

mayor again, his voice scarcely above a whisper. A moment later he sank into unconsciousness, and 20 minutes after receiving his wound Mr. Harrison was dead.

PROMPT ACTION OF THE POLICE. When young Harrison came down stairs and learned the cause of the shooting, it turned in a burglar alarm, and even before he reached his father's side, a patrol wagon filled with officers from the Lake-street station was dashing toward the mayor's house. By the time the officers arrived all trace of the murderer was lost, and even before the mayor breathed his last officers from every station in the city were on the outlook for the murderer. Every possible effort was made to secure medical attendance for Harrison, but when Dr. Lyman, the first physician to arrive, reached the mayor's side, he was a dead man.

THE MURDERER SURRENDERS. About 25 minutes after the shooting, Sergeant Frank McDonald was standing in the office of the Desplaines-street police station. Every available officer had already hurried out to work on the case, and McDonald was preparing to follow. The door was pushed gently open and in walked a small, smooth-shaven, poorly-dressed man, carrying a revolver in his hand. He shook like a man with the palsy, his face was white and drawn, great drops of perspiration were crossing each other down his face, and his tottering limbs seemed scarcely able to hold him up. Looking at McDonald straight in the eyes, he said: "I did it." "You did it?" asked McDonald. "Yes, I did." "Did what?" said the officer, as he laid one hand on the fellow's shoulder, and with the other took the revolver. "I shot Mayor Harrison, and that is what I shot him with," was the reply. "What made you do it?" asked McDonald.

"He said he would make me a corporation counsel, and he did not; that is what I shot him for." Prendergast was trembling so he could scarcely stand, and the officer led him to a chair and asked him a few more questions to which Prendergast would only make the reply he had first given as to the cause of the shooting. He said after leaving Harrison's house he had taken a street car and started toward the Desplaines-street station, with the object of giving himself up. "The car did not go very fast," said he, "or I would have been here sooner."

EXCITED CROWD GATHERS. The cell door was barely closed behind the murderer when an excited crowd began gathering about the police station. Patrol wagons rattled up to the place, cabs and carriages came by the score, and the occupants crowded and pushed their way into the office. Personal friends of the dead mayor, city officials and curious persons crowded against each other in a wild endeavor to learn if the story, which spread like wildfire through the city, was true. An immense throng gathered, and laboring men who stopped on their way home added their voices to the confused threats of vengeance, for Mr. Harrison was popular with the masses. The streets were soon filled with people, and the officers, as they looked out of the station windows upon the sea of angry faces, became alarmed for the safety of their prisoner. A hasty conference was held, and it was decided to remove Prendergast to the central station in the city hall. The trembling, pale-faced man was led between stalwart officers to the rear door and hurried away in the darkness.

TAKEN TO A PLACE OF SAFETY. Meantime tidings of the murder swept like an electric shock through the city. Every body seemed to gather about the Central station. Bulletins were posted in prominent downtown places and about them eager throngs surged and struggled. The newspaper offices were besieged by eager questioners and downtown business was for a time at a standstill.

Before the prisoner reached the city hall the news of his coming had been communicated to the crowd. The murderer was rushed through the throng and taken by a private entrance into Chief of Detectives Shea's office. The doors were hastily closed, and hurried from adjacent stations to guard the place. The prisoner, as soon as he reached the office, sank exhausted into a chair. His head fell and his livid face and staring eyes presented a ghastly picture. He is a slender man, perhaps 24 years of age, with a beardless and cadaverous face and a stupid, almost idiotic, expression.

THE CAUSE OF THE CRIME. For a time the man refused to answer any questions, and then in a scarcely audible voice he said: "I'm sick, I'm sick." Chief Shea told him he was a doctor and asked: "Why did you kill the mayor?" "Well," the man responded feebly, "he told me he would make me a corporation counsel and did not do it, so I shot him. That's all; I shot him."

"What is your name?" asked the detective. "Prendergast; Patrick Eugene, or Eugene Patrick, makes no difference which." "Where do you live?" "I don't know; around here somewhere I guess. I don't live at the railroad tracks; I'll tell you that," he said emphatically. The officers experienced a good deal of difficulty in further examination, but at last were convinced the murderer had been a newspaper carrier, whose route was in the vicinity of the mayor's home. For several hours his examination continued, but little of importance was developed. Other witnesses were examined and the prisoner was finally placed in a cell under the city hall, and additional policemen stationed about the building for the night's vigil.

THREATS OF LYNCHING. All night long crowds came and went about the place. The bitter feeling against the murderer became intensified and significant but subdued remarks of a convenient lamp post and swift vengeance were frequently heard. At one time during the evening, as a carriage drove rapidly down the street, a young man shouted, "There he goes." There was an immediate rush for the retreating vehicle, but some one shouted that Prendergast was still in the chief's office, and the crowd returned.

HARRISON'S LAST WORDS. Mr. Chalmers said late tonight, regarding the shooting: "I expressed to Harrison the hope that he was not badly wounded, but he said, 'I am a dead man.' He repeated this several times and sank so rapidly that we knew there was no hope for him. The family, of course, are utterly prostrated. Young Harrison said to me: 'I told father long ago something like this would happen. He was too easy in letting people in to see him, cranks and everybody.'"

"After we carried Harrison to the couch," continued Chalmers, "he said it was useless to try to do anything for him, and his last words, as nearly as I can remember, were: 'Give me water. Send for Annie. Give me water.'"

PRENDERGAST UNDOUBTEDLY CRAZY. "Prendergast is crazy," said Corporation Counsel Kraus, who was perhaps the closest friend Harrison had. "I know him well, and he called at my office and told me he was going to be appointed my successor. The man was so probably out of his mind that I did not consider it worth while to talk seriously with him. I spoke to the mayor about it and he said he had received threatening letters from a fellow but paid no attention to them, as the man was insane."

THE DEAD MAN'S FINANCE. Miss Annie Howard, the fiancée of Mr. Harrison, was in the house at the time the fatal shot was fired. In accordance with the wounded man's request she was at once summoned and was present when the end came. Miss Howard's grief was pitiable. She was completely overcome and was taken to the house of Carter Harrison, jr., where she spent the night. Carter Harrison, jr., was at the park when the news of his father's death reached him, and he hastened home. Mrs. Ousley, the mayor's daughter, who resides nearly five miles from her father's residence, received the news by telephone and hastened to Ashland boulevard, but her father was dead fully 20 minutes before she arrived.

POPULAR INDIGNATION. At 1:30 o'clock this morning the crowd around the Harrison residence dispersed. The same quiet is not prevalent in other portions of the city, however, Harrison had a strong hold on the people, and among his friends indignation against the murderer is intense. Several meetings have already been held, and Chief Brennan sent out a general order at 1 o'clock for the police to disperse all meetings and crowds. The leading business men of Chicago were in attendance upon the Commercial club banquet when the news of Harrison's death reached them. The banquet immediately adjourned amid general expressions of most sincere regret at the tragic death of the city's chief executive.

THE MURDERED MAYOR'S CAREER. Carter H. Harrison was born near Lexington, Ky., February 15, 1825. His great-grandfather was the father of Benjamin, who was the grandfather of William Henry Harrison. His grandfather was a first cousin of John C. Breckinridge and Benjamin Harrison. By the death of his father he was left at the age of 8 to care for his mother, who was the daughter of Col. William Russell of the United States army, and a northern Indiana farmer. Dr. Lewis Marshall, brother of the chief justice and father of T. M. Marshall, prepared him for Yale, where he graduated in 1845. After graduating in law and traveling abroad two years he settled in Chicago in 1855, invested in real estate and came wealthy. He was commissioner of Cook county from 1871 to 1874, when he was sent to congress, serving two years. He attracted attention during the Hayes-Tilden contest; introduced a resolution for a six-year presidential term, and making presidents eligible for one term only, but senators for life. He was elected mayor of Chicago in 1879, '81, '83, '85 and '93. In 1884 he was the Democratic candidate against Oglesby for governor of Illinois, and the same year defeated at large the national convention that nominated Cleveland. After completing his fourth term as mayor he made a trip around the world and wrote A Race with the Sun. In 1890 he visited Alaska and the National Park, and his book, A Summer's Outing, secured him a literary fame. In 1891 he purchased the Chicago Times, which he edited until elected mayor last April, and which his sons now own. He was married in 1855 to Supple Preston. She died in Europe in 1876. In 1882 he married Marguerite Stearns, who died in 1887, and he was to have been married a few days hence to Miss Anna Howard of New Orleans. At the time of his death he was a candidate for United States senator. During the past six months he received the congratulations of delegations from the world's fair, and different congresses and conventions from all parts of the country and the world, and his welcome addresses constitute a volume of happy thoughts and suggestions. His last address was delivered today to the visiting mayors and municipal officers.

THE NEWS AT WASHINGTON. The Capital Startled by Mayor Harrison's Tragic Death. WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Nothing in years has so startled the people of Washington as the tragic death of Mayor Carter H. Harrison tonight. The news was received here in an Associated Press dispatch in less than 10 minutes after the horrible occurrence, and in a short time public men from every quarter of the city hastened to the Associated Press headquarters to hear the particulars.

Vice-President Stevenson said to an Associated Press reporter: "I am shocked to hear of the terrible tragedy. It almost passes belief. I have known Harrison intimately almost a lifetime. He served in congress together nearly 20 years ago. He was one of the ablest men I have ever known, and Chicago never had a more efficient mayor. He was one of the marked men of his time and his loss will be deeply felt in Chicago and Illinois. I sympathize with his family most deeply in this great bereavement."

Senator John M. Palmer of Illinois said he was so horrified by the news of Mayor Harrison's death that he scarcely knew what to say. "I have known Carter Harrison intimately," he said, "for nearly thirty years, and his assassination is almost as shocking to me as that of President Garfield. I do not know of anything in the history of Illinois politics more to be deplored. I have known him constantly since we were boys, and I have always considered him one of my best friends. His chances of becoming the next senator from Illinois were good, and I heard many politicians express the belief that he would have practically no opposition. His death is a serious blow to the Democratic party in Illinois, as he was one of the most energetic workers they had. His death was so sudden, so unexpected and so shocking to me that I can scarcely realize it is true."

Senator Voorhees said: "I consider the death of Mayor Harrison a calamity, not to Chicago alone, but to the whole country. He was a man of national prominence and one of the foremost men of the Democratic party."

A COWARDLY CRIME AT CHINO.

Herbert R. Holman Murdered and Robbed.

Shot Three Times and Then Clubbed Over the Head.

The Victim Was an Employee of the Beet Sugar Factory—Indian Trailers Put on the Tracks of the Two Murderers.

SPECIAL TO THE HERALD. SAN BERNARDINO, Oct. 28.—The following message was received at the sheriff's office today:

CHINO, Oct. 28, 1888. Sheriff J. P. Booth, San Bernardino, Cal.: H. Holman murdered and robbed last night near beet sugar factory. Investigate immediately. We authorize you to offer reward of $500 on behalf of Chino Sugar company for arrest and conviction of murderer.

C. KENNEDY HAMILTON, Manager. O. J. Newman, deputy sheriff at Chino, has sent in the following: Holman lived at some distance from the town proper near the Mexican settlement. The shots were heard about 7:30 o'clock. The deputy and a party of citizens went there immediately and found the man dead, having been shot three times. His watch had been taken, but the money in his pocket was not disturbed. The murderers were doubtless frightened away. Two tracks were found, one made by a No. 10 and the other by a No. 5 new shoe.

INDIAN TRAILERS EMPLOYED. Deputy Sheriff Thomas McFarlane left this evening for North Cucamonga with Indian Charley, who will secure two of his countrymen and proceed to Chino where they expect to arrive about 11 o'clock tonight. The Mojave Indian trailers will be placed on the track of the murderers. The deputy at the scene of the crime is preserving the trail and Sheriff Booth hopes to overtake the criminals soon.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT. POMONA, Oct. 28.—[Special]—Another horrible, inhuman and mysterious murder has been chronicled with, as yet, no clue to the perpetrator. A prospector, named H. Holman, aged about 50, who had been living and working at Chino for the past two months, was found lying dead this morning between the depot and factory at that place with four bullet holes in his head. He had drawn his wages and gone up town to make some purchases. There is no clue as to the perpetrator of the foul deed or the cause, but it is surmised by some that he was murdered for what few dollars he had drawn.

SHOT AND CLUBBED. CHINO, Oct. 28.—Last night about 8 o'clock Herbert R. Holman, an employee of the sugar factory, was brutally murdered just outside the factory gates. He was shot three times and clubbed over the head. The motive is supposed to have been robbery. Five hundred dollars reward is offered by the sugar company's agent for the arrest of the murderers.

NO CAHUENGA CHINESE.

The Farmers of That Valley Drive the Mongols Out.

Again have the farmers of this vicinity asserted most positively that the Chinamen must go. This time it is the peaceable residents of the Cahuenga valley who have arisen in their might at the dead of night and fired the whole lot of Mongolian coolies from the delightful valley to the northwest of town.

The farmers became disgusted with the delay in enforcing the Geary act, and took measures to execute the law as regards their own district. They held a mass meeting late Friday night and decided upon immediate and decisive action in regard to the Chinese laborers in the valley.

As a result about 100 masked men armed with all manner of weapons started their midnight crusade against unsuspecting John. The three principal ranches, the Denker, Hancock and Griffith, were visited and the Chinese laborers ordered to "move on."

The Chinamen were scared out of their wits, and many jumped through the windows and headed across the fields. Others were captured. Various other ranches were visited and the Chinese ordered to go. They were allowed the privilege of taking their personal effects with them, but in the majority of cases John was satisfied with the assurance of a whole skin so made no attempt by going after his clothes to delay his separation from his unknown captors.

The captives to the number of about 18 were marched to the end of the Temple-street cable road and told the Chinatown lay to the east, and that it would be more healthy for them there than in the Cahuenga valley in the future.

Judging from the alacrity with which the Chinese started towards the city, they evidently agreed with the Cahuenga vigilantes. So far as is known no bodily injury was offered to the Chinese. Many amusing situations took place, but the ranchers were out for business and allowed nothing to deter them from their purpose.

The friends of the bonned Chinamen have placed the matter in the hands of Attorney A. B. Hotchkiss, who stated yesterday that he will bring a suit for $35,000 damages against the parties concerned in the affair. He left for San Francisco yesterday to consult with an attorney of that city in regard to the present affair.
