A Restraining Order—Case Revived—Court News

A Basque shepherd named Martin Iribarren is in despair at finding that he is a married man.

He is only a cow-milker, speaks, in addition to his own language, only a little Spanish, and claims that his wife, under the law, got the "bulge" on him and married him while he was drunk and knew nothing about it.

It appears that Iribarren had been carrying on an intrigue with Chona, and as the latter could not extort any money from him she ascribed the fact not to his poverty, but to his stinginess.

On Monday last he had occasion to visit the office of J. Marion Brooks, the well known attorney, and Chona accompanied him. She wanted him to take her into the court house and show her around, but he refused.

Wiesendanger against McFarland is an old case and is now on trial in department three before Judge Pierce. Wiesendanger claims that he and McFarland owned large tracts which they subdivided and sold to the public.

amounts of money by means of certain lands palmed upon her as good fruit and agricultural land. Later she discovered they were "wild cats" of the most decided character. Some were perched on mountain peaks and others in rocky river beds, and all absolutely worthless. She and her mother were brought almost to penitence as they went through the machinations of Attorney Shinn. But Miss Reubens is a woman, apparently of most dogged courage, for she has pursued her case through the courts, despite continuances galore and all the technicalities of delay. Now, if reform speaks truly, she is to get relief rather than let the whole matter be ventilated in the court room.

The dull routine of official work was very pleasantly disturbed yesterday morning in the office of the county assessor.

The employees resolved themselves into a surprise party and when opportunity offered "held up" Theodore Summerland, county assessor, and presented him with a very handsome gold hunting watch, chain and diamond ring.

The ladies in the copying department had provided ice cream and a variety of cake, and these delectables were done full justice to before the business of the office resumed its wonted groove.

The watch which was presented is a Howard movement, 14-carat gold and fifty-three pennyweights in weight, and the two other cases are velvet finished and without adornment of any kind. Inscribed on the inner case are the words: "Presented to Mr. Theodore Summerland by his employees in the city assessor's office July 1st, 1936."
