BUSINESS MAN IS WORSTED IN FIGHT

FATHER RESENTS ACCUSATION AGAINST SON

BATTLE IN DOWNTOWN STORE

Constable Cline and Douglas Dawson Engage in Fierce Personal Encounter in Letter's Private Office

An altercation between Constable William H. Cline of Justice Pierce's court and Douglas Dawson, manager for the W. H. Hoegge company, terminated in a personal combat between them in the private office of the latter yesterday morning and the manager is said to have fared badly at the hands of the constable.

A clerk employed in the store, by name of Germain, who is said to have been the primary cause of the trouble, was slapped by the constable after the affair with Dawson.

Cause of the Trouble

It is said that the trouble arose over certain charges made by Germain to Dawson regarding George T. Cline, son of the constable, who was formerly employed in the store. The charges made were to the effect that young Cline was $3 short in his settlements with the company for goods sold.

It was to secure a retraction of the charges and an exoneration of his son that the constable called upon Dawson yesterday, and it is said that the fight resulted from Dawson's refusal to sign a retraction, and an intimation that he believed the boy was guilty of the offense as charged.

Through some unfortunate misunderstanding Germain is said to have accused young Cline of having pocketed the amount received for a dog collar which he was alleged to have sold. Cline indignantly denied the allegation and gave an explanation, but ill feeling existed and Cline resigned, and his father and uncle tried to straighten out the affair.

Several times the constable visited Manager Dawson at his home and at his place of business, and yesterday morning decided to make a final settlement of the affair one way or another. He went to Hoegge's, accompanied by Justice Pierce, and the men were closeted for some time before shouts for help were heard from the manager's office, and Cline and Judge Pierce came out of the room and walked toward the door.

Cline's Story of the Fight

The following story of the encounter is told by Constable Cline: "I either wanted Manager Dawson to substantiate his allegation against my boy or to exonerate him. One of these two actions I thought due my son, as he is well known in this city and I could not suffer a smirch on his character unless it was substantiated.

"Yesterday, after Manager Dawson had failed to substantiate his charge, I went to him with Judge Pierce and we talked the matter over and Judge Pierce wanted to go to the bottom of the affair. I took a small document along which simply said that the charges against my son had no foundation and he was exonerated.

"I asked Manager Dawson either to make his charge good or sign the paper. He told me that he had gone into the matter as far as he wished, and started to read a letter, and then I slapped him and knocked him into his chair and pummeled him a little, but he cried for help and I stopped hitting him.

"Judge Pierce then pushed open the door and as I was walking out I saw Germain, who had started the trouble, and I called to him. He came to me and I slapped him in the face and that was the end of the trouble."

Dawson's Version

Mr. Dawson was seen last night and asked for his version of the affair. He said: "The attack upon me was wholly unwarranted and uncalled for and immediate steps will be taken to settle with the offenders.

"I employed Mr. Cline at the recommendation of one of my men. Mr. Cline seemed exceptionally bright and when rumors came to me that he was not acting right toward the firm I put the matter aside and still believed in him.

"Finally the matter was brought so forcibly to me that I called him to my office and gave him every chance in my power to settle the unfortunate affair. He made no settlement and when I at last spoke to him about it he asked me whether he had stolen anything and said that he would give me a check. I took the check and told him to sever his connection with the firm.

"He did so, and I sent for his relatives to explain the affair. Yesterday when his father had asked me to sign that document which, out of justice to myself and my employes I could not do, I turned to my work and the next second felt a tremendous crash on the back of my neck which sent my face to the desk before me.

"I was conscious of several more smashes before I fell to the floor. A doctor was summoned and I was unconscious for some time, but finally I recovered and was sent home. My physician said that the terrific blows on my spinal column would, upon anyone less vigorous or healthy, have caused paralysis.

"I have taken immediate steps for the settlement of this matter and the entire affair has been placed in the hands of competent attorneys. Action will be taken at once and the affair will be sifted to the bottom. We have the young man's check as his admission to me, and everything to the most extreme limit will be done to settle this outrage."

ROOMING HOUSE MAN CHARGED WITH BATTERY

WARRANT ISSUED FOR ARREST OF F. A. KING

Rebecca Corrao Alleges That He Beat Her When She Refused Him Admittance to Her Apartments to Serve Papers Upon Her

A warrant for the arrest of F. A. King, proprietor of a rooming house at 1400 Temple street, charging him with battery, was issued in the city attorney's office yesterday morning.

The complaining witness is Rebecca Corrao, who alleges that King, who is her landlord, used force in trying to enter her apartments yesterday, and that when she resisted him he struck her left hand with such force as to break several bones.

According to the story of Mrs. Corrao King called upon her to serve some papers regarding her rent. She says that her landlord demanded to see her husband and attempted to enter a room in which a lady friend of Mrs. Corrao was dressing. In an endeavor to prevent King's entering the room Mrs. Corrao says that she placed her hand upon the door and that he then struck her. King has not yet been arrested.

FORMER NEWSPAPER MAN CONVICTED OF VAGRANCY

SENTENCED TO SIX MONTHS' IMPRISONMENT

Judge Chambers Denied His Plea for Leniency, Believing His Cure of Drug Habit Could Be Effected Only by Term in Jail

Walter C. Kellogg, convicted of vagrancy, and an alleged victim of opium, cocaine and drink habits, presented a pathetic appearance in Judge Chambers' court yesterday morning as he appeared to receive sentence.

Kellogg was formerly a newspaper man and was considered by men in his profession to possess an unusually bright mind. It is said that domestic troubles, which terminated in a divorce court, preyed upon his mind and his alleged vices were acquired in efforts to drown his misery.

Kellogg begged for leniency, promising to seek employment and discontinue the use of drugs. Judge Chambers sentenced Kellogg to six months' imprisonment. He explained that he was doing it for Kellogg's good. He understood that Kellogg was sincere in his promises, but feared that he had not the power to deliberately call a halt on his downward career.
