MR. CLEVELAND'S TELEGRAM TO CONGRESSMAN WILSON.

MR. CLEVELAND'S telegram to Congressman Wilson is doubtless highly gratifying to that gentleman, but some of the president's friends would doubtless wish that he had made his expressions of approval personal and private.

JUDGE ROSS HAS SHOWN A DETERMINED DISPOSITION TO CARRY OUT THE DEPORTATION FEATURE OF THE GEARY LAW.

JUDGE ROSS has shown a determined disposition to carry out the deportation feature of the Geary law. He declines to take cognizance of the asserted lack of funds for deportation purposes, not having been officially notified of any such deficiency.

MR. SPRINGER, IF HE CHERISHES ANY ENMITY TOWARDS SPEAKER CRISP.

MR. SPRINGER, if he cherishes any enmity towards Speaker Crisp for having been displaced from the position of chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, got even yesterday. Before the House knew it, on Springer's motion, it took from the Committee on Rules the power to specify what bills should be introduced, and invested the Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures, of which Mr. Bland is chairman, and the Committee on Banking and Currency, presided over by Springer, with power to report bills to that body.

THE GOLD BUGS HAVE MADE A GREAT PARADE OVER THE LARGE VOTE BY WHICH THE WILSON BILL WAS CARRIED.

THE gold bugs have made a great parade over the large vote by which the Wilson bill was carried. They utterly ignore the fact that this triumph was effected by the apostasy of many members whose constituencies were and are favorable to the free coinage of silver.

THE UNWARRANTABLE SCARE THAT HAS PASSED OVER THE UNITED STATES RESULTED IN ONE OF THE MOST ARTIFICIAL PANICS THAT WAS EVER RECORDED.

THE unwarrantable scare that has passed over the United States resulted in one of the most artificial panics that was ever recorded. No man can give any intelligent explanation of why it should have occurred. Outside of the universal disorganization of business produced by the McKinley bill, Senator Teller of Colorado gave the most plausible explanation of the origin of the wretched visitation. He ascribes it to the clamor of the New York newspapers and to the chicanes of the New York bankers, all anxious to bring about the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act.

Well, well! What is the world coming to when even Marion Cannon goes back on his beloved white metal?

THE GREAT DISASTER ON THE ATLANTIC COAST—A CONTRAST.

The meteorological disturbances which have been chronicled in the United States of late years are certainly out of the common. Beginning with the earthquake at Charleston some years ago, in which many lives were lost and an enormous amount of property was destroyed—a disaster that almost involved the obliteration of the city of Charleston—there have been a succession of disasters on the Atlantic coast, reaching from New York to the Florida capes.

The late hurricanes seem to have exceeded all past history in their extent and violence. They have in them nothing of the cyclone but their destructiveness. The cyclone proceeds from west to east, is generally restricted to a narrow width, and is spiral and eccentric in its orbits. It has been known to follow a railway track for hundreds of miles, and to confine its destructive work to a belt of two or three miles of the roadway.

There is no end of the talk about New York furnishing all the money to move the crops, etc. The report of the Kansas bank commissioners shows that the banks of that state employ their own money, and that they owe the New York banks nothing. That a great movement to supply the country with ample funds to do its business outside of the dictation of the New York banks and New York wrecking bankers and brokers is under way, is apparent on all hands.

We must not, however, flatter ourselves with the idea that the United States has any claim to a monopoly of disaster. It is only a few years since the island of Ichia, in the Adriatic sea, was bodily engulfed, five thousand souls being plunged into a watery grave as one fell swoop. A year or so later a portion of the coast of Java was torn sheer from the mainland, sinking people from sight and carrying people verily estimated at from ten to twenty thousand to the bottom of the sea.

It is a matter not generally known outside of the hydrographic and geodesic bureau of the government of the United States that the Pacific coast of North America is gradually rising, while the Atlantic coast is sinking. As a matter of fact, New York and other eastern harbors are slowly but surely deepening, while the bays of San Francisco and other Pacific coast harbors are arely and steadily shoaling. This, it is of course, favorable to tidal waves on the Atlantic coast, as it would indicate a tendency of nature to submergence, however slight it might be.

The theory that the Atlantic side of the continent is sinking while the Pacific is rising scarcely applies to Central and South America, although the extreme paucity of good harbors is noteworthy on those portions of the coast. The last great tidal wave occurred off the coast of Peru or Chile—we do not remember just now in which country—about twenty-one years ago. It was so violent that it caught up the United States war vessel Waterer and landed her high and dry seven miles in the interior. Since then the Pacific coast has got off lightly.

The entire immunity of Southern California from disaster of any kind is surely one of the most attractive peculiarities of this section. Cyclones, tornadoes, blizzards, hurricanes, and what not, are known only by their absence. Sunstroke and hydrophobia are alike unknown here. An occasional gentle rattle of an earthquake, only active enough to titillate the nerves of a confirmed hypochondriac, is all that we need dread hereabouts. This wonderful immunity from everything disagreeable will undoubtedly count largely in the settlement of this favored spot.

His Hamlet is effectively simple; there is no pretension or perplexing metaphysical feature in his conception of the part. He plays it as Shakespeare wrote it, simply, directly and vigorously. He is a young prince who by the aid of a supernatural visitation has discovered his father-uncle's crime, and his mother's worse than weakness. He is tortured as to his duty. He has vowed to the shade of his father that he will avenge his murder. He is a soldierly young scholar, and distrusts the vision which first prompts his action. He finds his love for Ophelia of secondary import to his duty of punishing his father's murderer, but he shrinks from the shedding of the blood of his mother's husband and accepts the trip to England. Again he wavers and returns to Elsinore, and circumstances combined with his uncle's treachery and Laertes's momentary thirst for revenge at any price bring about the final catastrophe.

and before we reach the pleasant financial uplands again many of the conspirators will be broke—hoist by their own petard, so to speak. There never existed in the United States such a dangerous class as the bankers and brokers of Wall street. There never was a time when this country needed a Jackson so much as now. The power of evil of the bank of the United States and its ramifications throughout the country was not a circumstance to that of this numerous, powerful and unscrupulous cabal. There are thousands of men in the city of New York who would sell out country, kindred and God for a consideration. There is one consolation in the situation, however, and that is that when the country rises in its power and starts in to deal with them in earnest they are well concentrated and can be reached quickly and effectively. That the power will ultimately be taken from Wall street to juggle with the currency—contracting and expanding it at their own sweet will—let no man doubt. The safety of the country absolutely demands this reformation.

There is no end of the talk about New York furnishing all the money to move the crops, etc. The report of the Kansas bank commissioners shows that the banks of that state employ their own money, and that they owe the New York banks nothing. That a great movement to supply the country with ample funds to do its business outside of the dictation of the New York banks and New York wrecking bankers and brokers is under way, is apparent on all hands. Even the Republicans of Pennsylvania, in their recent convention, demanded that the currency should be increased to $40 per capita of the population of the United States. That would give buoyancy and energy to business, and would result in an unprecedented era of prosperity.

SENATOR TELLER, having said that he had brought his winter clothes with him, that remark is interpreted to mean that the fight will last till the holidays, or longer. Unconditional repeal of the purchasing feature of the Sherman bill is said to have only a majority of two or three votes in the senate, and would have none if Lee Mantle and two other senators, who were appointed by governors after the legislatures of several states had failed to elect, had been given their seats. Senator John P. Jones is reported as saying that no vote will be had in the senate until these states have had time to fill the vacant seats. Whether the silver men can carry out this programme time will tell.

THE council yesterday made an energetic dive into the dives and disposed of three, to the great rejoicing of all good citizens. Now if they will drop the attempt to inaugurate a Blue Law regime as to respectable saloons everything will be lovely. Go for the dives and root them out, Messieurs, but remember that personal liberty is dear to the American citizen, and that unwarranted invasions of it cannot last.

AMUSEMENTS.

LOS ANGELES THEATRE.—Mr. Robert Mantell made a great error in playing Hamlet on the last night of his engagement. He should have given it at the commencement of his season, for he plays it better than any other role in his repertory, and he does all of them well.

THE HERALD of yesterday predicted that his audience last night would be agreeably disappointed at his portrayal of this wonderful role, but the prediction fell far short of indicating the artistic pleasure which he bestowed on all those who witnessed last evening's performance; for despite the poor support and an entire absence of any pretensions at stage settings, Mr. Mantell, from the rise of the curtain to its final fall, won the admiration of the audience and was loudly recalled at the close of each act. He imitated no one, except perhaps in wearing a Fechterian yellow wig; he was original throughout, and gave the lines with an eloquence, force and skill that merit the highest praise.

His Hamlet is effectively simple; there is no pretension or perplexing metaphysical feature in his conception of the part. He plays it as Shakespeare wrote it, simply, directly and vigorously. He is a young prince who by the aid of a supernatural visitation has discovered his father-uncle's crime, and his mother's worse than weakness. He is tortured as to his duty. He has vowed to the shade of his father that he will avenge his murder. He is a soldierly young scholar, and distrusts the vision which first prompts his action. He finds his love for Ophelia of secondary import to his duty of punishing his father's murderer, but he shrinks from the shedding of the blood of his mother's husband and accepts the trip to England. Again he wavers and returns to Elsinore, and circumstances combined with his uncle's treachery and Laertes's momentary thirst for revenge at any price bring about the final catastrophe.

let that is able to arouse the enthusiasm of old play-goers who have studied Booth, both of the Barretts, Fechter and a number of lesser stellar lights is certainly a notable production and Mr. Mantell's performance is such a one. He makes Hamlet's character fresh and blood Hamlet, full of the vigor of youth, but does not ignore any one of the fine points in the role; not for an instant is the mental value of the character subordinated to the physical. It is a Hamlet which can be read undoubtedly will be improved, but it is none the less a wonderful work of art, one for which every one who saw it last night should be grateful, and one which it is to be hoped Mr. Mantell will often repeat here.

THE best and brightest of all the Frohman comedies, "Jane," comes to the New Los Angeles theatre next Monday evening for three nights engagement. The engagement of this comedy in San Francisco was a great success. It was one of the most successful of the season, and it made an impression that is not easily forgotten. It introduced an exceptionally clever company of players. A new Jane, in the person of Miss Jennie Yeaman, will be seen here. She has been especially selected by manager Charles Frohman to play this part, and it is said that her performance is the best yet given.

IT will be recalled that "Jane" is an exceedingly funny comedy. The story briefly told is as follows: A reckless young man has been getting money from his guardian on the statement that he has an extravagant wife. He has really no wife at all, and when the guardian suddenly appears on a visit it is necessary to provide something that will at least look like a wife. The young man provides himself with an alleged belated wife, and his brother obligingly provides him with another. Then a child is needed and found. Another is needed and not found, but is accounted for. The mother of the first child comes and demands it, and the butler, who is the real husband of the master's pretended wife, and his brother obligingly provides him with another. Then a child is needed and found. Another is needed and not found, but is accounted for. MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

A Railway Switch Across Second Street Causes a Commotion. Considerable commotion was caused around the city hall yesterday by the report that there had been some trouble over the Southern Pacific company laying a railway switch across Second street near Vine. Immediately upon the receipt of the information the board of public works and the city attorney proceeded to the scene to make an investigation.

A large force of laborers were found constructing the switch, and upon inquiring as to who had charge of the work but little satisfaction could be obtained. The men started to construct the switch at 7 o'clock yesterday morning, when they were stopped by Inspector Weiss, who is in charge of the paving on East Second street. The plans of the railway company were frustrated until after 12 o'clock, when the superintendent of streets, D. A. Watson, sent an order to the inspector to the effect that the railway company had a perfect right to build their track across the street, and instructed the inspector not to further interfere with the work. The trouble arose over the misunderstanding as to whether the company would build the switch in conformity to the street grade. Unless this were done the storm-water drain would naturally be interfered with and property flooded during the rainy season.

THE WHEELMEN.

The Meet to Take Place at Riverside on Admission Day. The principal event in amateur sports for the first part of September is the Riverside race meet on Admission day. The wheelmen of that city have shown much enterprise in regard to the affair, and offer a list of valuable prizes, aggregating over $1000. The meet is to consist of two parts, the road race in the morning and the track events in the afternoon. The majority of the interest centers in the former event. The crack riders of the entire southern section will enter.

The local men will be well in force and Riverside will also be well represented. William the Santa Paula phenomenon, is announced as a probable starter. This will be received with pleasure by those who have a weakness for dark horses. He will doubtless ride from scratch. The most of the local men claim to be in good condition but with what truth remains to be seen.

THE COURTS.

Billy Young Wants a New Trial—Other Cases Considered. Billy Young was up for sentence before Judge Smith yesterday upon the conviction of manslaughter. His counsel filed a motion for a new trial. It was asked on the grounds that the verdict was contrary to the law and the evidence; that the court misdirected the jury, and that new evidence has been discovered. The sentence was continued until Saturday and the motion was taken under advisement.

G. Bronson was granted a divorce yesterday from Mrs. F. B. Bronson on the ground of desertion, by Judge Smith. The deferred hearing in the W. C. Mason divorce suit was resumed by Judge Smith yesterday, and the co-respondent, Charles Watrous, was put on the stand. He admitted that he had been criminally intimate with Mrs. Mason, and was going on to tell the circumstances when the court stopped him. A decree of divorce was then granted to Mr. Mason. A petition for letters of administration upon the estate of Aaron Maso was filed yesterday by Mercedes B. Maso, the estate being valued at $282.

He will settle up some business affairs, take in the world's fair and then come back to Los Angeles for life. Mr. W. A. Davis and family and Mrs. J. J. Davis and son, who have spent several weeks in Los Angeles visiting relatives and friends, departed for their home in Brentwood, Contra Costa county, yesterday.

Deputy Sheriff H. C. Vignes leaves today for Ventura to enjoy a well-earned rest. He will visit Huemene and various places in the vicinity of Ventura. He will also attend the grand celebration of the Native Sons at that place next week. Gen. John Mansfield, president of the state board of Normal school trustees, stated yesterday that the plans recently agreed upon for the addition to the present school were in the hands of the governor and secretary of state for their approval. The plans would probably be forwarded to the trustees some time next week, when the advertising for construction would be let and bids opened.

National Bar Association. MILWAUKEE, Aug. 31.—Justice Brown of the United States supreme court delivered an address before the American Bar association this morning. A committee of the National Real Estate association appeared before the convention and urged the desirability of the federal government enacting laws governing real estate transactions.
