Regarding the Trust

We wish to state that we are absolutely independent of the gigantic furniture trust of this city, no matter what any one says to the contrary, and as we are able therefore to make our prices to suit ourselves, of course the lowness of them is worth the while of all who have any interest in their pocket-books to investigate.

The Golden Rule

By Francis Murphy

The world's Redeemer gave us a new government and told us how we were to conduct ourselves and what our conduct should be to our neighbors, as well, and this is his statement:

"All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them, for this is the law and the prophets."

This declaration of law goes to the center of the heart of every man who seeks to know the right and is desirous of dealing justly and fairly with all men.

This declaration was equal to the Declaration of Independence. It was the mustard seed of the great republic where every man was enfranchised with personal responsibility in his dealings with his brother men. I think I can see our own blessed starry banner lifted up into the air by this glorious declaration.

There is a beautiful star in sight and its celestial radiance, is illuminating and inspiring mankind everywhere. No matter what may be the statute law governing municipalities and states and nations this law of the world's Redeemer stands supreme and is acknowledged by all men to be right and just and manly.

"All things whatsoever ye would," please do not forget that; "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them, for this is the law and the prophets." For this is a greater and a better and a juster law than the prophets ever gave to the people. This law faithfully adhered to would settle every dispute there is between contending parties, in his name, who is the author of this law and whose service is perfect freedom. Let us have courage to commence the practice of it.

There are differences of opinion regarding institutions in our midst. Now let us be tolerant, patient and manly. Let us keep the command of this blessed declaration that we shall do not unjust act to any man—that no foul words shall be spoken.

We have a great cause—a cause of human liberty, of peace on earth, of good will to all men, and we are shown how to maintain it by him, who is the prince of peace and the prince of parliamentarians. Every sweet word in the English language is for us. The weapons of our warfare must not be carnal.

Let us be patient workers with him who loved us and gave himself for us and gave us a new commandment that we should love one another, that we should serve one another, that the strong should bear the infirmities of the weak; that if a brother is ever taken in a fault, we, who are Christian, who justly declare that we are followers of Jesus Christ shall restore the erring brother in a spirit of meekness and loving gentleness lest we also be tempted and led astray. God be with you.

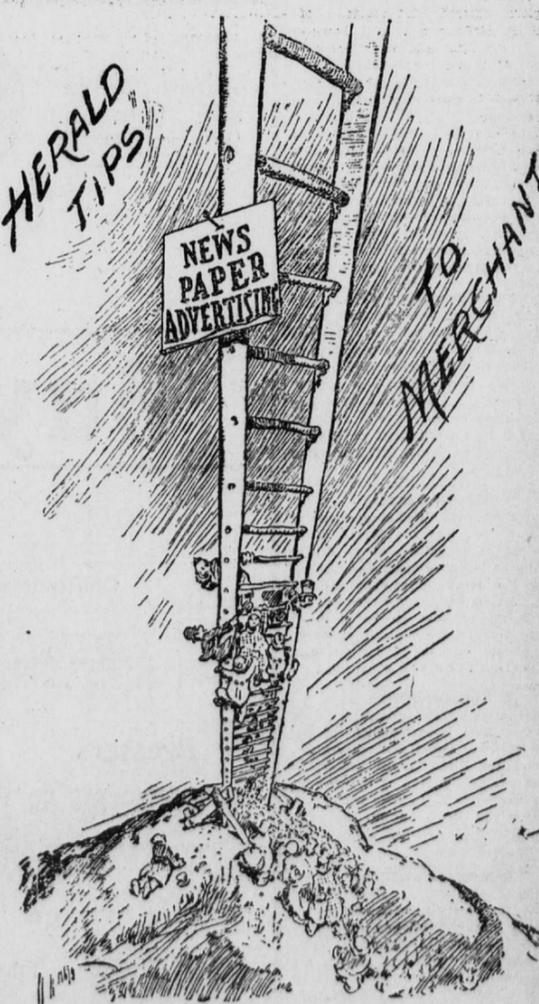

Barry to Repeat Lecture

"Port Arthur, a Monster Heroism," the illustrated lecture Richard Barry, the war correspondent, delivered before the Friday Morning club, will be repeated tomorrow evening in Simpson auditorium. Mr. Barry was the only American correspondent who witnessed the siege of Port Arthur, and his brilliant articles in many of the leading periodicals of the world have given him widespread fame. His lecture, which has been most successful in the east, attracted hundreds to the Woman's club house and, as many persons were turned away, Mr. Barry has been persuaded to speak in a larger auditorium. This will be his last appearance in Southern California, as he sails April 10 for Japan, where he will act as correspondent for the Century and Collier's.
