REJECT PLAN TO KILL THE DYING

PHYSICIANS AND MINISTERS SAY IDEA IS ABSURD

Proposition Advanced Before Meeting of Humane Society in East Meets With Little Favor in Los Angeles

Should injured person be conscious until death in case of trainwrecks and accidents? Has anyone a right to take life to alleviate suffering and save an individual from a few moments or hours of pain?

These questions are being discussed anew since the proposition of Miss Ann S. Hall of Cincinnati was made before the meeting of the Humane Society of Philadelphia yesterday. Miss Hall proposed a resolution legalizing the administration of anaesthetics to persons dying in agony in cases of railroad wrecks and those who are dying slowly from incurable diseases.

Clergymen Not Agreed: The clergymen differ in regard to the question, some saying that in the cause of humanity it might be wise. Others state that it would be absolutely against the laws of religion to either dim the intellect at the dying moments or in any case to put a person to death.

Dr. P. G. Cotter said: "An anaesthetic is a double-edged sword—all right when used properly and all wrong when used improperly. I wouldn't want to trust my life to an inexperienced person and I do not think it right to submit any human life to a deadly anaesthetic under such conditions. Morphine seems to be a more sensible remedy in such cases. In my experience I have found the majority of dying persons in no pain. If a limb is cut off in an accident and there is profuse bleeding, there is no pain. Death as a general thing is a painless proposition—more like going to sleep, and there seems to be no need of anaesthetics in such cases. I think the proposition of Miss Hall is absolutely unwarranted and one that common-sense people will not endorse. Often even skilled physicians think a person is about to die when it is not the case. If that is so, how is such a question to be decided by ignorant or perhaps inexperienced persons?"

Duty is to Prolong Life: "The duty of a physician is to prolong life and alleviate suffering," said Dr. Joseph King. "No human agency can tell until the patient is dead. Many people who look as though dying even to experienced eyes recover and are useful citizens. Much depends upon the vitality of the patient. Many times an injured person thinks himself mortally injured, when in fact it is not serious at all."

Croner Trout stated that he thought if Miss Hall had experienced the pains of neuralgia as bad as he himself had, she would not advocate such a law. He also stated that to his mind it was contrary to all religion. He said: "I do not think death is justifiable in any case. Why, a man might want that time in which to repent. I would rather suffer here a few minutes than in the long hereafter."

Plan Rightly Rejected: Rt. Rev. M. G. Harnett, V. G., was firm in his opinion that an anaesthetic should not be administered in cases where death seems imminent. He said: "I think the proposition was rejected with good sense. To a certain extent, eternity depends upon the condition of the soul at the hour of death. When I am called to a sick bed, I always urge the physicians not to administer drugs if there seems to be imminent danger. If God leaves a reason, it should be unimpaired by human agency. Even in extreme cases in train wrecks, I do not think it justifiable to put a person to death to alleviate suffering. I would consider such a person a murderer. Murder is justifiable only in one instance—capital punishment, when it is necessary for the very existence of society. It is against the rule of the Catholic church to administer an opiate at the hour of death. As no man has power over his own life, no more has he over that of his neighbor."

WEATHERMAN IS NOT EXCITED BY HATFIELD'S ULTIMATUM

Weather Observer Franklin is not at all excited because Charles M. Hatfield is going to let Jupiter Pluvius do his own rainmaking in Southern California this winter.

The alliance between Uncle Sam's weather prophets and Jupiter P. is of much long standing and on such a solid basis that one lone rainmaker, more or less, cannot disrupt it. Mr. Franklin has no fear that Hatfield can disturb the terms of the treaty which provides that Jupiter Pluvius shall make rain when he wants to, and Uncle Sam's weather prophets shall announce the fact when they discover it.

If Hatfield wants to enter Jupiter Pluvius' department it's all one to Mr. Franklin. Perhaps Hatfield can show the old rain god how to make rain with chemicals in an up-to-date American fashion, but the weather bureau has a suspicion that rain will continue to be made in the good old-fashioned way that prevailed long before atomic or molecular combinations were heard of. So if Hatfield has decided that he runs the risk of losing too much honor this winter by making rain with chemicals when plenty may be on tap from the old fashioned formula, the weather bureau is not at all excited over the fact.

Assistant Fuller thinks Hatfield has excellent intentions, irrespective of the hour of death. As no man has power over his own life, no more has he over that of his neighbor.

Inclined to Force Plan: In strong contrast to the views of Monsignor Harnett and those of Rev. Dr. Warren F. Day, pastor emeritus of the First Congregational church, Dr. Day said: "We do all we can for those who are about to die. This proposition is a dangerous thing, lest it should be abused. I see no reason why those in suffering in a wreck should not be given an anaesthetic. From a humanitarian standpoint, it is something worth looking at. In case a person is pinned beneath a wreck and a slow death by fire is imminent, I think an anaesthetic or even a pistol shot is justifiable. I should hate to do it, but from a humanitarian standpoint I should consider it justifiable."

TO ENTERTAIN EDUCATORS: Officials of the National Educational association, who will arrive Monday, special car over the balloon route to Santa Monica and the beaches that afternoon, returning in time for a reception in the rooms of the chamber of commerce at 4 o'clock. The following committee has been appointed to accompany the party on the trip and act as a reception committee at the chamber: W. J. Washburn, E. P. Clark, Walter Raymond, A. W. Skinner, C. C. Davis, J. O. Koepfl, Andrew J. Copp, Jr., A. E. Cass, W. C. Patterson, M. H. Sherman, James A. Foshaty.

rainfall this winter. He says that it is generally believed that there will be a heavy rain this winter because it is about time for a wet year to put in an appearance, but this argument has nothing certain about it, and it will be possible to tell whether the winter is a wet or dry one only when the rain has fallen and not before.

Perhaps Hatfield is right in saying that the rainfall this winter will be light. Perhaps Jupiter Pluvius has a light on his sleeve that the old god only plays in emergencies. Perhaps he is going to turn on the spigot neither more nor less than he has done in previous winters.

But the weather bureau does not know. The weather bureau does not know. Hatfields may come or go. Chemicals may be shot into the air or carefully kept in storage. People may subscribe for rain or lock up their safes with a shrug of their shoulders.

But when the rain falls the weather card up his sleeve that the old god only plays in emergencies. Perhaps he is going to turn on the spigot neither more nor less than he has done in previous winters.

But Hatfield or no Hatfield, the weather bureau will let the seasons take their accustomed course.

be administered in the most extreme cases." Rev. Robert McIntyre of the First Methodist church, thinks it impracticable. He said: "Where it is a clear case that there is absolutely no possibility of life being saved, then I think it justifiable, but not unless there is absolute proof. As a general thing, I do not approve of the plan."

Enthusiasm Grows and Votes Roll In. Popular Salesladies Contest the One Live Topic Among the Ambitious Ladies to Secure the Prizes. Interest is rife in all quarters of Los Angeles and the surrounding country. Everyone seems anxious to take a hand in determining who the five most popular salesladies are in Los Angeles. The contest has started with a burst of enthusiasm which has been unparalleled in the history of contests in this city, and why not? The prizes which the five successful will be awarded are ones that anyone will be proud of. The Grand Upright Kingsbury Piano, valued at $375.00, is without a doubt one of the finest creations of the kind and can be had in either oak or mahogany. The second prize, a pair of genuine diamond earrings, valued at $25, and the lady's diamond ring, valued at $150, as third prize, are ones that any lady of Los Angeles would be proud to possess. The fourth prize, a lady's tailor made suit valued at $100, and for the fifth prize a lady's tailor made suit valued at $50, are prizes that appeal to everyone who enters the contest. Now is the time to interest your friends and let them know you have entered the contest with the full determination to win. While the contest is in its infancy get among the people and your friends and relatives and tell them you are desirous of securing one of the prizes. If your name or that of your friend has not been entered do so at once, so it will appear in the announcement Sunday morning, when the names of the candidates will be printed. Nothing is easier than winning if you solicit the aid of your friends in helping you out. Of course, friends in helping you out. Of course, the best way of securing votes is by getting your friends to subscribe for the paper, thus getting the votes issued thereon. The other way of voting, namely, by clipping the coupon from The Herald, filling in the name of the lady whom you wish to vote for and bringing or sending to the contest department of The Herald, is not to be overlooked, as these coupons count up rapidly. The votes will be counted each day at 5 o'clock and the result printed in the morning paper, and votes polled after 5 p. m. will not be counted till the following day. The coupons clipped from the daily paper must be polled before expiration of date printed thereon, but votes issued on subscriptions may be held till the close of the contest. A question has arisen as to what ladies are eligible to compete in this contest. The contest is open to salesladies only, and any lady who is not employed in the capacity of a saleslady cannot enter her name. No one employed on this paper can enter and employees of this publication will be barred from voting. This does away with any chance of favoritism being shown and will be appreciated by every lady who has entered the contest. INSTRUCTIONS FOR VOTING. Enter the name of your favorite candidate in this contest at once. She may win one of the five prizes. Better still, get the young lady to enter her name and then vote for her. Those who get in on the start have the best chance of winning, so it is desirable that the names be entered as soon as possible. Candidates who enter the contest do not necessarily have to be subscribers to The Herald. Enter your name and your friends will do the rest. You will never know how popular you are until you have entered a contest of this kind. You will be surprised to see how rapidly the votes come in and what little effort is necessary to win one of these prizes. Get in on the start and encourage your friends to vote for you and the rest will be easy. The first announcement as to who the young ladies are who are competing in the contest will be made known Sunday, October 15. Any young lady who desires to enter the race may do so at any time during the next week or later, if desired. It is of great importance that those who are anxious to win one of these valuable prizes should enter the contest as early as possible, and get the benefit of every moment of the contest being of such a short duration. Get your name or that of your lady friend upon the list of competing candidates at once. Active voting commenced on Monday morning, October 9, at 3 o'clock, and the first announcement of candidates will be made in The Herald Sunday, October 15. After the first announcement of candidates and the counting of ballots the votes will be counted each day at 5 o'clock and the result printed in The Herald the next morning. There will be a short write-up in the paper each day from now until the close of the contest, and those who are interested can keep in touch with the contest and the competing candidates. Nine hundred dollars in prizes are to be given to the five most popular salesladies in Los Angeles, and it is left to the readers of The Herald and the friends of the contestants to determine who the lucky ones will be. Get in while the contest is young and vote for your favorite candidate. There will be plenty going before the close. Votes on subscriptions allowed as follows: 1 month's subscription to Daily Herald, 65 votes; 3 months' subscription to Daily Herald, 300 votes; 6 months' subscription to Daily Herald, 800 votes; 12 months' subscription to Daily Herald, 1700 votes.
