Building Operations Present and Prospective-Street Repairs Discussed. The Tendency of Investments. Loans and Rents.

Review of the Financial Situation for the Week.

The past week has not been distinguished by any material change in the real estate market. If one of those very fine instruments that measure microscopic changes could be applied to the public sentiment it would record some slight change for the better. It ought to be a matter of profound congratulation that while other communities are being startled by unexpected failures and disturbed to their centers by serious market fluctuations, Los Angeles is so situated that she feels only the outermost ripple of the flood of excitement. The day of feverish flurry has passed over this region, and its principal mischief is, fortunately, about spent.

It was prophesied that as soon as the bank scare was over, people who had been allowing their money to lie idle on deposit would at once seek investments in realty, with the conviction that money so invested would be in the safest possible situation. This prophesy will, doubtless, soon come to pass, the chief thing that hinders it for the present being the doubt existing in the publie mind as to what the special session of congress will do to relieve the stringency of the money market. When once the united wisdom of the statesmen at the national capital has fructified in definite action there will be a great feeling of relief experienced, for it is hard to conceive of any probable action of congress that would not materially and at once benefit the country's business by restoring the much-needed feeling of confidence, the lack of which has wrought all the trouble.

One of the first effects of an improved feeling will be to induce investments, in realty, and a considerable volume of business may be expected in so favored a region as Southern California. Already the feelers are being thrown out in many directions; but prices, low as they are of congress will do to relieve the strinthe feelers are being thrown out in many directions; but prices, low as they are in the majority of instances, are not yet low enough to satisfy the inquirers. It is the opinion of conservative dealers that the men who are hoarding money instead of putting it into real property at the present time, are making a mistake, the hugeness of which will astonish them in a year from now. Barring such exceptions as really go to prove the rule, the prices at which real estate may be bought in the city and county today are lower than they are likely to be ever again. But the volume of actual transactions for the past few weeks has been in the line of moderate priced dwellings, cheap residence lots and small tracts of outside lands for improvement. The inquiry tor such properties appears to be kept up, and dealers report a number of such sales during the past week.

The body of an unknown man was found early yesterday morning floating in the lake in Westlake park.

The discovery was made by J. G. Newfell, who is one of the caretakers of the park.

As a natural consequence of the recent experiences money is hard to get, even securities. The ageat of a rancista bank having a large int loaned eat in this county states that his principals while they are currying out contracts already made the uck accepting any of the numerous applications that are being put before tient. The policy of the loaning institutions in position of masterly inactivity and to de position of masterly inactivity and to do nothing until it can be seen which way the financial indicator will point. Com-mercial loans on gilt edged collaterals are being made at 10 per cent.

STREET PAVING. If there is one thing more than another that gives added value to a piece of property it is the condition of the street upon which it aligns. The pride of Los Angeles is in its smooth bituminized streets, which, in the business quarter especially, deaden the noise of traffic and take away one of the ness quarter especially, deaden the noise of traffic and take away one of the fruitful causes of nervous disorders among business people.

Under the existing order of things the repairing of these bituminized streets is let to a contractor, who is paid by the square foot, and whose interest it naturally is to get as many square feet to repair as possible. Consequently, the small holes are always left until they enlarge themselves, which they quickly do when once started, and the repairing bill is naturally enlarged also. It may be proper to suggest for the consideration of the council that the superintendent of streets should repair every damage when it makes its first appearance, which could he done at light expense, and the necessity for larger repairs would at once be done away with. In large cities where this kind of pavement is used it is the custom to patrol it daily and by the aid of a small appearatus to then and there repair whatever slight dilapidations may appear. This is the only sensible way to preserve these beautiful streets and to prevent the unsightly appearance which they too often present. The carelessness of the present supervision is shown when, as is the case at the corner of Main and First, a contractor is allowed to dig into this costly pavement to put in fence posts.

BUILDING OPERATIONS.

BUILDING OPERATIONS. Some of the larger enterprises that Some of the larger enterprises that were under way a few weeks ago have been temporarily suspended waiting for a more suitable-condition of the money market. Chief among these is the proposed enlargement of Mr. T. D. Stimson's building on the northwest corner of Spring and Third, upon which some $250,000 will be spent as soon as the financial outlook will warrant it, and the erection of the Irvine block, to cost $80,000, corner of Broadway and Third, will be delayed on the same account. All buildings that are under way are being pushed to completion, and quite an amount of new contracts, chiefly for residence property, have been made during the past week, the chief one being by Dr. John H. Lillie for a boarding-house to cost $10,000 and two dwellings to cost $5000.

The proposed casino to be built upon the site of the old court house, running through from Spring to Main street, will be a thing of beauty and a joy for ever when it once gets built, and that will now be very soon, as it is understood that Mr. J. A. Bullard, the wealthy owner, has signed the contract which ensures the carrying out of the plan. The building is of characteristic Mauresque designs and will be 168 feet by 64 feet in dimensions, coating some $75,000 when completed. Mr. John W. were under way a few weeks ago have NORMAL SCHOOL BUILDING. The agony among competing architects is at last over, the board of trustees tects is at last over, the board of trustees of the normal school having accepted the designs of Messrs. Preston & Locke for the addition to the existing building. The general size of the new effection will be 80x180 feet, exclusive of loggis, and will be three stories in height, with basement in south end to be used for boilers, engine and fan rooms.

At the northeast corner will be the main tower, 25 feet square and rising 120 feet above the sidewalk line. There are also two secondary towers, a square one 20x20 and a round one at southwest corner 20 feet in diameter.

The style of architecture is Romanosque. The first floor will be used as a training school and has six large classrooms, some of which are connected by sliding partitions, besides several recitation rooms, cloak rooms, etc. The seconk floor is devoted to the Normal school and has about the same convenience and arrangements as the first school and has about the same conveniences and arrangements as the first floor. On the third floor is the assembly room, 80x100 feet and 30 feet from floor to ceiling, with inclined grade to afford good view of the stage, which is 15x37 feet with dressing rooms at back. The building will be of brick and furnished throughout with electric lights, annunciators, etc. The cost is estimated annunciators, etc. The cost is estimated at $60,000, and the furnishing will prob-at $60,000, and the furnishing will probably cost $15,000 more.

The board of trustees which consists of General John Mansfield, president, and Messre. A. E. Pomeroy, T. P. Lukens, A. S. Davidson and F. P. Molyneaux with Governor Markham exofficio, has had considerable difficulty in making a selection from the excellent designs submitted by some of our leading architects. The award, it is understood, was made without controversy, and is in itself a high compliment to the successful firm. Mr. Preston has had many years experience in the erection many years experience in the erection of public buildings of magnitude and his firm will doubtless in this building add another ornament to the angelic city.

RENTED HOUSES. The demand for rented houses continues very brisk with prices ruling low on account of the season. The largest demand is for tenements at $12 to $15 for the occupation of clerks and me-chanics, and of such buildings hundreds could be rented if put up in the neigh-borhood of a street car line. G. THAT BIGHT HOUR RULE.

Why the Board of Supervisors are Being Laughed At.

There is a feeling of great dissatisfaction at the county court house over the recent eight hour order by the board of supervisors, which resulted from an opinion rendered by District Attorney In his opinion the district attorney was flat-footed in his statement that eight hours constitutes a legal day's work for all county employees.

As a rule the eight hour plan has been carried out since the board's order, but one glaring discrimination is still being made, which does not speak very well for the fairness of the body.

The janitor's force of the court house are being worked as much as ten and twelve hours a day, and just because they are humble servants of the people the supervisors allow them to be imposed upon. Even the district attorney, when spoken to about the injustice of the present state of affairs, said very condescendingly that he would put in a word for the janitors if he got a chance

After the supervisors have officially declared eight hours a legal day's work the least they can do is to make the hours of the janitors conform to their pronunciamento.

It is also said that quite a number of young ladies who are attached to the auditor's office and work down in room No. 6 at copying, have ignored the eight hour edict, and reach their work at 9 o'clock in the morning as formerly. Of course gallantry to the ladies is the proper thing, and it is the correct thing to wink the other official eye at their

by the Board - The Figueroa Street Paving Bids.

There is a firm in this city which wants the council to pass an ordinance prohibiting the blowing of steam whistles between the hours of 9 p.m. and 7 a.m. The board of public works was completely swamped yesterday when they received a petition from Charles Stern & Sons asking to have such an ordinance passed. How the thirty trains that come into the city every night can be made to stop their whistles is a matter for conjecture, yet the firm of Charles Sterns & Sons wish to have it done. They live near the railroad and evidently have a grudge at such "soulless corporations" which break into their peaceful slumbers after the coming of the gloaming. It is needless to say that the communication was filed with Sensational Close of the Trial of Antonio Aguilar.

His Mother Faints and Mrs. Richards Attempts Suicide.

Clerk Forrester Seized Her as She Threw Herself Out the Thirdstory Window of the Court House-Twice Tried.

Yesterday morning in department No. 1 the now celebrated trial of Antonio Aguilar came up for the third day in succession. It was the general opinion from the start that a decision of some kind would be reached before the day was over.

The character of the witness Hughes, who is now in the city jail under a charge of burglary, was impeached. Tennis Flannel, elegant patterns, 121/20 Quite a number of witnesses were then examined and the evidence drawn from them was that the reputation of Mrs. Richards was very bad in the neighborhood in which she lived. Aguilar was then placed upon the stand and subjected to a rigid cross-examination.

The facts drawn from him differed little from his statements at his former trial, and he still claimed that when he trial, and he still claimed that when he ran across Richards at the corner of Second and Los Angeles streets, on the night of the shooting, Richards drew a pistol, and it was through seeing him do so he fired in return.

The case was submitted to the jury without argument and at 1:20 they retired for consideration. While they were out Aguilar manifested great nervousness and the number of chews of tubecco which he masticated during of tobacco which he masticated during their absence would probably have supplied him for a week on ordinary occasions. He spent his time between rolling the luscions weed over his tongue and short, impetuous questions to his attorney.

Mrs. Richards sat, alternately fanning herself and glancing around the room, the deepest anxiety depicted on her countenance, which softened to com-miseration when she met the halffrightened but stealthy glances from the aloe black eyes of Aguilar. Mrs. Aguilar, the defendant's mother, sat outside the bar, rather towards the right of the center. She was surrounded by her daughters and other friends Anxiety, sorrow and apprehension were plainly written on her features and all who saw her could not but feel sym-pathy for the unfertunate woman and the position in which she was placed.

The court room remained crowded, as it was the general opinion that the jury would quickly arrive at a decision, and all wanted to be on hand in order to see how the Mexican would take it. Precisely at 2:24 o'clock the jury slowly filed in and again took their

Foreman F. R. Slaughter, in response to the question of the court, arose and stated that the verdict decided upon was guilty of assault to commit murder. Aguilar, who had been sitting nerv-ously clasping and unclasping his hands, when the words of the foreman fell on his ears, turned deadly pale and half rose to his feet, after which he sank back listlessly in his chair, covering his face with his hands, and remained so until the constable removed him to the jail.

Outside the bar of the court, however, other events were happening. As the words of the verdict self on the silent air a suppressed cry rang through the room and the defendant's mother falling for-ward, with both hands on her face, burst room. There Mrs. Aguilar fainted and for some time confusion reigned. Mrs. Richards who, up to this time, had sat like one stunned, gathered herself up and rushed around to procure water for Mrs. Aguilar, Not succeeding in getting any she ran into the witness room and fell fainting at the feet of the defend ant's mother. Then there was a pretty how-dye-do. Everyone was telling everyone else what to do, and a physician was summoned. In the midst of the con-fusion Mrs. Richards recovered her senses, sprang to her feet, and after casting a few frantic, half-crazed glances around, rushed to the window and at-tempted to throw herself out to the as-phalt pavement three stories below. She was saved from certain death by the prompt action of Clerk Forrester, who manfully seized the lower parts of her orsadia Antonia, the complaining witness, was called and testified that she was 12 years of age and lived with her lived with her lived with her lived with her woman was hauled back into woman was hauled back into the room. Had she succeeded in her attempt certain death would have en-sued, as she would have been dashed to pieces on the court yard below, and Clerk Forrester has one "life saved" to his credit.

Mrs. Richards was very violent after she had been rescued, and was at once put on the elevator and sent down to the first floor of the court house. Within two minutes after her arrival there, however, she was upstairs again in the witness room, creating a disturbance. Once more she was sent downstairs, and offimore one was sent downstairs, and officers were placed on the several stairways to prevent her from again coming up. These measures effectually disposed of Mrs. Richards, and she left for home breathing dire vengeance on the heads of the judge and jury, and the iniquities of the law generally.

During all this time Mrs. Aguilar lay in a dead faint in the witness room with her daughter and a physician working

At last she recovered and her moans and feeble cries were heartrending. She was assisted to the elevator and taken home. Judge Smith will sentence Aguilar next Wednesday at 10 o'clock.

The crowd who waited the hour and four minutes to hear the verdict of the jury were amply compensated for their patience, because yesterday's events in department No. 1 were more exciting than any that have occurred there in a than any that have occurred there in a
