Healthy Growth and Big Grain Yield, with Vast Acreage Being Planted. EDITORS HERALD—The development of the vast resources of this valley has been much slower than other portions of the southern counties, but there is no section of the State making more certain progress or having a more healthy growth.

The fact that every settler who has made any effort to test his lands has been thoroughly satisfied of the reproductive qualities of our soil, has served him to use every energy he is possessed of to make some improvements, by clearing and plowing, to prepare the soil for a profit as soon as possible. In his ambition to benefit himself he has tried to do too much. He has actually done more to retard the development of the valley in many instances than he has to make it attractive to others. He has tried to cultivate ten times as much land as he was able to do thoroughly, and has also tried to get hold of every available acre his rights of location would entitle him to.

and Colorado and Utah railroads beyond a doubt. There is another twelve-inch well being bored some twelve miles southeast of the Crocker well, and not far from the Atlantic and Pacific road. This well is also located in the center of a fine body of land that, without water, is not worth cultivation. The borings in this well show the same strata of soil, sand and clay that is found in the Crocker well.

The success of Dr. Barber in the cultivation of alfalfa and other root crops by the aid of water from his artesian well shows what can be done in this valley, and proves conclusively that with one-half the outlay for water development in Antelope valley that has been spent in the San Gabriel, Pomona and San Bernardino valleys, this valley can profitably employ over 100,000 people.
