And the Midwinter People Carried the Day.

The Citrus Fair Will Undoubtedly Be Held in San Francisco.

Proceedings of the Midwinter Fair Association Yesterday - The Merchants Make a Feeble Protest-Other Matters.

It was practically settled yesterday afternoon that Southern California will have no annual citrus fair this year. San Francisco will be given the pleasure

The matter was decided at the joint meeting of the midwinter fair commissioners for Southern California and representatives from the chamber of commerce, which had been called in order to give Mesers. Gird and Hardison, the Southern California representatives on the state board of horticulture, an opportunity of ascertaining the sentiments of the section in regard to holding the cit-rus fair in San Francisco instead of in Southern California.

All of the delegates from over the section were in favor of the change, and their expressions left no doubt in the minds of the two gentlemen where the minds of the two gentlemen where the majority of the people of Southern California desired the citrus show to go.

Mr. Gird stated after the meeting yesterday that the citrus fair would be held in San Francisco with the midwinter fair, although he had not yet sent in his report to the board.

The meeting was attended by representatives from the Merchants' association, who opposed the fair leaving Los Angeles. The Southern California association of midwinter fair commissioners also met and transacted important busi-

Mr. J. S. Slauson presided and C. D. Willard acted as secretary.

The order of business for the sessions of the association as followed by the county organization was first adopted, after which the roll was called, the following being present: T. D. Stimson, Charles Forman and Judge Silent of Los Angeles; F. A. Foster, Ventura county; J. R. Newberry, Riverside county; T. S. Ingraham, San Bernardino county; R. H. Young and Mr. Mc-Koon, San Diego county.

Mr. Forman then reported that the Southern California building was fairly started, and if the weather was good it would be ready by the required time. The contractor had stated further that he would especially endeavor to com-Willard acted as secretary.

he would especially endeavor to com-plete one of the wings by the 20th inst., in order that the goods might be shipped and stored. He said further that Mr. Rawson had informed him that if the people desired to make a separate displays of minerals for their respective plays of minerals for their respective sections they should send samples to the general building.

He was asked if all of the contracts were made with the Midwinter Fair company. He replied that all of them had been made, and he would send out to his office and get copies of them.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA DAY. Judge Silent reported the decision of the Los Angeles county commissioners in regard to having a general Southern California day. He favored this rather than each county having a special day. This was discussed at some length, the majority being in favor of each county having its own individual day and then have a grand Southern California day.

The chair suggested that the meeting should decide what day the Southern California celebration should be held. Mr. Foster thought a committee had be instructed to communicate with the midwinter fair people and ask that the day be held some time during the latter part of April or the first part of May.

Mr. Forman favored holding it during february, as the best weather would fall at that time, and if put off until later, the eastern visitors would likely be endeavoring to leave for their homes and could not attend it. Judge Silent thought they should wait until flowers and fruits were in pro-fusion, which was not in February. Mr. Young moved that Wednesday, February 21st., be selected as Southern California day. This was seconded and

THE AGREEMENT. The secretary then read the agreement made by the Southern California association with the California Midwinter Fair company. The agreement is of considerable length, and apparently covers everything. One of the condi-tions is that no articles are to be shown the building for competition, these having to go into the general building. Exception is made in favor of the citrus displays, which can be shown in the building for competition provided that the Southern California citrus fair was held in San Francisco.

On motion of Mr. Forman it was decided to have additional copies of the agreement made and sent to the sur-

ADVISED TO KEEP QUIET. Judge Silent stated they had received information that a restaurant was to be frected in front of the Southern California building. He desired to ask Mr. Forman what he had ascertained in regard to it.
Mr. Forman replied that he had seen nen at work on excavation for this work and spoke to Director-General De Young in regard to it. Mr. De Young set out and ordered the work stopped. It was, so far as Mr. Forman had ascertained, the annex of Humboldt county to the building. Judge Silent replied that the management of the fair had assured management of the fair had assured them that there would be nothing to detract from the site or appearance of the Southern California building, and he favored the passing by the meeting of a mild query as to whether they intended to allow these buildings to be erected on the Southern California building site.

Mr. Forman capital that the least said

Mr. Forman replied that the least said by this section the better. The mid-winter fair people were so situated now that they did not care especially wheth-er or not Southern California exhibited. They had, in fact, strongly hinted to him that this section had delayed so long in making final answer that it had occasioned them considerable trouble.

Mr. Slauson added that the people with whom the local committee had treated a

Mr. Wiggins also briefly addressed Mr. Wiggins also briefly addressed the meeting and especially urged them to decide as to how the work was to be divided between the association and individual counties.

He was interrupted by the chairman, who stated that there was to be an important conference with Messrs. Gird and Hamilton, the local representatives on the state board of agriculture, in regard to holding the citrus fair at San Francisco.

The meeting then adjourned for ha.: an hour in order to talk with these two gentlemen.

the proposed removal of the fair might be generally discussed and enable the commissioners to ascertain the sentiments of the various sections in regard to it.

Mr. J. B. Lankershim, vice-president of the chamber, was called to the chair.

The meeting was also attended by a delegation from the Merchants' asseciation, who came to protest against the removal of the fair from Los Angeles.

Mr. Gard was introduced and spoke.

He first briefly stated his conference with the committee last September and then of the progress of the matter. The northern growers recently attended a meeting where they had fairly flung down the gauntlet to the live people to come. He thought that the growers of this section should not stand back, as the citrus industry was about the best cared for in the section. He was followed by Mr. Hardison, who said that he preferred hearing some of the other persons talk.

MR. SLAUSON.

Merchants' association have made. It is organized for your own protection and interests."

He was interrupted by being told that the organization was but 30 days old. Mr. Slauson added that he had nothing to say against its members personally.

He then told of how the money had been obtained from the supervisors, and it had been opposed by the Merchants' association. Who, even after the money had been received, followed up their previous move by going to the supervisors and prevailing upon them to withdraw their deciscion.

Mr. Slauson added that he had nothing to say against its members personally.

He then told of how the money had been opposed by the Merchants' association. Who, even after the money had been opposed by the Merchants' association. Who, even after the money had been opposed by the Merchants' association. Who, even after the money had been opposed by the Merchants' association. Who, even after the money had been opposed by the Merchants' association. Who,

As a member of the executive committee, Mr. Slauson stated he would express no opinion but as an individual.

RIVERSIDE GOES NORTH. Mr. Newberry, of Riverside county, then said that his section was prepared to make only one exhibit this year and that would be at the midwinter fair. Whether or not the fair would be held in Los Angeles or Colton, it would be held without Riverside county.

VENTURA, TOO. Mr. Foster of Ventura spoke in favor of making the exhibit in San Francisco, and said it will go there. EVER READY SAN DIEGO. Mr. McKoon said he was in favor of taking up the gauntlet of the northern and central growers and going up and taking their chances with them. But, he continued, San Diego county would go anywhere the exhibit was held.

that the northern growers purpose to make the coming fair their last, and will use the entire appropriation of $5000 for premiums in the present fair. He thought that Southern California could also obtain all of its appropriation for the present citrus fair. MR. YOUNG SAYS NO!

Mr. Young did not favor using up all of the appropriation this year. It would be better, he thought, to hold would be better, he thought, to hold the fair in San Francisco this year and use $2500 and hold another one later on, using up the balance of the fund.

Mr. Gird agreed with Mr. Young obout using all of the money, and in reply to a question said that the northern people would contribute all of their $5000 even if Southern California used but half of hera. but half of hers.

REGISTERED A KICK. After some general discussion the better be appointed.

Judge Silent moved that the secretary Merchants' association were present and desired to address the meeting in regard to the proposed removal of the citrus fair. The following gentlemen composed the delegation: Major Furrey, H. Jevne, J. T. Sheward, H. Siegel, C. Jacoby, C. H. Hance, Mesers. Blewett and Bien.

MR. SHEWARD TALKS. Mr. J. Sheward was introduced, and spoke against the removal of the fair from Los Angeles. He declared it to be simply not holding the fair outside of Los Angeles. They were tired of being sidetracked, and the mercantile inter-ests of the city were certainly as important as the agricultural. He did not see why this city should have to deprive itself to build up San Francisco. The Merchants' association was willing to meet the midwinter fair people half way, and they would be satisfied if they were given one-half of the money appropriated by the supervisors, so as to hold their fair in Los Angeles during the winter. If necessary they would also guarantee a $15,000 bond, and if necessary raise $1500 more to make it a success. portant as the agricultural. He did not

He had read the list of the various committees appointed the day previous to attend to the midwinter fair work, and he had not seen the name of a single merchant among them. In fact, the merchants had been ignered.

ALL WANTED FRISCO. Mr. Gird replied that he had recently written to all of the leading growers of the section asking for their opinions in regard to the best place for holding the fair. They were unanimously in favor of going to San Francisco this winter. In view of the fact that the people who made the displays did not want the fair in Lorangeless. in Los Angeles, the action of the Mer-chants' association was certainly a little

Mr. Sheward replied that he was not in the least discouraged. If the people knew there was to be a fair here, there would be plenty of exhibits.

Mr. McKoon said that he had always found it easier to take his box of or-anges to the people to look upon than to bring the crowds to the oranges. They should go where the crowds were. That was the best way to advertise themselves and the crowds would certainly be at San Francisco.

Mr. Sheward insisted that whatever else might be done they proposed to hold a fair in this city. The money appropriated should not be sent out of this section and put into the pockets of San

NEW LIGHT ON THE SUBJECT. Mr. Ingraham called Mr. Sheward's attention to the fact that the money was appropriated for premiums which would Mr. Slauson added that the people with whom the local committee had treated a month ago had grown much greater now.

MR. FRANK WIGGINS.

Mr. Forman then introduced the subject of Mr. Frank Wiggins' acceptance of the position of superintendent of the athlit. After some general talk, Mr.

Wiggins stated that he had accepted the late for them to begin to protest and view of such an intention on the part of Object.

Col. C. H. Hance stated that while the merchants had the best interests of the section at heart and were willing to do everything to the advantage of the section they thought that if they could get even a small part of the fund appropriated by the roard of supervisors they would have an attractive fair here this winter. It was not their desire to oppose the midwinter fair, however.

MR. SLAUSON TAKES A HAND. short discussion followed, when Mr. Slauson arose and said to the committee of mercnants:

"If you gentlemen have the interests of the county at heart, you are with us, if you have selfish interests, you are not with us. I have to learn," he continued, "of the first public move the Merchants' association have made. It is organized for your own protection and interests."

The various members of the association present denied this statement; but Mr. Slauson, turning to Major Furrey, who had just entered the hall, demanded if he had not said. "He would have nothing to do with the midwinter fair and was not in favor of it." Did you not, Mr. Furrey?

"Yes, sir; I did, personally."

Mr. Sheward still said that they were willing to let the people take the half of the money, so long as the Merchant's association got the other half.

OIL ON THE TROUBLED SEAS. Judge Silent prevailed upon Mr. Slauson to resign the floor and spoke at some length upon the proposition of holding the two fairs, one in San Fran-cisco and the other in Los Angeles. There was, he thought, a popular de-mand that one should also be held here, mand that one should also be held here, and Los Angeles was certainly-patriotic enough to raise a sufficient purse to hold a fair in this city, too. He stated that Mr. Sheward was mistaken when he had said that the merchants had been ignored by those in charge of the midwinter project in the city. The committee had visited every one at the start, and if they had not called oftener upon the merchants it was because they were occupied with the various duties were occupied with the various duties of business. They had also interviewed of business. They had also interviewed various organizations throughout the city, and had they known of the association they would surely have communicated with them.

The interests of the Los Angeles merchants had been as carefully looked after as any others, declared Mr. Newberry. The committee had given great thought to the subject and it was through the to the subject and it was through the transportation committee that the crowds who were to bring their wares would be brought to the city. THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Mr. Lankershim then explained the position of the chamber of commerce in regard to the removal of the citrus fair to San Francisco.

He said that at first they had been in favor of holding the citrus fair in Southern California, but at the recent meetings they had found out that they could not influence the growers to remain here, so it was decided to try to get the legislature to compel the people to hold it in Southern California in the future. The Merchants' association should not think that the chamber had caused the removal of the citrus fair to San Francisco.

Mr. Sheward said that they were liberal minded men and that they wanted one-half of the money to help their fair along, and then they would be perfectly willing to go in heart and soul and work for the success of the midwinter Major Furrey, the president of the association, stated that it was not opposed to the midwinter fair, but he did not see why Los Angeles people should spend money to help build up San Francisco.

A BIG SUCCESS. Mr. Wendell Easton, chairman of the financial executive committee of the midwinter fair, was introduced and briefly addressed the meeting upon the benefits Southern California will receive from the fair.

He stated that the present trouble in this city was similar to what had been experienced in San Francisco. The masses had been in favor of the fair, while the merchants were dead against it. Instances were given, however, where these firms came around all right and joined in supporting the project. The fair is going to be a success, and Southern California wants to get in

He referred to the notable lack of hotel accommodations in this city. Every place in the entire country he de-clared would be filled to overflowing with people for six months. It is not a question of whether you are going to get your share of the business, but how you are going to handle it when it comes here. If they wanted to support the two fairs, all right, but try the one here all of the six months.

"HARRY" JUMPS IN TOO. Mr. H. T. Hazard suggested that a vote be taken upon whether or not the citrus fair be held in San Francisco. The chair ruled that this was hardly within the office of the meeting.

Mr. Gird added that he had called the meeting for the purpose of hearing the people express their views upon the matter, and that he was fully satisfied. STRAIGHTENING IT OUT.

Mr. Siegel said that there was a misunderstanding between the association and the midwinter fair people. What the former wanted was a sort of floral fair similar to the Santa Barbara dispiay. If the citrus growers refused to exhibit, they could hardly expect to have that kind of a show.

Mr. Hardison asked Mr. Siegel if, in RIVERSIDE, Dec. 5, 1893.

Mr. Gird asked if the Southern California association would take the management of the citrus fair in San Francisco. From what could be learned it was caused by a gasoline or coal oil stove in the room occupied by cither Miller or Gromes.
