THE TURKS ADVANCING

While Greeks Continue to Retire

PHARSALOS OCCUPIED

Orders Issued for Advance on Domokos

KING GEORGE IS IN DANGER

GREEK ROYALTY INSULTED ON THE STREET

The Powers Ready to Mediate With Turkey, But Greece Declines to Accept Mediation

Associated Press Special Wire.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE TURKISH ARMY IN THESSALY, PHARSALOS, May 6.—(Delayed in transmission.)

The Turkish army tonight is bivouacking in the eighteen villages surrounding Pharsalos, captured by the Greeks.

The battle began at 9 o'clock in the morning. After skirmishes by the advance posts the Greek forces opened fire with great precision. The Turks rushed forward exposing themselves to the Greek fire with the greatest sang froid. The Greeks then made a fatal error in leaving the commanding position which they occupied and retiring upon the plain which was commanded on all points by four batteries which were brought into action as soon as the Greeks left the hills. The scene which followed was both interesting and cruel. The Greeks from all parts of the plain were converging toward a stone bridge spanning the river which was the only means of getting over. The mass of humanity at this point was constantly growing when the roar of the Turkish artillery began. The Turks obtained the exact range of the enemy and shell after shell fell and exploded in the midst of the fugitives. The havoc created by the shrapnel was terrible. Gradually, however, through the confusion, fire the greater part of the Greeks crossed the river.

The Turks who were then covering the plain like bees met with strong resistance while attacking Valasi, the Greeks from hidden points opening a furious fire. In the face of this the Turks advanced with marvelous temerity and captured the village not so much by force of arms as by the fear which their splendid insolence inspired the enemy. Owing to the fact that it was not yet decided to commence the decisive engagement until tomorrow the Turkish division intended to take the enemy in flank only, and arrived on a half hour before the close of the combat today having marched thirty miles.

The Greek guns, while they opened well, ended badly, while ours were served better than usual.

The Turkish attack on Vassili was made without any previous plan. The men were ordered to capture the place, and they advanced quietly, shooting as though hunting. The Greeks maintained a withering fire. I saw a Turk wounded in the leg advancing to the attack on all fours.

The correspondent of the Associated Press is writing this dispatch in the midst of the bivouacking of the Turkish headquarters. The general and his staff officers at the same time are forming a little group around a lantern, studying the war maps for tomorrow's operations.

The Turks captured a mountain battery and a number of mules, a great quantity of ammunition and provisions and the personal effects of the Greek princes, Constantine and Nicholas.

ADVANCE ORDERED. CONSTANTINOPLE, May 7.—Orders have been telegraphed to Edhem Pasha to push on to Domokos immediately.

ADVANCE ON VOLO. LONDON, May 7.—A dispatch to the Times from Velatino dated at noon yesterday says: The Turkish troops have reached the outskirts of Volo. As yet there is no confirmation of the rumor that the town has already fallen but in any case its capture is only an affair of a few hours, as the defenses on the land side are very feeble.

A portion of the Greek forces has retreated by the coast road to Almyros, from which point it will probably be conveyed by sea to Lamia, and rejoin the rest of the army at Domokos.

STILL RETREATING. PHARSALOS, May 7.—An engagement began early today near Velatino, and lasted several hours, the Greeks being finally beaten back. They have retreated upon Volo, sharply pursued by the Turks.

FOREIGN AID ASKED. VOLO, May 7.—The consuls have decided to ask the foreign warships to land detachments, and have promised to protect the town.

WILL BE NO FIGHT. ATHENS, May 7.—The Greek fleet at Volo has been instructed not to hinder the advance of the Turks in order to save the town from destruction.

Gen. Smolenski's artillery, engineers and some cavalry have proceeded to Almyros by sea.

Crowds of volunteers continue to arrive here, and 2000 Italians, led by Ricotti Garibaldi, left tonight for the frontier.

ROYALTY'S DANGER. LONDON, May 7.—The Rome correspondent of the Daily Mail says: Private news from Athens which has escaped censorship shows the position of royalty here to be more perilous than ever. The members of the royal family rarely leave the palace and their portraits have been withdrawn from public view.

When the queen and princesses visit the hospitals they are openly insulted in the streets. The palace is watched by revolutionary agents, lest their majesties should attempt to flee from the country.

FINANCIAL FEARS

BERLIN, May 7.—The Lokal Anzeiger says the king of Greece has formally asked the mediation of the emperor of Russia. It asserts that the question of abdication turns on financial considerations.

When King George came to the crown it was agreed that if deposed he should have an allowance of $24,000 yearly, but only one-third of that amount if he should abdicate.

GREEK EXPULSION

LONDON, May 7.—A dispatch to the Times from Constantinople says: Today (Friday) the ambassadors protested to the porte against the large number of expulsions of Greek subjects. The porte replies that the purpose of the expulsions is to purify Constantinople and other sea ports of Greek traffic that has accumulated under extra territorial privileges, and denies that any useful persons have been expelled, although admitting that executive zeal may sometimes be mistaken.

IN THE COMMONS

LONDON, May 7.—In the house of commons today in the committee of supply on the eastern crisis, the member William S. Robinson, Liberal, moved to reduce the salary of the marquis of Salisbury, the premier and minister for foreign affairs by £500, for the purpose of raising a debate on the eastern question.

After several Liberal members had criticized the action of the government in the withdrawal of the Turkish secretary for the foreign office, George N. Curzon, warmly defended Great Britain for her part in the concert, and blamed the provocation of the Greeks, saying that the attitude of the Christians in Crete was due to the presence of the Greek forces. Mr. Curzon further said that the withdrawal of the Turkish troops in Crete would be the prelude to a massacre of the Mussulmans, compared with which the Armenian massacres would sink into insignificance.

Continuing, Mr. Curzon remarked that the day the Turks withdrew would be the dawn of brighter prospects for Crete.

Regarding affairs in the parliament, Mr. Curzon said that there were few persons who did not know on which side the provocation rested, but, he added, the chastisement had been so terrible that he would not say any more on the subject. The Turks, he asserted, had exercised considerable self-restraint in the capture of the town, and the powers had carried their conciliatory attitude toward the Greeks almost to the point of weakness. They now express their willingness to mediate with Turkey if Greece will express her willingness to accept mediation.

The motion to reduce the salary of the Marquis of Salisbury by £500, introduced in order to bring about a debate on the eastern question, was then rejected by a vote of 169 to 63.

OFFICIAL REPORTS

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Minister Terrell at Constantinople, under date of yesterday, cables the state department that a telegram has been received from Edhem Pasha stating that he captured Pharsalos yesterday morning and the Greeks were pursuing the Greek army to Domokos. The mountain passes below Domokos could be easily defended, but it is reported that the Greek army is greatly demoralized, and that it will offer but slight resistance, if any, to the advance of the Turks. The Turkish legation has received a dispatch from Constantinople supplementing that of last night, announcing the occupation of Pharsalos.

It says: "Today at dawn (Thursday) the imperial troops having attacked the enemy located at Pharsalos, who had in part commenced to fly during the night, whipped them and took possession of the town. The cavalry division pursued the enemy on the road to Domokos, and Khari Pasha's division has been ordered to proceed in that direction. The Helles left at Pharsalos ammunition and provisions."

WILL DIE FIRST

ATHENS, May 7.—It is said positively that if the powers insist upon the withdrawal of the Greek troops from Crete as a condition of mediation, Greece will reply that she prefers war even to extermination.

The government has decided to recall twenty-five officers and two companies of sappers from Crete.

Evening: The intervention communications from the powers have not yet been received. The Greek government has notified the powers that the Greek fleet has established an effective blockade of the coast of Epirus.

WILD RUMORS AFLOAT

NEW YORK, May 7.—A special to the Journal from Athens says: There is great depression in Athens because of the retreat of the Greek army at Domokos, notwithstanding the recent victory. Many wild rumors are afloat.

Scoutmaster, Minister of Foreign Affairs, in an interview, stated that the Ministers were not discouraged by the position, as the Greek troops had held their own at all points against odds of nearly three to one, there being 65,000 Turks to 25,000 Greeks in the two lines. He said the order for retreat was given after a council of war had been held here, to prevent the Turks from being able to attack the Greeks in the flank, which their numerical superiority made possible. The commanders have no doubt of being able to hold their present positions indefinitely. The wounded men, arms and ammunition, were transported back in perfect order. The strategic point of removal of Colonel Vassos from Crete was a preliminary to the withdrawal of Greek troops, he replied: "It has nothing to do with it. It was considered that his presence was required here on the frontier. The withdrawal of troops from Crete is not under consideration by the council."

The Minister refused any information as to the action of the great powers. Your correspondent finally asked: "May the policy of your government be described as one of war or peace?"

He replied: "As we are at war, ours must naturally be a war policy, but the object of war is peace."

BROKEN DOWN

COPENHAGEN, May 7.—The Athens correspondent of the Politiken reports that he has interviewed an aid of King

George who says: "Since the loss of Larissa the Greeks have totally broken down. They have no equipment, neither food nor tents. They have to sleep in the open in the coldest nights. If Greece obtains even a trifling success she will sue for peace."

BLOCKADE BEGUN

LONDON, May 7.—A dispatch to the Daily Chronicle from Athens says: Colonel Manos wires from Arta that the Turks have begun a wholesale massacre of the inhabitants in the interior of Epirus. Almost all the inhabitants of the village of Kanvarina have been murdered. A few only escaped to the mountains. From other parts women are arriving at Arta in the most miserable condition, begging protection for their husbands and children who are being murdered by the enraged Turkish troops. Many of these poor creatures have gone mad. Many are unable to articulate a single word, others relate unspeakable atrocities.

"The blockade of the coast of Epirus will begin at 6 o'clock Saturday morning (today). Both Greek squadrons have been ordered there for that purpose. Gen. Smolenski's brigade has been ordered to join the main army at Domokos. The Greek losses during the fighting at Velatino yesterday are estimated to have been over 300."

GERMAN ACTION

LONDON, May 7.—It is stated here that Germany still clogs the negotiations for mediation by the powers by insisting upon the evacuation of Crete and the unconditional acceptance of Greece of such terms as the powers approve.

The correspondent of the Daily News at Athens says: It is persistently rumored that a cabinet crisis is impending. Mr. Ralli and his colleagues advocate energetic preparations to continue the struggle, while the king desires to avoid further bloodshed.

AFTER THE BATTLE

LONDON, May 7.—The Times prints the following dispatch from Velatino, via Athens:

"The expected battle began at 6:30 yesterday morning (Thursday) at this point and at Cynosephale and a little later above Aivali and Pharsalos. The positions were as follows: Velatino and the main Cynosephale chain were held by the Greeks. The plain to the westward and the gray ridges jutting out between Cynosephale and Velatino were held by the Turks.

"The Greeks had three batteries of artillery and the Turks four. Early in the morning a well-directed Greek artillery fire prevented the advance of the Turkish infantry. By 1:30 artillerists were being very heavy on both sides, but maintained their position. At 10:30 a Turkish battery behind Konari began firing shrapnel and the Greeks soon began to lose ground. A hot artillery and musketry fusillade was kept up until about noon, when the Greeks on the big commenced to retreat in orderly fashion, but at a double quick. The Turks were not firing at them and were apparently ignorant of their success.

"The irregulars tried in vain to assist the Greeks by firing at the advancing Turks, and, in fact, throughout the engagement they were practically valueless.

"At 12:45 p. m. the Turks attacked the big hill with musketry and shell fire. I and another correspondent received a volley and five shells fell very close to us, besides shrapnel whistling overhead. Several shots reached the road beyond, assigned probably to prevent the Greeks from sending reinforcements to their left, where the Turks were rapidly ascending the hill.

"The Greek batteries on the right were now useless and almost silent and the Turks on the Larissa road made no attempt to attack them.

"At 12:45 p. m. the attack on the right of Cynosephale became severe. The Greeks there were in full retreat, the irregulars fleeing in all directions. At 2 o'clock, the long line of Greek infantry was retreating, the skirmishers forming into companies and then falling into single file.

"I hear that the retreat from Cynosephale began somewhat earlier and the retreat from Pharsalos towards Domokos earlier still. Despair was doubtless running down the line from left to right and influencing the result. The railway was completely abandoned and the Pnyrophli station deserted. At 3 o'clock the bones retreated on Akitsi hill, and the remainder of the eastern infantry to Almyros. The Turks burned the village of Delitzi.

"During the morning the foreign legion entered the engagements, probably between Pharsalos and Aivali. The Turks were seen to have driven back the Greeks along the line extending from Pharsalos to Aivali, turning the flank of the Velatino division at Cynosephale and rolling up the Greeks in two retreating masses.

"The Turks won chiefly because they had field guns, whereas the Greeks had only mountain guns.

"The former men showed their tactical superiority by making a strong attack near the Cynosephale, where the Greeks were weak and without artillery. Two of the chief Turkish batteries were outside the Greek range and the Turks seemed to have good sheltering rifle pits. The Greek infantry stood their ground well under the main attack, especially along the center of the line of rifles. Many shells burst around them and overhead.

"General Smolenski's right wing was much stronger and could easily have held its position had not the left collapsed. The Greeks at Domokos and Almyros will probably join forces at Lamia and go together by a new road to Mustapha Bey Pasha, where the next great battle should occur, though I am officially informed that a stand will be made at Domokos. Thermopylae will doubtless be left to the fleet. The Cynosephale was the main strategic point of battle. The number of casualties is unknown, but in the early part of the day it appeared to be small."

VASSOS EMBARKS

COLOGNE, May 7.—A dispatch to the Kolnische Zeitung from Canea says that Col. Vassos and five officers have embarked on an Italian torpedo boat for Greece.

TURKISH BARBARITY

LONDON, May 8.—A dispatch to the Morning Post from Lamia says: "On the Greeks withdrawing from Velatino, a Turkish battery which had advanced unobserved from the further side of the railway, suddenly shelled the train conveying the wounded and another which had just arrived from Volo. Five shells fell exceedingly close before the train with the wounded. The spectators and
