

OLD MAID

Harper Brothers have just issued a new book from the pen of Lillian Bell entitled 'The Love Affairs of an Old Maid.'

Any of the readers of the gentler sex who have turned their faces resolutely toward the setting sun will thoroughly enjoy this little book. And for the other readers it will be a novel source for passing away a few long summer hours, but will act as a merry maker, it is so full of jolly wit and repartee.

The Arena company deal only in books on the most vital subjects of the present era, subjects of moment to every one, subjects that are producing the most brilliant thoughts of the grandest minds of this day and age.

Lee & Shepard deserve the thanks of every mother and every kindergarten teacher for producing such a pleasing book on the life and labors of the king of children's friends, the kindest of teachers, Froebel, from whose brain was evolved the principles of this method of teaching and entertaining the great army of children.

The existence of this particular 'old maid' has often been a precarious one; she has been surrounded by danger, once narrowly escaping cremation. But the humanity shown to dumb brutes by the author has always saved her.

Another valuable little book issued by Harper & Bros., is one full of hints for every-day life by Lady M. Colin and M. French-Sheldon, entitled 'Every-day's Book of Correct Conduct.'

THE ATTENDANCE INCREASING.

Great Interest Shown in the World's Fair.

The Hour of the Chimes the Most Attractive Time to Visitors.

The White Buildings Hard on the Eyes. A Reception to McKinley-Hayti's Pavilion-The Leather Building.

Special Correspondence to the Herald. CHICAGO, June 25.

The daily attendance at the fair shows a satisfactory increase. Thursday the paid admissions were 127,372, being a greater number than any previously recorded, except the opening day.

The average attendance is already surpassing that of the Paris exposition, and it is reported that more people have visited Chicago this year than ever visited one place in this country before in a like period.

Thursday evening was the finest of any this week at the fair. The electric fountains were at their best, and hundreds of skyrocket filled the air with glowing colors.

There will be no more fireworks in the grand basin, on account of the insurance, but the management will provide a more elaborate display in the lake just off the manufactures building, between the government and steamboat piers.

It is in the first presages of twilight that the world's fair panorama is most stately and quiet, and it is in the same hazy hour, too, that one of the numerous little charms, which to many are lost in the big display, is to be experienced.

For the fair boasts of two sets of chimes, and these are rung early in the evening, and a band of music is playing and most people have gone to the White City to see the chimes.

The soft melody floating over the White City soothes the tired visitor as nothing else can do. Of course they are out of tune, most all chimes are, but what one wants from the belfry is not a perfect scale, but a melody.

A check was made on the grounds, which in some subtle way is inevitably connected with memories, either exalted, saddening or poetic. It is well worth the fare to be on the grounds at dusk, just to get the effect of these bells ringing over the city.

One thing is noticeable at the fair, that is, that no one is ever called green or gawky on the grounds. Everyone is gawking with their mouths open part of the time at the many wonders, and as everyone else seems to be doing the same thing it is not noticed.

Ohio tendered a reception to Governor McKinley in their beautiful building at the grounds Thursday. Over 1000 Ohio people from that state shook hands with their distinguished governor.

At 11 o'clock the Hayti pavilion, which was formally dedicated last New Year's day, was opened to the public. Frederick Douglass, the late minister to Hayti, followed the opening address, and was followed by the mayor of Hayti, former secretary of the Haytian legation at Washington.

Hayti shows 34 different kinds of coffee, various qualities of cotton, cocoa and all the cereals. In the industrial section is a fine display of saddlery and horse equipment, and the finished product demonstrates a decided advance in the industrial arts during the last decade.

One place at the fair should be visited by all means. That is the leather building. There are some very interesting exhibits to be seen there.

The hide of the biggest horse in the world, tanned with the hair and heavy mane and tail, is exhibited. There is a tanned walrus hide, an inch thick, and large enough to make a good sized tent.

There is a pair of shoes which weighs two ounces and weighs in at 100 pounds.

Decorating purposes has an important place in the display. There are tanned snake skins, alligator hides and morocco leather exhibited.

In the gallery the machinery is, running and exhibit, young women make shoes while you wait. One can watch the piece of leather from the time it is cut out of the hide until the last girl puts the buttons on it and hands it out to the crowd for inspection.

It makes a good object lesson for the girls and boys to watch these things made before their eyes.
