

the supreme court and were not willing to bow to its decision. Hill then said his respects to Morgan. "It is true," he said, "there are politicians in New York." He supposed there were no politicians in Alabama. They were all statesmen from that country. [Laughter.] Morgan had spoken of his life-long devotion to the constitution. "I supposed," said Hill, "that for a brief period my friend was supporting another constitution, but I may be mistaken." [Applauds.]

As to Morgan's fall about dying at his post, Hill said he had heard like statements by men who were going to "die in the last ditch." "But," said Hill, "there are many of them left." [Renewed laughter.] Referring to the remark of Morgan, complimentary to Allen G. Thurman, Hill said he supposed Morgan, in making the tribute, had in view all of the record made by Thurman in the senate. He then read from the journal of the senate when, on one occasion, Thurman was temporarily called to the chair and certain senators refused to vote, counted a quorum.

The galleries vigorously applauded the recital of this action on the part of Thurman, and Hill said: "There is a precedent which I ask this body to imitate. There is one distinguished man whom I propose to follow, rather than the lead of the distinguished senator from Alabama."

Sherman of Ohio then addressed the senate. He said that the senate were made to expedite public business in an orderly and proper manner, and their object was to enable the senate to legislate. While that was the primary object of all the rules, they did not curtail the opportunity of the minority to obstruct legislation, the rules should at once be altered. Whenever the minority used means of obstruction unduly it created revolution. He thought, therefore, primarily not at the session, the time had arrived when the senate must adopt rules to prevent obstruction to public business.

The proper way to secure a limit of debate in the senate was at the next session of congress to have the committee on rules strengthen the numbers and have it examine all the various rules and report a rule which would give the minority full power to express their opinion and prescribe the time when and the place where the floor vote could be taken. The present session has continued two months and nothing was done—not a single measure had passed the senate that was of the slightest importance. If that continued the senate would no longer command the respect of serious and intelligent people, and Americans were men of action in all departments.

Sherman said the responsibility in the present situation rested upon the Democratic senators. The president had expressed his opinion with the Republicans did not believe in him or his politics, and were under no obligations to him, yet they furnished two-thirds of the votes necessary to carry out his will, while the party at present stood unable to formulate a policy or say what they thought of the policy or of any important matters demanded solution and the senate stood in the way.

"We ask our brothers on the other side," continued Sherman, "to consult with each other. If we do not like the president's plan on silver, give us some other, and in God's name let us settle this important question for the people of the country; then we will take it into our consideration. If we can agree with you we will, we will not follow your example. If we do not agree with you, we will give you a manly no." Sherman argued in favor of strengthening the gold reserve and said he had seen a letter from the secretary of the treasury to the effect that there would be a deficiency of at least $50,000,000 in this exigency the erection of public buildings and public improvements should be suspended.

Morgan asked if Sherman would vote for the unconditional repeal of the Sherman act. "No," replied Sherman emphatically, "and no other man who understands the subject would do it, in my judgment." Morgan said he intended to offer an amendment to that effect soon.

In conclusion Sherman said: "Break down this barrier now maintained by the United States senate; break up this violent and insolent obstruction to the will of the majority; give the senate free power and play in 10 days from this time the skies will brighten, business will resume its ordinary course, and all the clouds will have lowered or our house will be in the deep bosom of the ocean buried."

Mills (Dem.) of Texas, in a long speech took the position that Sherman shot to the mark when he said the responsibility rested upon the Democratic party. Voorhees moved that the senate take a recess until 10 o'clock tomorrow.

Stewart moved to amend by making the hour of meeting tomorrow at 12 o'clock. Lost: Yeas 12, nays 46.

Voorhees moved that the senate take a recess until 10 o'clock tomorrow.

The senate thereupon took a recess until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

HOUSE PROCEEDINGS.

The Bloody Shirt Vigorously Waved by Mr. Burrows.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The bloody shirt was waved in the house for a time this morning, when the bill removing the necessity for affirmative proof of the loyalty of pensioners of war previous to the civil war was called up. Burrows claimed that it would repeal the section barring from pensions all who engaged in the rebellion.

Colonel Oates denied this, and said it only affected a few survivors of the Mexican and Indian wars.

"Call the hell hounds off the track of the union soldiers," vehemently said Burrows, "before you restore men who were false to the union to the pension rolls." (Republican applause.)

60. The substitute was agreed to—78 to 45. The bill then passed.

The house devoted the remainder of the afternoon to consideration of the printing bill. Without disposing of the bill the house adjourned.

A SICK SENATOR.

Mr. Gibson of Maryland Becomes Suddenly Ill.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Senator Gibson of Maryland was taken suddenly ill in the cloak room at noon and physicians hurriedly summoned prescribed for him. They said the trouble primarily was an attack of indigestion, but it affected the muscles of the heart. There was, however, no organic affection of the heart and no danger of a fatal termination. He was taken home to the Sherman hotel. This is the second attack of the kind he has suffered in the past few days.

Senator Gibson is much better tonight and the indications are he will be able to resume his duties in the senate in a few days.

By the Associated Press.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 17.—Fort Santa Cruz opened fire on the insurgent ships Trajano and Aquidaban today and inflicted great damage upon them both.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The Herald's advices from Rio de Janeiro say the government officials report that the fire was opened on Nictheroy by the insurgent fleet in an attempt to dislodge Peixoto's troops, but it was not successful. The insurgents deny that attempts were made. Mello's officers are now in possession of the naval department. The insurgents' great need now is men. They have not enough to man the fleet. At Fort Valletgaon, 700 men who are stationed there declared in favor of the rebels. This event has given the revolutionary forces an opportunity to land within the city. The government forts in the harbor fired upon Fort Valletgaon and the insurgent ships. Valletgaon responded with destructive effect.

News confirming the capture of d'Estero by Admiral Mello's fleet. The garrison declared for the revolutionary leaders. Admiral Mello prevents any ship loaded with provisions from entering Rio or discharging cargoes.

News confirming the capture of Santa Catharina by the rebels, which is denied, has been received. The troops in the garrison joined the insurgents.

The Brazilian minister at Montevideo received the following from Peixoto's advisers. The statements in the dispatch are credited to "Fort Santa Cruz in a fight with Fort Valletgaon silenced the guns. The guns of Trajano are disabled. The guns of Aquidaban are damaged. The steamer Arano passed into the harbor, but was sunk by the guns of Fort Santa Cruz. Many were killed and many prisoners captured. The packet boat Pallas, from Santa Catalonia, with provisions for Mello, tried to reach the fleet, but was repulsed by Fort Santa Cruz. The state of siege is prolonged for 16 days."

THE WORLD'S W. G. T. U.

They Approve the Plan for a Christian Jubilee in 1900.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—The World's Woman's Christian Temperance union today unanimously approved the plan presented by the editor of the Christian Statesman for the celebration of the year A. D. 1900, the 1900th birthday of Christ, and beginning the 20th century, by a year of world-circling Christian conventions, so arranged that the host of "around the world" missionaries and tourists can attend them in succession.

Miss Sakurai of Japan and Frances E. Willard and Mrs. Somerset and Mrs. Wilbur F. Crafts were appointed a committee to invite the co-operation of other Christian organizations, and with them arrange for the celebration proposed, in that it is to be prominently Christian, and chiefly commercial, as the world's fair must be, in that it is not to be celebrated in one place, but extended to all lands, and in that it is to be continued for the whole year as fitting for so great an event.

Mr. Sakurai of Japan delivered an eulogy on the life and work of Mary Allen West, the missionary who recently died in Japan.

Susan B. Anthony stirred the audience up with a woman's rights and temperance speech. She paid her respects to Governor Alge and Mayor Harrison, who, though invited, failed to attend the congress. She said the reason was that the audience were bonnets.

HOPE FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

Ravages of the Disease Decreased by the Amick Cure.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 17.—The county medical society's petition to the board of health to isolate consumptives has increased their fears, occasioned by startling headlines in a local paper, declaring the disease infectious. The state legislature of Michigan recently endorsed this view, as did the medical congress in Washington, and deaths from consumption having decreased everywhere recently, Dr. Fleck, with a few others, ascribes this to isolation. The majority of the medical experts, however, credit it to the free, broadcast distribution, through physicians, of test outfits of the Amick treatment, by which authentic cases are reported daily in the medical and secular press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 17.—Recent local editorials condemning the medical code while commending Amick, the Cincinnati scientist for withholding his consumption cure formula, are exciting much discussion in medical circles.

The Times said: "His discovery greatly assists the fight against this enemy of human life, and 30 or more local physicians say the medicine accomplishes more than his claim."

The Journal said: "It is one of the most valuable and wonderful discoveries ever hoped for in medical science, and the formula is not given to every Tom, Dick or Harry to monkey with, and is preserved from the tampering of fool empiricists."
