SCOTT HOME WITH MONEY TO SPEND

DEATH VALLEY MINER TELLS OF EASTERN TRIP

DOG CAGED IN NEW YORK ZOO

Cowboy Croesus Estimates That the Journey Cost Him $17,500, and He Has a Fifty-Cent Belt and Necktie to Show for It

Walter Scott the inimitable, with a roll of bills which appears to be fully as large as when he started east a month ago, is once more in Los Angeles. The newsboys are glad, bell "hops" rejoice and there is a spirit of expectant good feeling at every former haunt of the redoubtable millionaire of the desert. "I scooted across the country fairly fast, boys," was the way he addressed several of his friends as soon as he had alighted from the train, "but I am expecting to go back to New York some time next October. I shall want to go in an awful hurry and I won't be able to start a couple of days early, so I am going to make it from Los Angeles to the far east in fifty-six hours. I started out with $37,000 and I have come back with $100,000, which is not so bad, is it?" His hearers thought it was fairly good. Scotty has to show for his $17,000 expenditures one fifty cent belt and a twenty-five cent necktie.

Word that he would reach Los Angeles on the Santa Fe limited at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon was noised abroad during the morning and when Scotty swung off the Pullman car in which he and his wife traveled from Chicago, there were a hundred of his old time friends at the station to tell him how they loved him.

Gains Ten Pounds

Older in experience and ten pounds heavier, but not changed otherwise, "Scotty" gave the glad hand to everyone who was able to get within reach of him.

There was the overcoat, the slouch hat, the blue flannel shirt and the red tie, not to mention a great deal of money, a portion of which found its way over the Hollenbeck bar as soon as Scott arrived there.

Mrs. Scott, in a black silk dress and with her face suffused with blushes, escaped the crowd by passing through the rear entrance of the Pullman and making her way to the waiting automobile in front of La Grande station.

The yellow dog was conspicuous by its absence. It is caged at the Central Park zoo in New York city. A shepherd dog, yellow in color and with no particular pedigree, was inveigled into accompanying Scotty from Chicago, but was left at Barstow. Scotty will take it with him on his trip across the desert within the next two days.

Scott pushed his way through the throng at the station and joined his wife in the automobile. He shook hands with the station master, the conductor, the negro porter, a newsboy, the matron at the station and a gray haired old woman who bowed her way through the crowd.

Is Given Ovation

At the Hollenbeck, where Scott has taken the best suite of rooms for himself and wife, he received an ovation when he started for his happy hunting ground, the bar.

"Beer for me, just plain beer," said the Croesus of Death valley, after a round of cheers which brought the drinks for all who could elbow their way into the barroom. He drew forth a roll of bills from his pocket, threw a $20 certificate on the bar and, while his friends were wetting their throats, he stole across the street to the National Bank of California. A newsboy sold him a paper for fifty cents and shouted for joy when the spendthrift told him to keep the change.

An hour later Scott walked down the street with a crowd of fifty street urchins at his heels.

"There are more cheap grafters in New York city than any other place on earth," was Scott's summing up of his views on the great metropolis. "People in the east got a flea in their ear that told them I was 'easy.' Well, that flea got his dates mixed," said Scotty, "because I'm not. Nobody gets me to spend money when I don't want to get rid of it.

"Now say, wouldn't I have been in a nice fix if some of those guys had separated me from my roll of greenbacks?"

"They have some pretty good hotels in New York. I stopped over at the Herald Square, the Hoffman house, the Park Avenue and the Waldorf-Astoria. I spent my money free like, but I guess I know where it all went. My wife and I gave $800 for charity and we did that because we thought the people needed it.

"What got me, though, was the way a couple of those detectives tried to bamboozle me. Me and my wife went down on the Bowery, when up steps a couple of detectives who were on my trail. 'Who's the woman you got along with you?' one of them asked. I said I was only slightly acquainted with her. 'Say,' says one of them, 'she's one of the biggest crooks in New York. Cut loose from her and we'll take you out and show you the real thing. That woman's been up in the police court two or three times in the last three months.' Has she? said I. Being it's my wife and she has been with me for a good many years, I guess I will take her word as to who she is.

"Another time, I was taking dinner with a woman in a New York restaurant. I had a $1000 bill which she had in her handbag. A bunch of geezers got next to it and they hung around to the outside. About 2 a. m. we waltzed out. I threw the hand bag to them and ducked for an automobile. You see I was wise, too, for when they were not looking, I simply squeezed on to the long green and put into my pocket, so that all they got was the bag and three pennies which it contained. On the whole, the New York police are a pretty good bunch.

"But, say, talk about Cincinnati. None of it for me. I was there for an hour. I did not even have time to spend any money. I got out of there as soon as I could. "In New York I visited Wall street and the board of trade. At the last place named they tried to tear my clothes off me. I lost my coat and a piece of my shirt, together with my red tie. I spent $400 in tips and other things and then made my 'getaway.' They were worse than a band of Apache Indians. I had lots of fun driving an auto around the town, as it was far more exciting sport than in Chicago.

Employs Bodyguard

"I took things pretty quietly in the Windy city. Been there a number of times, you know. Had two detectives with me while I was there and paid them $15 a day. They treated me pretty well. "No, I didn't buy a suit of tailor-made clothes, as the papers said. I sent for a tailor and told him to fix me up some 'glad rags' in four hours and I would pay him $10 an hour for his trouble. He said 'all right' and started in to measure me. I had never tried the deal before, but it did not seem to me that he was doing it right, so when he brought the clothes I took one look at them and says, 'nope, not for me.' Guess I have stepped into 'hand-me-downs' before. The seams and the patch in the back did not look good.

The fellow laughed and admitted I had him beat, so we had a drink together, but I did not take the clothes.

"While in Chicago I had a talk with Mr. Ripley, president of the Santa Fe. In talking of the accident near Gallup, when the special train ran 150 rail lengths along the ties and then got back onto the rails again, he said it was the most wonderful escape he had ever heard of in all his railroading career. I was riding in the cab at the time and it seemed as if the engine reared right up on its hind wheels.

Tips Train Crews

"On that run I gave every engineer and fireman $20 apiece. That is, with the exception of Engineer Gallagher, who went one minute behind the schedule. I found afterward that there was something wrong with his engine, so he has $20 coming to him from me. "Coming back I had about three minutes at Albuquerque, so I 'hiked' over to a game that was running. You ought to see the 'pickers' rubber when I planted my money and made my point three times running, to pick up a big bunch of money and get away with it before they had their eyes open. "In October, it's me for New York again, and I am going back to the desert. Mrs. Scott will remain in Los Angeles. She has a place on Hill street, where she likes to stay, and I am going to leave her there."

One of the friends to greet Scott yesterday when he stepped from the train was C. E. Shuey, a miner from Death valley, who has known the spendthrift for many years. "Scotty has a mine all right," he said, "and I guess he is making it pay pretty well." Scott made the rounds last night and demonstrated that if he had associated with penny counters for the past four weeks he had not learned the trick as he had plenty of money and spent it with the utmost freedom.

Silk Department. Coulter Dry Goods Co

Wholesale and Retail Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 5, 1905

Dear Madam:- In every city, East and West, there is one BEST Store for silks. In Los Angeles it's Coulter's--the "Silk Center" of the Pacific Southwest.

This establishment sells more silks than any other local concern; more than any other three houses between San Francisco and San Diego, outside of Los Angeles.

But what we are going to say is that our ANNUAL SALE of BLACK SILKS begins Monday morning; decidedly the most important trade event of the year.

Preparations for this sale have been conducted along broader lines than ever before--and we feel safe in promising the best values we have ever offered.

The fact that orders were placed months ago for many lines, enabling the mills to operate during the dull season, induced price concessions that would otherwise have been practically impossible to obtain. Other makers wanted money--and were glad to clean up their holdings at about actual cost of production.

These savings are responsible for the Extremely Low Prices (quality considered) which will prevail during this sale--ranging from 20 to 30 per cent under regular valuations.

Every wanted width and weave--in a variety of finishes. In Taffetas alone we will show from twelve to fourteen different qualities.

In conclusion: We trust to see you at the Silk Counter Monday, or as early thereafter as convenient.

Yours very respectfully,

COULTER DRY GOODS CO.

P. S. A complete list of prices will be published in Monday morning's papers.
