BLACK JOHN'S SKULL ON A SHELF. The Wishes of the Suicide Partially Carried Out. Some Points About His Phenological Development.

The Curious Collection of a Physician—A Skull that Was Claimed After a Long Time—Difficulties of a Skull Collector.

One portion, at least, of the wishes of the suicide, "Black John," has been carried out. When he took poison at a lodging house on South Spring street...

Before the internment, the head of the strange being whose life history as narrated by himself excited so much curiosity, was removed from the trunk and turned over to Dr. Wm. D. Babcock...

When Dr. Babcock first secured "Black John's" head, it was not a slightly object. Naturally there was not the appearance of a clean skull, such as is presented in a lecture room.

It is rather a curious thing, the preservation of a human head. It goes through a process of curing just as any other animal product.

BICYCLE DANGERS. Fast Riders Who Should Carry a Danger Signal. There is about as much danger to pedestrians from the noiseless bicycle as there is in the street car that clangs a bell at about the moment it knocks a person off the track.

There are laws in some states which punish those who inflict injury on other persons, even though it is proven to have been accidental. This has the effect of making careless people more careful and, in consequence, accidents are very rare.

CRUSHED TO DEATH. THE HORRIBLE FATE OF REV. JAMES JAMESON. He Failed to See an Approaching Car at Spring and First Streets, and Was by It Struck and Killed.

The Rev. James M. Jameson was run over and instantly killed by a Downey avenue cable car at the corner of First and Spring streets yesterday morning about 10 o'clock. He had come from his residence on Court street, and was crossing First street, southward, for the purpose of taking a Main-street horse car to attend a meeting at St. Vincent's church on Main and Twenty-ninth streets, in which deliberations he was to participate.

He had crossed the Downey avenue car track, and had cleared the outer rail about two feet, when several people called out to him to look out for the car. Instead of proceeding, he stepped backward upon the track which he had just crossed, when he was knocked down and horribly mangled and killed by the car, which was at that time carrying a heavy load.

His son Harry, who was passing at the moment, was attracted to the spot by the crowd that immediately assembled, and found that it was his own father who had been killed.

The body was removed to the undertaking room of J. J. Dumas, 431 N. Main street, where it was found to be mangled in a most frightful and horrible manner. Both arms were broken, the right forearm was completely crushed, and the left arm broken above the elbow; the back portion of the head was bruised and the neck was dislocated; the chest was crushed, the ribs were broken, and the left leg was severely bruised. There were some slight bruises about the face. The numerous wounds, either one being a fatal wound, showed the accident to be of the most horrible nature, and as the car was running at a high rate of speed, it was pushed forward some distance on the track in front of the whirling wheels.

The coroner's name is J. J. Dumas, and C. M. Wood was the conductor. The names were taken at the central office station in the presence of the coroner before the coroner's jury.

The coroner where the accident occurred, commonly known as "accident corner," is grid-ironed with street car tracks, or rather the double car tracks at this junction form a kind of a spider's web not only in the city, but in the more crowded than any other portion of the city and a policeman is stationed at the junction of the streets to warn people of the approaching street cars on every week day.

There are five systems of street cars centering at this junction, of which two are cable, two electric, and one horse car, and of the very frequent trips made during the day, a car must pass this junction at least once every minute, and not longer than one minute. The double tracks converge at the junction, where these five systems run their cars.

The Rev. James M. Jameson leaves a widow, Mrs. M. A. Jameson, and an only son, Harry M. Jameson, who resides at 431 N. Main street, 87 years last March. Deceased was aged 79 years last March, and was born in Center, Penn. For many years he lived at Columbus, O., where he was in the Methodist ministry. He had been in active service for half a century, and about 11 years ago was placed on the retired list in the conference of the Methodist Episcopal church.

His Personal Experience. Hon. James W. Hastel, while serving his sixth term as a member of the assembly of the state of New York, writes: "STATE OF NEW YORK, ASSEMBLY CHAMBER, Albany, Jan. 16, 1930. I desire once more to bear my testimony to the value of ALCOCK'S FOOD'S PLASTER. I have used them for twenty-five years past, and can conscientiously commend them as the best external remedy that I have known. Years ago, when thrown from a carriage and seriously injured, I gave them a thorough trial. In a very short time the pain that I was suffering disappeared, and within a week I was entirely recovered. On another occasion, when I was thrown from a carriage and injured, I used them, and in less than a fortnight was entirely cured. On still another occasion, when I was suffering from an attack of rheumatism in the shoulder to such an extent that I could scarcely raise my arm, I resorted to the plaster, and within a few days the rheumatism entirely disappeared. I have used them constantly, whether at home or abroad, and as well as myself have found them to be a sovereign remedy both for external and internal troubles. I never had but one failure in my life, and the application of the plaster cured me. I desire, as I said before, to bear my testimony in a public way to their value, and I know of no better way of doing it than by giving my personal experience."
