CORRESPONDS CLOSELY WITH DETECTIVES

Senator E. J. Emmons, one of the accused, was called to the stand by Attorney Cator.

Senator Simpson, one of the investigating committee, moved that District Attorney Seymour be allowed to proceed to state his legal reasons.

Senator Simpson, one of the investigating committee, moved that District Attorney Seymour be allowed to proceed to state his legal reasons.

If the charges were true, he said, they warranted imprisonment in the penitentiary for the guilty ones.

Seymour Arouses Applause He implored the committee to heed his request and said the eyes of the state were on the committee.

Applause again greeted Seymour's impassioned remarks.

On motion of Senator Simpson, the committee then decided to refuse to allow the senators to go on the stand until they had reported the matter to the whole senate tomorrow morning.

Chairman Belshaw then said that he would clear the senate chamber of all spectators unless the demonstration ceased.

Jordan Is Called Attorney McNab called the attention of the committee to the fact that Joseph Jordan was present and was willing to testify.

Wanted to See Money Passed When Tichenor told Jordan that he would have to see him (Jordan) pass the money, Jordan said it occurred to him that he might pay the money without telling the four senators that they were being watched while the money passed.

Failed to Keep Appointment "I slipped up on the meeting and was not around at the appointed time, but toward midnight I met Tichenor at the Golden Eagle hotel."

the truth on the stand. He said it was to the interest of clean government that corrupt legislators should be shown up, and that if Jordan would now tell the truth he believed he should be permitted to do so, and that every man and woman in California should take him by the hand and help him to live down the past.

Cator and the other attorneys for the four accused senators jumped to their feet and tried to cut Seymour short, but he finished amid the hammering of Belshaw's gavel.

he had paid Wright and French at the appointed place, Tichenor said:

"Well, it's all right if you paid them." Then Jordan, who had received only $150 for his services, asked Tichenor for the exact $100 that was coming to him.

Tichenor went away to get this, and shortly after French came in. Jordan said he told French he had some money for him and asked him to come around with him to the Irish Tavern.

The two started and Jordan said he passed his hand containing the roll of greenbacks across French's chest. French put up his hand and took the money and put it in his pocket.

Jordan, according to his confession, then went back to meet Tichenor, and about midnight received from the detective $100 in greenbacks for himself.

He had a bottle of wine with Tichenor at the Capitol hotel across from the Golden Eagle, and then the two parted.

"Bunkers Had Kick Coming" "The next day," said Jordan, "I met Senator Bunkers and he had a kick coming. He said that his roll of greenbacks was $50 short."

"I don't know how that is, but I still have Senator Wright's money in my pocket. I will count that and see if there is $50 extra in his roll. I then counted the roll and it contained just the $350. This was the only roll of the four that I counted."

I took Tichenor's word as to the correctness of the amounts. I told Bunkers I would speak to Grange for him about the shortage."

That same day, according to Jordan, he met Senator Wright and made an appointment to meet him at the Irish Tavern, a saloon frequented by politicians on Seventh street, about two blocks from the Golden Eagle.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon he met Wright in the tavern and told him to go into the lavatory and he would there pass him his share of the money.

Wright went into the lavatory as Jordan directed; Jordan followed, and there passed the roll of greenbacks to the senator.

Jordan gave his testimony in a husky, low voice which was hardly stronger than a whisper. Profound stillness prevailed, however, and notwithstanding his testimony was not audible at a great distance from where the committee sat, no one left the senate chamber but stayed to catch every possible word.

Questioned as to Deal When Jordan finished his uninterrupted story, which took just one hour in telling, he was questioned by Senator Simpson and Chairman Belshaw as to the arrangements that had been made with the four senators in consideration for their receiving this money.

"Did you have an understanding with Senators Emmons, Bunkers, French and Wright as to what services, if any, they were to render the building and loan associations mentioned in consideration for the payment of this money?" asked Belshaw.

"Yes," answered Jordan. He then went on to say that he had arranged most of the details of the transaction with Senator Harry Bunkers, whom he met in San Francisco while he (Jordan) was negotiating with Clarence Grange.

Continuing he said: "I spoke to Senator Bunkers in San Francisco and mentioned the Renters' association, the Pacific States, and the Phoenix company's as the ones desiring immunity. I made nearly all the arrangements with Bunkers at his home in the city. Bunkers wanted $500 apiece for the senators, but Grange would not give more than $350 apiece to the senators and $250 for myself."

"I spoke to the other three senators about the companies that desired immunity from unfavorable investigation and mentioned the Renters, the Pacific States and the Phoenix, which is Grange's company. I told Grange on the strength of my conversation with Bunkers that the senators were willing to protect the three associations named for the price stipulated, but that the Continental Building and Loan association could not get in on the deal unless they paid at least $10,000."

Sensors Wright and Bunkers sat only a few feet from Jordan as he was telling the story of the bribery. Wright's pale, set face twitched, and Bunkers, red in the face, squirmed in his seat when Jordan came to that part of the story which related to the passing of the money to him.

"I have that little package for you," Jordan said, he was his words when he approached Bunkers near the popcorn stand at the corner of Seventh and K streets. Bunkers had just returned from an automobile ride and had an overcoat on. "All right," was Bunkers' answer to Jordan.

"I will shake hands with you and pass the money that way," said Jordan. "Drop it in My Pocket" "No, don't do that," answered Bunkers, "drop it into my coat pocket."

Jordan did as he was told. When the members of the committee were through questioning Jordan, Attorney Cator arose, and on behalf of the four accused senators, said that he would cross-examine the witness tomorrow night. The stenographer was ordered to transcribe Jordan's testimony so that the attorneys could have it in time to look over before the investigation begins tomorrow.

The committee then adjourned until 8 o'clock tomorrow night. Jordan's testimony, while not entirely unexpected, came as a sudden dramatic surprise. It took the committee and the members of the senate, who were attending the inquiry, off their feet.

GERMANY ON TOP IN TURKISH DEAL

CULMINATING TRIUMPH OF LONG NEGOTIATIONS

Ottoman Empire Decides in Favor of Teutonic Competitors, but Frenchmen Hope for a Change of Heart

By Associated Press. CONSTANTINOPLE, Feb. 8.—Germany's victory in capturing the contract for the rearmament of the Turkish artillery threatens to result in a serious disturbance of France-Turkish political relations.

The French ambassador here, M. Constans, proposes to leave Constantinople soon for Paris to consult with Foreign Minister Delcasse. Meanwhile the ambassador has informed the Turkish government that the French market is closed to any Turkish loan.

Tewfik Pasha, the Turkish foreign minister, tried to compromise the matter, offering to settle the Syrian railway question in a manner satisfactory to the French claimants and to purchase military equipment to the amount of $2,500,000 in France.

The ambassador, however, demanded the expenditure of $6,000,000, being one-third of the value of the new armament, with French gun factories and the complete satisfaction of French demands regarding the railroads. These terms the ambassador declared to be final and, not having received a reply on February 6, informed the Turkish government that he refused to continue the negotiations.

As a result of this notification the Ottoman bank withdrew its proposals for the projected loan and notified the minister of finance, Reshad Pasha, that it would not entertain any request of the government for advances. The Deutsche bank then came to the Porte's aid with an offer to assist the treasury.

The Germans are thus, for the moment, in complete possession of the financial field and an trade has already been promulgated ordering the purchase of all the new guns from German factories; but it has been decided only to rearm sixty batteries at present, instead of 142 as originally proposed.

CONGRESS HEARS ELECTORAL VOTE

RATE LEGISLATION PROVOKES HEATED DEBATE

Democrats and Republicans Both Claiming Credit for the Measure—President Would Have Made It Stronger

By Associated Press. WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Although the result of the presidential election was known early on the evening of November 8, it was not until today, when the senate and house met in joint session, that Theodore Roosevelt and Charles W. Fairbanks were officially declared to be elected president and vice president respectively for four years beginning March 4, 1905.

This function of congress attracted to the house chamber, where the electoral vote was canvassed, an immense gathering, prominent among the audience being Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Alice Roosevelt, the president's sister, Mrs. Cowley, and Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks, wife of the vice president-elect. The whole proceeding consumed exactly fifty minutes, thereby establishing a new record in counting the electoral vote.

Freight Rates Regulation WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The house today again met an hour earlier than usual, the subject of the regulation of freight rates still being under consideration to the exclusion of all other business.

Today's discussion was opened by Mr. Thayer of Massachusetts, who congratulated the president, the Republicans and the majority of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce for adopting what he declared to be a peculiarly Democratic measure. After characterizing the Hepburn bill as being also a Democratic measure he charged that it had been pulled down at the instance of the president as not meeting with his approbation.

The Hepburn bill, he said, no more resembled the Townsend bill, which represented the position of the administration, than a jack rabbit does a race horse.

Mr. Esch of Wisconsin, who assisted in framing the Townsend bill, summed up the arguments for and against that bill up to the present time. Some, he said, had regarded it as the most important legislation since the rebellion, while other had contended it amounted to nothing. Such extreme views he held to be indicative of the fact that the bill was what it was claimed to be—a compromise.

Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio, ridiculed the Democrats for their claim to credit for rate legislation. He provoked laughter when he declared that "following our camping tonight where we camped last night, and begging to be taken on board, is not a new policy or principle of the Democratic party."

The Hearst bill, he declared was as dead as Julius Caesar, having been slaughtered by a Democratic caucus.

Cat-o'-Nine-Tails Mr. James of New York, accused the president of taking the platform of the Democratic party, "that bears the bloody stain of Bryan's faithful feet," and holding it up to the people of the country. He cared not how much it was said that the Democrats were following the president. He knew that the soldiers of the United States followed the president gallantly at San Juan Hill, "but," he added, "no more, sir, than the Democracy will follow him when he charges the Herrinians, the Vanderbilts, the Cassatts and the Hills in this country of wealth."

The Democrats applauded Mr. Heflin of Alabama when he said that William J. Bryan, the Daniel of Democracy, had advocated the present legislation before the people of the country. In a characteristic speech, Mr. Gayles of Tennessee, who was the sole Democrat who voted with the Republicans on the adoption of the rule, said he did so because he found them right on the question, even though they grieved on by the president who applied cat-o'-nine-tails to their backs."

Rooseveltian Strenuosity WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—While President Roosevelt approves of the Esch-Townsend railroad freight rate bill pending before the house of representatives, it is understood today that he would like to have incorporated in it stronger provisions relating to private car lines. Representative Babcock of Wisconsin had a talk with the president today about the pending legislation. He holds the same views regarding private car lines as the president. They discussed the bill for some time. Senator McComas of Maryland also talked with the president about the pending railroad legislation.

The president is endeavoring to bring about action in the senate at this session on the rate question, hoping it may take up the Esch-Townsend measure when the bill reaches it.

DEFICIT STEADILY GROWS River, Harbor and Public Building Bills in Jeopardy Special to The Herald.
