

THE CARE OF THE INDIGENTS.

Supervisor Forrester Favors a Charity Commission.

The Board Not Hampered by Parliamentary Law Red Tape.

Business Expedited by a Want of Too Much Formality—The County Pauper Question Considered.

"Parliamentary rules are somewhat of an unknown quantity in the deliberations of the board of supervisors, Mr. Forrester, remarked a HERALD reporter to that supervisor. "Could not business be dispatched more promptly if there was more order about the proceedings?"

Mr. Forrester assumed a thoughtful manner, and proceeded to give quite an interesting statement upon the subject propounded, and others, from a superior standpoint.

"With reference first to your question, I don't see how the board could go strictly by parliamentary rules, for it is frequently stated that they should, but just think a moment. This county has an immense area, and there are men constantly before the supervisors from all parts of the county with matters connected with their local interests. Suppose the supervisors put more red tape into their sessions and went rigidly under parliamentary rules. The men who travel long distances from their homes, and whose business might be dispatched by the exercise of a little formality, are retained in the city an unreasonable time."

"Take another instance," continued the supervisor. "There are only five members of the board, and they not only look after the general interests of the county, but each supervisor, by the last legislature, is empowered to look after the road matters in his district, which duties were formerly performed by the overseers."

"When you remember that people interested in road matters that require immediate attention are constantly coming before the board, and that strict observance of parliamentary usage would often delay these matters for days, unless they can be informally discussed, it is another reason against such formalities. Then the board is constantly making visits to different parts of the county to investigate a proposed road here, or a school house there. No, I really think that the more red tape there is about the proceedings, the less business will be done, owing to the peculiar nature of the duties of the supervisors."

"I notice a reference in the HERALD to the increase of the indigent business in this county. This is a branch of the duty of the supervisors that is little understood and is becoming such an onerous burden that some means will have to be devised to secure a more systematic management of the fund. It can not be done by the supervisors with that care necessary, owing to the press of other business on their shoulders. There have been propositions from various benevolent and charitable societies to take charge of this matter and undertake to distribute the funds now distributed by the board. I am not inclined, however, to favor such a plan. It would place this important duty into too many hands, and it is difficult to see how an equitable distribution of funds could be made amongst the different societies. It needs a compact body and a head in order that the needy poor can be cared for properly, and the funds not be improperly dispensed. As it is now there is very little responsibility in this matter, and it is up to the supervisors themselves to make. Before these last two years very little attention had been paid to a record of the cases helped by the county—I refer to money and provisions furnished to persons out of the county. The county has had a few—two have had books made where an absolute history is now given of every case of assistance. Any one can be consulted these books now see just what help has been given to any one, and for what reason. Such a record is not required to be kept, but for our own protection we made that provision. Very frequently it is immediate assistance which is required, and then the large latitude given the board is very beneficial."

"I think the time has arrived, however, when the branch of public duty has become so extreme that, like other cities in the east, it should be put under an independent board, and the funds guarded by restrictions not now placed about them. I am also of the opinion that such a board should be non-partisan and put upon an exact business basis, so that the needy poor may be more carefully provided for, and many deserving cases not now reached will receive attention."

"There is a larger class of this kind of people in Los Angeles county than would be supposed. Sick people come to Los Angeles, and through some misfortune are rendered penniless. Sometimes they have friends in the east to whom they can be sent, and rarely do they have friends and relatives in the county. All such cases require personal investigation, which, with all his other duties, the supervisor cannot give."

"In the matter of aged indigents, it is astonishing how many of both sexes have been left by their parents, and the application of the state law upon the subject, whereby the county receives back a certain amount for all such persons assisted."

"I am not prepared to say certainly, but I think it could be managed. I believe, however, that it would be very much better to have systematic legislation upon the subject. It is a matter I have given considerable thought to, and I know it is one of the most important that it deserves careful consideration by all who are interested in the care of our poor. I am not wedded to any plan. I only raise these questions that they may be discussed and public attention directed to what I deem an important public function. And my colleagues on the board are as deeply interested in it as I am. I hope a practicable and adequate plan will be formed to carry out the views I have expressed, and there is not a supervisor who will not lend his utmost assistance to a successfully inaugurated proper system."
