Chief and Chief are accurately described by rule. The only people who appear to escape the share of laws and regulations are the Police Commissioners themselves, who, by a singular coincidence, framed the rules. The Chief is compelled to wear a uniform, but he is graciously allowed to pick out any style and variety he pleases, which is only another way of insinuating that the Chief of Police must buy himself a new suit. Everybody about the force must wear a black necktie, which is rough on Captain Harris who is addicted to gaudy colors. No officer shall appear on duty not wearing his uniform. This applies to clerks, deputy chief and everybody.

The manual containing the rules will also have a very complete guide to the city, its churches, courts and judicial officers' residences, city and county offices and the residences of the officers, fire alarm boxes, engine houses, parks, cemeteries, hospitals, schools, hotels, railway timetables, banks, business blocks, and an infinite variety of useful information.

This is followed by a very remarkable document which is nothing more or less than a policeman's catechism. It begins "What is a policeman?" and from the answer given it would naturally be inferred that he was something between a hero and an angel. Instruction is given by this question and answer system on the duties of the office and the law covering the making of arrests. Then comes a chapter of advice to a young policeman which will probably be credited to Mr. Dexter, whereas it was copied from a printed book. Last of all comes a chapter on the way to restore persons apparently dead, and the best means of preventing hydrophobia. What service the latter can be in a country where mad dogs are unknown does not appear.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

The New Church of the Trinity. Topics of the Ministers. The new building of the Church of the Trinity was dedicated yesterday morning. The edifice is situated at the corner of Seventh and Fort streets, and while the exterior is not very imposing, the interior is most conveniently arranged and has a very inviting appearance. At one end of the auditorium is the platform whereon the pulpit stand is placed. Back of this, in a recess, is the loft for the organ and choir. It is raised considerably above the pulpit platform. At the right of the platform, in gilt letters, the following appears upon the wall:

"O come, let us worship and bow down, let us kneel before the Lord our Maker, for He is our God and we are the people of his pasture and the sheep of his hand. God is our refuge and strength, a very pleasant help in trouble. Have we not one father? Hath not one God created us? Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for God is with me; his rod and his staff, they comfort me." At the left of the pulpit the following appears upon the wall in gilt letters:

"Hear, O Israel! The Lord our God is one Lord, and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength. This is my first commandment, and the second is like, namely, this: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

Below the pulpit and extending to the bow window in front are the seats for the audience, enough to seat about 600 people. On the back portion of the auditorium is a balcony capable of seating about 150, and from every part of the church the words of the preacher can be distinctly heard.

Yesterday morning the platform was a mass of flowers and foliage arranged in various shapes and forms, and these added to the brightness of the carpet, frescoing and furniture gave the church a very comfortable appearance. At 11 o'clock every seat was taken, and the service began with an organ voluntary, after which Rev. Dr. Fay offered a short prayer. The choir sang "Old Hundred," and Rev. Dr. Deere led in prayer and exhortation. The choir and audience sang "Come Thou Almighty King," after which Psalm No. 95 was read for the first Scripture lesson. The choir sang "Now unto the King Eternal, and I Kings, viii, 27-23, and John, iv, 7-14," was read from the second scripture lesson by the Rev. E. S. Conger. An antiphonal prayer was followed by Rev. B. F. McDaniel and then Dr. Fay preached a dedication sermon appropriate to the occasion. The dedication sermon was read responsively by Dr. Fay and the congregation, and Rev. Oskar Clute offered a dedicatory prayer. A hymn written for the occasion and sung to the tune of "Old Hundred" preceded the benediction.

NOTES.

At the First Baptist Church yesterday evening, Children's Day services were given by the children of the Sunday school. "Relationship of Jesus" was Rev. R. Mayne Irvine's subject at the morning service in the East Los Angeles Presbyterian Church.

At the First New Church Society, Rev. D. V. Bowen preached in the morning on "Divine Providence, or the Lesson of the Johnstown Disaster."

Rev. W. A. Knighten, at Grace M. E. Church, spoke on "Paul's Debts" in the morning, and "A Stayed Mind and a Great Keeper" in the evening.

"Satan at Church" was the morning topic of Rev. H. M. Du Bose at the Trinity M. E. Church, and "The Perpetual Christ" was his subject in the evening.

Rev. J. H. Phillips, of the East Los Angeles Congregational Church, chose for his evening topic, "Did Providence Destroy Johnstown?"

Rev. R. G. Hutchins took for his topic yesterday morning at the First Congregational Church, "Sacred Music," and in the evening he preached on "A study of the resurrection of Jesus."

At the East Los Angeles M. E. Church Rev. H. Cox preached in the morning on "Littleness and greatness in man," and in the evening on "The man who had not on the wedding garment."

Rev. R. S. Cantine continued his lecture last evening at the Fort-street M. E. Church on "The Doom of the Drunkard."

Rev. Wm. Ormiston, D. D., of New York, will address the ladies of the missionary societies of Los Angeles, at 2:30 p. m. today in the First Presbyterian Church. There is a general invitation extended to this meeting of ladies and gentlemen outside the societies.

At the communion services yesterday afternoon, in the Church of Emmanuel, 76 new members were received. The attendance was very large and the exercises were deeply interesting. Dr. W. J. Chichester, the pastor, delivered an eloquent and impressive discourse on the tender and spiritual character of the Apostle John, whose receptivity he likened to the fleece of Gideon, which absorbed and was saturated with the dew of heaven. Yet, while he was thus tender and spiritual and filled with the divine love of the Master, he was so strong and terrible in his spiritual impulses that he was called the Son of Thunder, the Boanerges of the Apostolic Twelve. The eloquent divine drew a graphic and striking picture of the soft and beautiful characteristics of the disciple who had so faithfully preserved and transmitted to us the sublime teachings and exemplary acts of the Man of Sorrows.
